Mail Halted Across U.S.

Troops May Be Called

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The first postal strike in U.S. history spread coast to coast today amid spiralling escalations which are expected to result in President Nixon ordering the army to deliver the mail Monday morning.

Letter carriers in a dozen districts as far away as Los Angeles walked out after midnight in a chain reaction of illegal strikes touched off by the first work stoppage in New York city on Thursday.

While the wildcat walkouts spread, New York postal union leaders went to their membership this morning to outline a back-to-work agreement they hastily put together Friday with federal government officials but were shouted down at a raucous meeting of 6,000 postmen who re-affirmed their decision to strike.

Minutes later, at a press conference here, President Nixon warned he would not negotiate with illegal strikers and hinted he would call in the army.

NIXON HINTS FREEZE ON JET SALE TO ISRAEL

WASHINGTON — President Nixon hinted today he has decided not to sell Israel 50 more Phantom jet fighters—at the moment.

The official announcement will be made Monday by Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

The president carefully left his options open, however, noting that further sales might be made to Israel if Russia increases arms sales to the Arab nations. The U.S. decision would not halt the delivery of the remaining Phantom jets purchased in 1968 and delivered at a rate of four per month.

Teen-Age Girl Dies in Crash

An 18-year-old girl riding in the back of a camper truck died early this morning shortly after the vehicle hit a telephone pole on Rockland Avenue near St. Charles Street.

Barbara Thomas, 18, of 108-2065 Oak Bay Avenue, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 2 a.m., 15 minutes after the crash.

She is the third traffic fatality in the city this week, and the 12th in the area this year.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thomas, live at Cherry Creek, near Port Alberni.

Stephen Oare, 20, of 1530 Bank Street, also riding in the back of the camper suffered back injuries and is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

City police said driver of the truck was Stuart Alan Bridgeman, 20, of 3880 Cedar Hill Road.

He was not injured.

Police said three other persons were riding in the cab of the truck and escaped injury.

The force of the impact broke the pole in three pieces and lifed the camper off the truck. It came to rest 133 feet from the pole, a splintered wreck. The camper was going east on Rockland.

Wreckage was spread 170 feet from the point of impact on Rockland.

An inquest will be held 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sands Mortuary Ltd., coroner Edmond de St. Jorre said.

The government today also confirmed Sam Thong has fallen to the Communists. Government troops withdrew from the town but it was not known in what direction they retreated.

Smokestack Syndrome Hurting City—Report

By AB KENT

Support for industrial development in Victoria suffers from the "smokestack syndrome," a new economic report suggests.

Drawn up by a committee of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, the study lists alternative means of improving the existing method of attracting new industry, or of setting up an industrial, or economic development commission that would attempt to persuade a broad range of acceptable business to establish here.

"In the political context," the report said, "there is little support for the establishment of an industrial development board largely because of the smokestack syndrome. However, environmental quality is not incompatible with industrial growth if the latter is properly planned."

AVOID TITLE

But it would be advisable to avoid the title "industrial development," the study said.

It notes Victoria is well advanced in a national trend away from goods producing toward service producing enterprises, with a main advantage being relative immunity from the effects of the business cycle.

A main disadvantage is the limited local capacity to absorb the available labor force, the study said.

Among the general objectives desired are protection of the environmental qualities and unique regional characteristics; balancing payoff for promoting manufacturing against tourist advertising in developing priorities within broad economic activities; specialization; attraction of branches of large, established firms; a properly researched information system.

Estimated cost of setting up the system would be $50,000 a year, to cover the cost of a co-ordinator and office staff, which should be on a regional basis, the study recommends.

Experience elsewhere has shown that results are not immediate and the average time lapse in the U.S. is three years before a new business is set up.

Competition is strong, too, there being more than 10,000 industrial development boards in North America.

The system at present is for city hall to subsidize industrial development work by making available to the chamber manager $2,500 a year used mainly to answer inquiries. Improvements could include better liaison with the city planning department, preparation of a brochure with maps, and co-ordination of all groups with an interest in regional economic development.

ALTERNATIVE

Alternatively, the chamber could have a single committee called the economic development committee, charged with the whole range of activities, including tourist and convention promotion, commercial and industrial attraction.

Subcommittees could handle individual tasks, the study said.

Or, the chamber could ask the Capital Region District to undertake industrial development functions, which the report said would be appropriate if public money was to be spent.

Some interesting points of background brought out by the study include the fact that Victoria's average age is probably lower than assumed.

UNDER-24 GROUP

The under-24 group comprises 42.2 per cent of the whole population, compared with 46 per cent in B.C., and those 65 or older make up 15.1 per cent, against 9.6 per cent in the province.

Existence of a university and vocational school assure an adequate, qualified labor force; market restrictions will continue to diminish as transport costs go down between Vancouver Island and the mainland; the main anchors of employment continue to be service and government, accounting for 50 per cent of regional jobs, with trade and manufacturing making up 27 per cent.

Oil Industry Not Exempt In Foreign Ownership Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Greene said Friday he could not give assurance that any new legislation governing foreign ownership would exempt the oil industry, bulk of which is American-controlled.

Oil-country MP Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) sought the assurance in the Commons while Greene fielded questions about the government decision to limit foreign ownership in the Canadian uranium industry.

Green replied that he is "not able to give the assurance" because the government is reviewing the whole question of foreign ownership.

"I am quite certain that when the decision is made, it will be announced as promptly as possible in order that the industry and the entrepeneurs and investors may know the government's policy in this regard," he added.

NO DECISION MADE

Earlier, Greene told Max Saltsman (NDP — Waterloo) no decision has been made on the question of applying the uranium regulations to other energy industries such as coal and oil.

Greene added in this context that Prime Minister Trudeau has made it clear the government is working actively on an over-all policy decision regarding foreign ownership of industrial and resource assets.

The series of questions were sparked by the government's day-before decision to restrict foreign ownership in Canadian uranium mines to 33 per cent to ensure they do not fall into foreign hands.

Greene's non-commital replies on what the government has in mind for other energy resource industries touched off speculation the government may apply control rules to them as well.

However, there was nothing in Greene's remarks to indicate that the government was planning such a precise step.

Montreal Mail Still Moving

(Times News Services)

MONTREAL — Helmeted riot police ringed the main post office building and militant mail delivery drivers continued creating a traffic bottleneck outside for the fifth day but postal officials said letters were getting through.

A number of delivery trucks were abandoned and tires were slashed but there were no arrests or violent incidents.

Despite delays, most of a backlog of 3 million letters including 300,000 family allowance cheques, were delivered to sub-stations by 80 independent drivers who worked double shifts.

Bike-In Attacks Autos

It looked as if someone had deliberately taken the bicycles off Douglas St. sidewalks this morning and thrown them into the street.

But a closer look showed each bike occupied a parking space, and money had been placed in the meters.

Some of the bikes had balloons attached and some had signs like: "Why Pollute? Ride a Bicycle," or "Make Love, Not Suds."

The bikes were "parked" along Douglas between Fort and Johnson. Each time a shopper returned to his or her car and drove away, a youth was waiting to flop his bike down in the vacated space.

UVIC STUDENTS

By 11 a.m. there were about 20 bikes in position. Organizers of the demonstration Ed Alexander and Bob Jeffs, both Uvic students, were worried they wouldn't get enough machines to fill up all the parking spaces.

Participants were students from local secondary schools, particularly from Oak Bay Senior Secondary's SFERE club.

"We felt the automobile is the best thing we could attack," said Alexander.

"It's mostly to educate people on the lines open to them to fight pollution," he added, referring to information on automobile exhaust, pesticides, phosphates and oil drilling.

MAN IS THE PREY

How is man doing in the endless battle for survival on our planet? That is the theme of a new five-part series by James Clarke, beginning on Page 8 today. It will continue on succeeding Saturdays.

This series, especially adapted from Clarke's new book, Man Is the Prey, steps straight into a nightmare world where man is a meal, or a threat or irritation to be crushed or brushed aside.

Some of the nightmare is just that: imaginary horrors conjured up by urban man's own fancy in his divorce from the real world of nature.

Into this nightmare world man must venture, and immediately, if he is to survive.

For man must have the food now denied him in the land virtually occupied by disease-carrying insects — an occupying army he can scarcely see which infests millions of square miles of potentially good agricultural land.

He must learn to farm the seas—two-thirds of his planet — whose dangerous inhabitants are still virtually incomprehensible to him.

In his researches for this book, Clarke travelled many thousands of miles about the world, from Northern Europe to the Pacific, beginning with Central Africa.

IT'S SPRING and nobody is immune from its effects, according to report by Jack Scott today on Page 23.

. . . U.S. MAIL STRIKE

"On Monday I will meet my constitutional obligation to see that the mails go through," he said, if the strikers persisted.

He would not elaborate except to note the administration had "the means to deliver the mail and we will use those means."

But by press time the wildcat strikers were still defying back-to-work urgings and the walkouts in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois Wisconsin, Minnesota, Texas Colorado and California threatened to spread to the entire 700,000-man U.S. postal service.

Nixon said the postal workers in many areas have legitimate grievances and "we are prepared to negotiate those.

ILLEGAL STRIKE

"But under no circumstances will discussions be held with government employees when they are out on illegal strike."

The postal workers maintain they will not go back to work until Nixon promises them higher pay in a long simmering and bitter dispute that has seen the mailmen promised pay increases that were later postponed.

Nixon said he wanted to give responsible union leadership a chance to work out a settlement and that — despite Friday's failure — he still believed there was a chance for such talks.

Boisterous New York union members waved signs characterizing national union leaders who reached a shaky back-to-work agreement with the department of labor Friday as "rats" and "creeps".

Local president Gustave J. Johnson, said: "We have been led down the street of broken dreams for 18 months. There is only one person who can solve this — President Nixon."

Chicago Postmaster Henry McGee said he may have to order an embargo on mail coming into Chicago Monday. This would be a near-mortal blow to the U.S. postal system which already has had to embargo New Jersey, Connecticut, Major portions of New York, Michigan and Wisconsin, and Philadelphia, St. Paul, Minn., and Akron, Ohio.

FIRST CLASS

Even if the strike ended immediately, embargoes could be lifted only on first class mail and air mail, according to New York Postmaster John Strachan. It would take three or four days to lift embargoes on other types of mail and maybe a week or 10 days to resume normal service, he said.

Only Congress can vote the postal workers a wage increase. Legislation to do so has been bogged down for six months and is now tied to President Nixon's controversial proposal for postal reform.

At present, mail carriers earn $8,442 a year after 21 years of service and they are demanding a 39 per cent increase with a top salary in effect after five years. The House of Representatives is considering legislation which would give them a 5.4 per cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1.

Mundy on Top In Toastmasters Competition

Keith Mundy of Beaver Toastmasters Club 790 won the Golden Gavel Friday in the 25th annual competition sponsored by the Toastmasters Club.

His topic was The Sea Is Not Full.

In second place was Mrs. Dorothy Sanders of the Capital City Speakers Club who spoke on The Most Important Thing In Life.

Third was Francis Littlechief of the Indian Education Club who spoke on Give Them Something to Follow.

Prizes were awarded by David Brown, district governor of B.C. The competition is open to persons over 18 with no more than three months training as speakers.

Nuyen Anymore, Bob?

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — Film star Robert Culp, 39, was ordered Friday in a closed court session to pay $1,400 monthly support to his French-Chinese wife, actress France Nuyen, 30, pending settlement of their divorce suit. The couple was married in 1967, and Culp launched divorce proceedings on his second wedding anniversary.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

It was mainly cloudy throughout B.C. this morning with some rain or wet snow in central areas.

A Pacific weather system brought rain to the north coast this morning. It will weaken as it moves inland and give only occasional rain or wet snow across the Interior. This will be followed by a more active weather disturbance Sunday. There will be a few sunny periods Sunday. Afternoon temperatures will remain mild.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Stories of the "abos" of Australia and their way of living have always fascinated me. They live a hard life that seems to defy all measurements of comfort, because they don't have any comfort. Yet they remain among the healthiest people in the world and they are intelligent in their way.

The aborigine sometimes can't get enough food to burn in his body to produce heat and energy in relatively great quantities. So when he is hungry and cold, he simply allows the skin of his body, and his arms and legs, to get cold. He can gain a state of sufficient comfort and save his woefully small supply of food if he remains sedentary in such a state of cold skin and cold hands and feet. We civilized people couldn't stand such submission to climate unless we adapted back to a primitive state.

When I think of the aborigines of Australia's outback I recollect the story of what one "abo" said in pidgin English when he saw and heard his first piano: "Him big fella bockus (box) you hit him teeth he cry." Not so dumb, is it?

Bloc Voting by Labor Unions Debated for NDP Conventions

By BRUCE YEMEN

A major struggle to control the future direction of the New Democratic Party in B.C. is looming over a radical proposal to amend the method by which its leader is elected.

A party committee studying the constitution of the provincial party has recommended putting a large bloc vote into the hands of affiliated labor unions.

Under the proposal, to be debated at the party's annual convention at Chilliwack June 4, 5 and 6, the leader of the party would be selected by a mailed-ballot referendum of all party members.

But affiliated unions would be given bloc votes in the number of 25 times the convention delegates to which they would normally be eligible.

BLOC VOTES

It is understood the system would give unions 2,800 bloc votes out of 14,000 eligible to vote for the leadership.

This represents a substantial increase in amount and type of union voting strength which currently stands at 112 individual votes out of 800 eligible at the June convention at which Opposition Leader Dave Barrett is expected to win the party leadership, perhaps unopposed, under the existing delegate-vote system.

The effect of the new system would be to frustrate in large measure the current trend within the legislative wing of the party to loosen official labor ties to enable the party to represent a wider cross-section of "working people" than at present.

It could also make it impossible for Barrett to continue as leader unless he shows more inclination than he has to date to work closely with official labor.

REASSESSMENT

A "reassessment" of the party's labor ties has been officially under way since the 1969 election in which Tom Berger lost his legislative seat and subsequently resigned the party's leadership.

Barrett the House Leader, is closely identified with the reassessment. He lost the party leadership to Berger by only 36 votes in April, 1969. Berger, a labor lawyer, was heavily labor-backed. Barrett is a social worker.

The placing of bloc-votes into the hands of unions, not unlike that which occurs in the British Labor Party, could be a club over Barrett's head and over the entire legislative wing of the party.

One party source likened the NDP—labor relationship in the past to a situation in which the party and working men were separated by a wall on which sat labor leaders who interpreted each side to the other.

POOR JOB

The party's record at the polls has suggested to some that the "interpreters" haven't been doing a very good job of explaining to the party what are the real needs and wishes of working people.

The Social Credit government's election record suggests on the other hand, that it has done a pretty good job of tuning in to working people, at least for election purposes.

The proposed bloc-vote system would strenghten the role of labor leaders as "interpreters" within the party and enable both Liberals and Socreds to continue attacking the NDP as a voice of organized labor.

When Barrett took over as House Leader of the party, there were rumors of deep divisions within the 12-member legislative caucus.

NO SIGNS

But no real signs of these divisions have emerged and in recent weeks support for Barrett for the leadership has been expressed by two MLAs once regarded as possible contenders in June — Bob Williams and Alex Macdonald.

In addition, former leader Robert Strachan has declared his support for Barrett who has appeared to gain confidence steadily in the House, keeping himself under tight control while running the fairly relaxed "sharp" that is always possible immediately after an election and two or three years before the next one.

Macdonald, who resigned as deputy leader this year in order to speak more freely on issues concerning the party's position, has made clear both within and outside the legislature that he wants the party to loosen its labor ties to take a more detached view of society and its problems.

While there has been no single government bill comparable to labor legislation which touched off violent debates in past years, the party was clearly moderated its contributions to debates in matters affecting labor, while still making clear where its sympathy lies.

It is known that within some elements of the party there is growing conern about the direction taken by the legislative wing.

One theory is that the draft constitution containing the new leadership voting proposal will be an opportunity for the moderate party elements to attack the labor elements for "going too far" in a desperate effort to maintain strength.

This could precipitate a battle for power much sooner than it might otherwise have occurred — and in a much more public manner.

Barrett is probably not yet in a strong enough position as leader to stake his future within the party on a "loosen-labor-strings" policy but his acknowledged political acumen might enable him to bring it off successfully in time to take a "new-look" party to the polls next time around.

If he fails, however, the party could be seriously damaged by the battle for many years to come.

But if his success at loosening the ties means a weakening of the party's financial base through official labor support without adequate replacement of that support through wide individual worker and "middle-class" contributions, the party might still be in a weekened condition to fight an election.

The constitutional amendment might be defeated at the June convention without changing the current and traditionally ambiguous position of official labor in the party, of course, and the quiet infighting would continue between those who want to shift the party away from labor and those who oppose the move.

Active Sportsman Dies at 68

Funeral services will be held Tuesday for John Reid Clark, a well-known Victoria sportsman, who died Thursday at 68.

Born in Edinburgh, Clark came to Calgary in 1910 and moved to Victoria in 1920 where he became a founding partner in the feed firm of Clark and Cordick.

An active sportsman, he was past president of the Gorge Vale Golf Club and was instrumental in acquiring the club land from the Hudson's Bay Company. Involved in many sports throughout his life, he was a well-known competitor in track and field, tennis and soccer in his youth.

DOG FANCIER

His English setters were shown in dog shows and field trials in which he took a keen interest.

Clark leaves his wife Flora at home, 2646 Ascomb Place; a daughter, Mrs. Gordon (Beverly) Lough, North Bay, Ont., and a step-daughter, Mrs. Keith (Ann) Fitch of San Francisco. He is survived also by two sisters, Mrs. Stan (Jessie) Carr, of Tete Jaune Cache and Mrs. Martin (Betty) Powers of McBride, B.C.; a brother, Tom in Calgary and five grandchildren.

Services will be held Tuesday at 3 p.m. in McCall's Chapel.

James Baird Steps Up to Deputy Minister

James Baird, assistant deputy minister of municipal affairs, will take over the deputy minister's job April 1, succeding J. Everett Brown who will continue as chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Brown, who has reached retirement age, will have responsibility for all housing, urban renewal and land assembly with duties combined which were previsouly shared between the commission and the department.

A cabinet order passed Friday made the appointment official.

Beltone HEARING AID USERS Testify

Dear Mr. Hahn:
My husband and I greatly appreciate your extreme kindness in giving me—free of charge—a more powerful aid for my left ear which, after using your hearing glasses for five months, showed an alarming deterioration.
We were touched by your concern for what had happened to my ear and you proved your sincerity and generosity in supplying me with a more powerful aid at no further cost.
An eminent ear specialist confirmed your report and I am now under his care for a physical impairment.
Meanwhile, there is a big improvement in my hearing since I received the stronger aid for my left ear (previously, as you are aware, this had been my best ear). I am almost stone-deaf without my hearing glasses and I can't thank you enough for your great patience and consideration. I must be one of your more difficult customers.
I am convinced that I could not possibly get better care anywhere than at Beltone where—in the words of your representative Mr. Clark—"Service is our Business." He is quite right, as time has proved over and over. We—your customers—can call in at Beltone anytime and be sure of a sympathetic ear for our problems.
It is a pleasure to do business with you, sir, and we sincerely trust that—as your thoughtful services become more widely known—the Victoria Branch of Beltone will expand as it deserves to do.
Sincerely yours,
(Signed) MRS. JOSEPH SMITH,
1176 Greenwood Avenue,
Victoria, B.C.
Why don't you entrust your hearing problems with Beltone? You will be glad you did.

SOLITUDE AND BEAUTY

The Lure of Mountain Trails

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Only weekend walkers and Nebuchadnezzar the goat know of the spell and wonders of Mount Wells near Victoria.

Nebs for short, is a pure white goat with an unusually long beard who forsook domestic life to become a mountain hermit — which is an old fashioned name for a sort of hippie.

According to neighborhood talk, he took off for the mount when his master died. He hasn't looked back since.

No wonder. There isn't a mount or hill so close to the city with so much appeal for both goats and lovers of the outdoors. There is solitude in parkland surroundings, wildflowers galore and glorious views of the surrounding countryside, the city and the Gulf of Georgia.

Mount Wells is situated on the east side of Humpback Road, about 10 miles from the city centre. It is accessible via Sooke Road, about three miles past Happy Valley or Goldstream. It actually skirts the city watershed.

It's eastern slope is steep and craggy and can only be ascended by people as sure footed as Nebs. There are trails, however, leading to the flat, tree-dotted summit.

No one knows how the mount got its name — not even the government's geographic branch, thought it has been suggested it may be after the large and beautiful Wells Cathedral in England.

For years it has been a favorite rendezvous of some members of the Victoria Outdoor Club — perhaps its only visitors.

If you climb to the top, you will be lucky to catch sight of Nebs. He is a true hermit — hates crowds and people who make noise.

The closest we ever got to Nebs was with a pair of binoculars from Mount MacDonald which faces Wells on the opposite side of Humpback Road.

It is quite a sight to see him standing on a ledge on the mount's steep cliff overlooking the valley below, perhaps surveying other mountains to the west. He's a mountain lover after all.

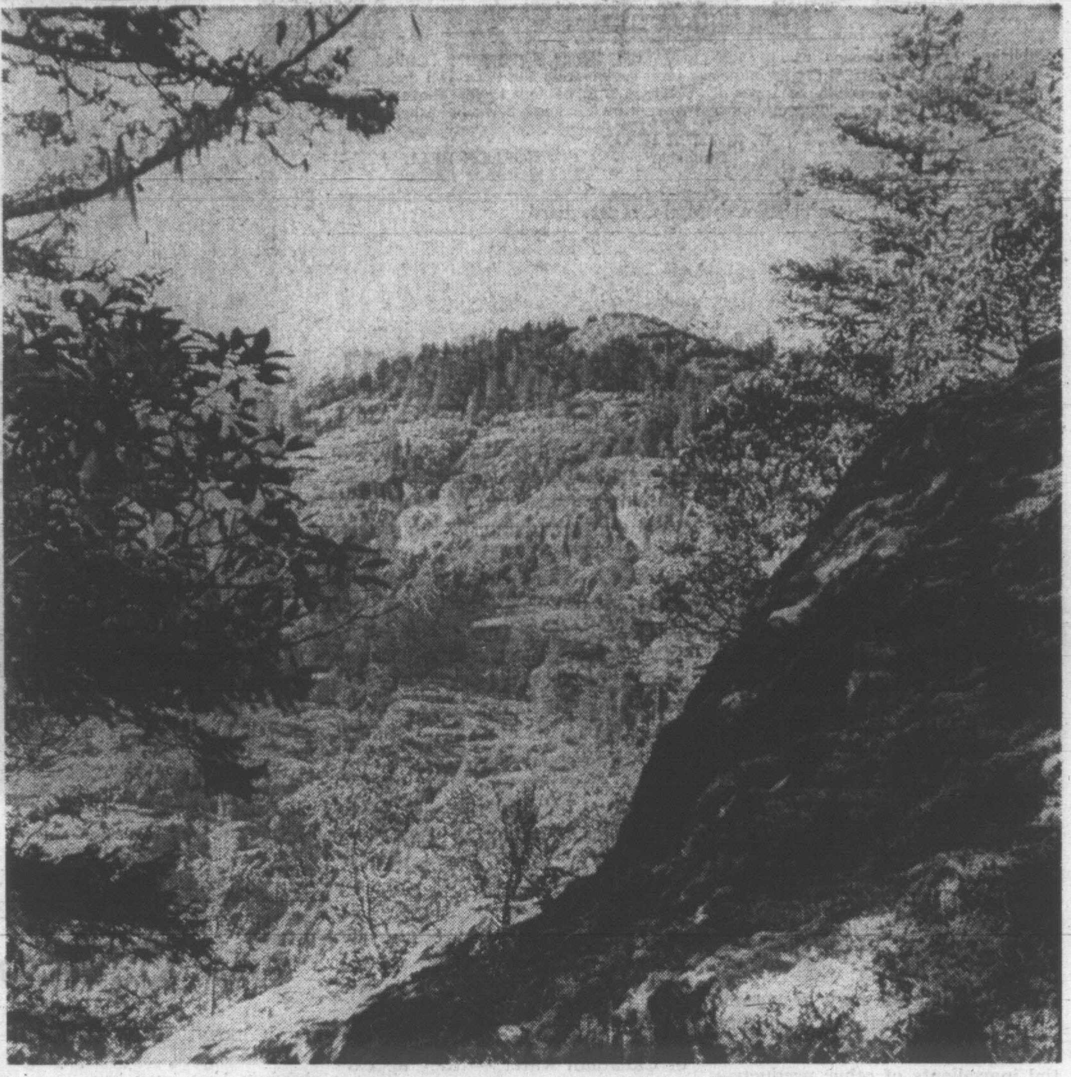
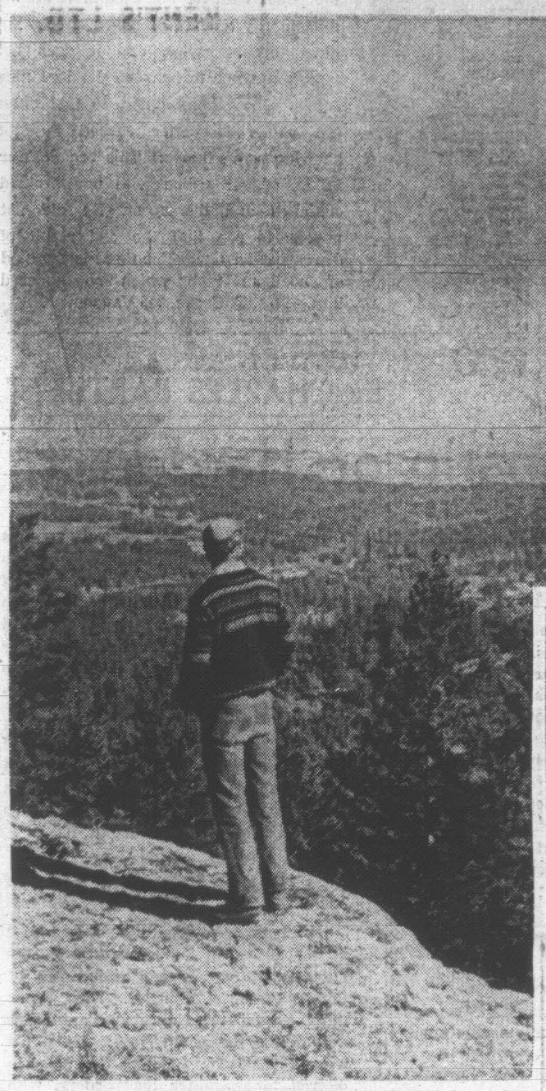
Then usually when the sun starts to set, Nebs is seen climbing a steep gully and disappearing into the mount's fastness.

But if you don't see him, don't be disappointed. You will at least enjoy what he enjoys — the solitude and occasional whispering breezes through the woods.



Mount Wells, seen from across a picturesque gorge.



VIEW from the summit of lovely Mount Wells shows Greater Victoria in the distance and past it, the Strait of Georgia. On clear days the Olympic Mountains of Washington State provide a worthy backdrop for the entire panorama.

Monte Carlo Coupe

Enjoy the year-round comfort of GM four-season air conditioning

We're now building enough Monte Carlos so you can buy one.

You've undoubtedly been invited to examine and drive personal luxury cars before. But we'll bet this is the first time you've been invited to see and drive one priced at $3,666*.

At that price, Monte Carlo costs hundreds of dollars less than other personal luxury cars.

Yet Monte Carlo's a car of thickly padded seats that use the flat 'S' spring found in fine furniture. Rich cloth or custom-knit nylon fabrics. An instrument panel with the look of Carpathian burled elm. Plush deep-twist carpeting. And extreme quiet, thanks to an unusual amount of sound-absorbing insulation.

Monte Carlo is every bit the luxury car in other respects, too. For instance, you get a 350-cubic-inch V8, along with power front disc brakes operating behind full wheel covers—all standard.

And if you think this car and its price make impressive reading, just wait until you try out the real thing at your Chevrolet dealer's.

Control in the Board Room

ENERGY MINISTER GREENE'S announcement of an imposed one-third limit on foreign ownership of uranium mines in Canada, and a 10 per cent limit for any one foreign holder, is at once recognition of Canada's vital interest in retaining control of this resource, and the importance of the nuclear product itself in the world of today and the future.

The principle of ensuring Canadian majority control of certain commercial interests within the country has already been established in the case of such key undertakings as banks and broadcasting stations. Imposing similar regulations on uranium mines is an extension of the concept, rather than a new approach. But it will be interesting to see in what further fields the principle may be applied. Long before shortages of natural resources—metals, fuels, or essential ingredients of other products—become crucial, it will be necessary to decide to what extent Canadian interests must control their distribution and use.

The question has still greater pertinence in view of the recent meeting between Canadian and United States legislators in Washington, at which continental use of resources was a major topic. It was clear that there is a strong opinion in the United States that the natural resources of North America should be exploited on the basis of overall need and economic considerations, and that Canadian resources should be lumped in with those of the United States in designing an international pattern of use.

But Canada's interests clearly lie in the opposite direction: that Canadian resources should be used for the benefit of Canada, whether this implies domestic consumption or export. On the continental basis, Canada would serve as little more than a supply dump for the greater United States industrial complex, feeding raw materials endlessly into the manufacturing plants of our large neighbor. This would mean that Canadian productive capacity would never fully develop, that what we as a nation could do with that capacity and its products would never be realized.

The Washington talks were a relatively unofficial exchange of opinions, there was no thought of commitment or even agreement. But it is disturbing that although the Canadian Members of Parliament present at the meetings held that water export was not a negotiable topic — despite a statement by Conservative M.P. George Hees that he has a proposal for the sale of Canadian water — they appeared very ready to talk about a common Canadian-American policy on all energy: including oil, natural gas, electricity, coal, uranium.

The United States speakers urged that water be included, and there can be little doubt that Washington's policy from now on will be to put increasing pressure on Canada to discuss water exports. Fresh water is so vital a national resource that talk of trading Canada's supplies to the United States, particularly when we do not know what our future requirements will be, is akin to selling arms or legs or the very air we breathe.

It is essential that Canadian policy be firm on this, and that any person appointed to speak for Canada should leave no doubt in any mind as to his adherence to the principle of conserving Canadian water for Canada's future.

Where Are the B.C. Senators?

WITH THE DEATH OF SENATOR J. W. de B. Farris British Columbia has only one of the six senators to which it is entitled under the British North America Act in Ottawa. And this lack of representation comes at a time when Senate committees are actively involved in many facets of Canadian life, including the White Paper on Taxation, poverty, the news media, science policy and, ironically enough, a committee on the role of the Senate.

Including the British Columbia vacancies there are 15 empty seats in the present Senate. This is an anomaly considering the seminal nature of some of the questions the Senate is examining. Prime Minister Trudeau promised Senate reform almost two years ago but the federal government has encountered difficulties in getting the provinces to agree on a formula. British Columbia would like to see senators appointed on a population basis while Quebec wants all senators to be provincially appointed. Since Senate reform involving the provinces will be part of a constitutional reform package Canadians will not hold their collective breath in anticipation of immediate action.

The protracted nature of constitutional reform suggests the federal government may have to act unilaterally — and Mr. Trudeau's past utterances have not ruled out this possibility—if the Senate is not to wither away from natural attrition. With the appointment of Paul Martin, the Red Chamber lost some of its clubby "old boy" atmosphere. Senator Martin has managed to overcome traditional Senate inertia and make it a useful extension of the House of Commons.

But this is not enough. There are still no New Democratic Party members in the Senate, yet the NDP receives approximately 20 per cent of the popular vote in federal elections and has had solid representation in the House of Commons for many years. If Senate reform cannot be accomplished with alacrity the government should appoint competent men, regardless of political affiliation, and put them to work. British Columbia's vacancies should be filled with dispatch so that this province will have adequate representation in the Upper House.

It Just Won't Wash

LITTLE SYMPATHY MAY BE expected from the Canadian public for the plea of the Electric Reduction Company of Canada Ltd. for delay in placing an early ban on phosphates. The company, a major manufacturer of phosphates used in detergents, has advanced arguments that contain a certain logic, but it overlooks the significant point that water pollution is not reduced by pouring in more chemicals.

The company says time is required to determine if there is an acceptable substitute for phosphates, for the collection of information on the effectiveness of phosphate removal processes and for study of the phosphates' role in the growth of algae.

All of this sounds plausible enough. But why haven't these avenues already been intensively explored? The campaign against phosphates has been going on for a considerable time—enough time for a crash program by the industry to have made some progress on the studies it suggests should be made now. All the industry has done is to draft a scheme to show taxpayers how they could provide, at public expense, the kind of sewage treatment plants which would remove the offending compound.

The plea made in Ottawa will be widely viewed as one more delaying tactic by an industry making a profit from the production of a substance deleterious to the Canadian environment. The case made by the companies, unlike their product, just won't wash.

Confusing

No wonder we the people are so mixed up today. On listening to a broadcaster from Vancouver this morning I found one half of his programme dealt with a crowd of people who lost their civilized habits and, carrying a mess of garbled signs, smashed a few things in their paths and by their uncontrolled behavior in a store, frightened the shoppers there. All of which made our broadcaster very angry.

The next part of his programme dealt with Police Chief Gregory of Victoria who had occasion to reprimand the broadcasters of a local radio station and consequently forebade them access to the police files for one month. (I see no reason why a chief of police should not have this authority, and it does not punish me not to hear of the less nice doings of our community. In fact often the public is better served by not knowing some things.) This broadcaster talked of our police with unrestrained criticism and disrespect. He did not appear to see that the end result of disrespect for our police force is the kind of hooligan mob which so angered him.—Mrs. T. Cooke, 715 Vancouver.

A JARRING IMPACT IN PHNOM PENH

By CHARLES BARTLETT

The Cambodia Coup: Fanciful Scenario or Hard Fact?

THE IRONY is that the Vietnamese communists, by overplaying their hand in Laos, may have produced in Cambodia the first real breakthrough of the Nixon doctrine. Phnom Penh's coup d'etat bore the first blush look of one of those fanciful movie scenarios which Prince Sihanouk has been accustomed to write in the early mornings. To a man who once resigned his throne to rule by popular mandate, a coup contrived in his absence could seem a useful gambit, a clever device to gain negotiating advantages abroad and draw out the opposition at home.

Bartlett

Sihanouk always ruled as if he were running behind in an election campaign and his strenuous concern with public sentiment, his obvious acceptance by the placid masses, and his total domination of the capital scene make it hard to believe that he had let popular favor slip from his grasp. If there were defects in his leadership. they were economic misjudgments, not failings in his rapport with six million Cambodians.

Leathery Figure

To assume Sihanouk has been genuinely ousted, it is necessary to believe that strong leaders have ridden a basic policy difference into power. These leaders would have to be Prince Matak, a cousin whom Sihanouk has publicly denounced in the past, and Gen. Lon Nol, whom Ambassador Chester Bowles recalls as a leathery figure who attended all his talks with Sihanouk in 1968.

The general took a harder line than Sihanouk in those meetings, initiated by the State Department so as to discourage the growing inclination of the Johnson White House and the military to attack the North Vietnamese sanctuaries in Cambodia. The general told Bowles that he knew there were North Vietnamese in Cambodia and that he and his men would try to clear them out if Bowles would do what he could to keep the Americans out.

Now it is two years later, the North Vietnamese as dependent as ever on their Cambodian bases and supply lines, and the Cambodians are as incapable as ever of pushing out these unwanted visitors. The new Communist push in Laos, consigned like Cambodia to neutralism and popular elections at Geneva in 1954, has obviously had a jarring impact in Phnom Penh.

It was a sharp reminder of some unpleasant realities. The Vietnamese have historically menaced Cambodians. "There is no such thing as a good Vietnamese," Sihanouk told Bowles. His intricate statesmanship over the past five years has largely been prompted by his fear that an eventual American withdrawal from Southeast Asia would leave his entire eastern border exposed to the worst kind of neighbor: Vietnamese who were Communists.

Now that this withdrawal appears imminent, the Cambodians face an outcome even more alarming, a stand-off between North and South Vietnam which will leave portions of Cambodia occupied by foreigners, rebellious bands of Khmer reds in other parts of the border, and no solid link with any significant counterforce.

Sihanouk wrote last month that all of Indochina will be occupied by Hanoi and Peking unless the Americans remain in Southeast Asia. This was a sharp reversal of his past expressions.

People's Resentment

If Sihanouk has really been ousted, it is because he under-estimated the intensity of his people's resentment of the trespassing guerillas. This seems most improbable. More likely he has authorized the coup to impress his friends in Moscow and Peking, who once offered to guarantee his borders, with his inability to tolerate any longer Hanoi's imposition.

If he is really ousted, new complexities may arise for Washington. The protocol of the SEATO treaty extends the same protective benefits to Cambodia which justified the intervention in South Vietnam. Pressures from Phnom Penh to enlarge the intervention would be awkward for the Nixon administration at a time when it is hastening to contract its Asian role.

But if the coup is merely part of a Sihanouk scenario, the issue of American intervention will not arise. The crafty Cambodian has seen the damage of the American presence in neighboring countries and he is wise enough to want none of it for his own.

Letter to the Editor

On the Pill

As a young working wife coming up fast to the third anniversary of a very happy marriage I would like to reply to Thelma E. Macht's letter printed Monday, March 16.

My husband and I have several reasons for not wishing children, the financial aspect being just one. We are married because we were too chicken to live together and because we feel marriage means more than unbridled procreation. When we married, after a good four years of courtship, we had already achieved an interaction of personalities verging on dependence. To have waited until we were "ready to have children" would have crippled us emotionally.

I am, needless to say, on the pill and have been for years. If my personality has changed for the worse, my husband hasn't mentioned it. As for the "sad, unpredictable, impossible, despondent to the point of suicide" woman described, I've been having moods like that, to varying degrees, since puberty.

The Pill, like all pills, has side effects for some people. The extreme emotional upsets Mrs. Macht describes, like many violent and immediate physical side effects, are quick to notice and diagnose. The real concern lies with the side effects that appear only after years of use, and then could be caused by other things than the Pill, for example heredity, pollution or even the all encompassing "Act of God."

So far no one has proven that the Pill has a higher side-effect rate than other drugs or it would be off the market. The fact that insufficient tests were done before it was put on the market, and that testing was not continued afterwards on the human patients is a medical (not pharmaceutical) disgrace —but it doesn't condemn the Pill itself.

The real problem lies in public airing of generalizations that do nothing more than scare women into increasing the population of an overpopulated world. — Disgusted.

High-Level Gambling at California's Political Tables

By FRANK MANKIEWICZ and TOM BRADEN from Washington

THE CANDIDACY of Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles for the Democratic nomination for governor of California represents one more move in Gov. Ronald Reagan's desperate strategy to win the Presidency in 1972. Reagan will be 60 years old if he starts a new term as governor of California, and he is running only because he thinks he has a chance at the 1972 Republican National Convention. He thinks that Strom Thurmond's defection to Richard Nixon at Miami Beach cost him the nomination in 1968, and he is gambling that catastrophe — uncontrolled violence at home and defeat in Vietnam — will cause the GOP to abandon Richard Nixon and turn to the right by 1972.

It is a fantasy, but the Reagan men — never noted for a sense of humor — believe it. And for it to come true he must be re-elected in California this year by a large majority.

That is not as easy as it once looked. Recent state-wide polls show Reagan leading Democrat and former Assembly Speaker Jess Unruh 48 per cent to 39 per cent, a sizable gain for Unruh and — significantly — the first time Reagan has dropped below 50 per cent in any statewide polls.

Politics of Confrontation

Reagan has held on to his lead by playing the politics of confrontation with the militant students — a game they are happy to play. Reagan misses no chance to stir up controversy and to arouse militancy — in this respect his aim and that of the SDS coincide.

But Californians are beginning to realize that the quality of state services is declining even as the cost goes up. The indispensable ticket-of-leave to the good life — a college education — is no longer available to all, and air and water pollution increasingly impede recreation and even life itself. And the Late-Show glamor is wearing thin; this year Reagan must make it as a politician.

So the Yorty move — to split the Democratic Party — makes good sense from the Reagan point of view. Without a challenge, Unruh would undoubtedly have polled more votes in the Democratic primary than Reagan — also unopposed among the Republicans. Now that will not happen.

Yorty's backers are Reagan's. GOP oilman Henry Salvatori, who is Reagan's leading financial backer, is solidly in Yorty's corner. More Reagan money will be available. Yorty can also expect financial support from those who do business — or might like to do business — with the city of Los Angeles — and who regard the mayor's tries for statewide office as a part of the game.

One problem in the Yorty campaign is some $50,000 raised last week at a testimonial dinner for the mayor. Invitations expressly pledged that the $50-a-plate receipts would not be used for a statewide campaign. The dinner was a disappointment to Yorty — approximately 700 people rattled around in the 2,000-plus capacity Paladium ballroom.

Liberal Target

But the mayor is a scrapper — he comes across as a sort of road company of George Wallace — and he will pick up some votes in the primary by attempting to brand Unruh as the leader of a left-wing faction. There is irony in this: Unruh for years was the target of the liberals in the party for what they felt was his conservatism and his running battles with former Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown.

But most polls show Yorty with slightly more than a third of the Democratic vote and little chance of enlarging it. He will serve Reagan's purposes by making trouble among the Democrats, but he may even stimulate some Unruh supporters to come out early to fight off the Yorty challenge.

The mayor, Democrats recall, has not put his weight behind a state-wide Democratic candidate since his barely disguised anti-Catholic attacks on John F. Kennedy in 1960.

As for Unruh, his aides say he will try to ignore Yorty and save his best shots for Reagan in November, observing the ancient political rule: "Never attack the monkey when the organ grinder is in the room."

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Anyone driving along the West Road and proceeding via Birch to the Chalet road, will note many changes in the flora at this season.

Along the West Road the flowering dogwoods are breaking into bloom, their greenish blossoms showing almost white. Some blooms have four and others five bracts.

On the banks there is an abundance of Oregon grape in full bloom. Many of the leaves are reddish and very attractive.

Past McTavish Cross Road, three very tall, branchy trees catch the eye. They are the black walnuts planted about 100 years ago by early settlers. About a mile farther along the road a very old barn gives a truly pastoral touch to the beautiful green fields with sleek herds of cattle grazing there. Urban sprawl has not reached this area yet.

At the Pat Bay Indian Reservation the banks toward the sea are beginning to show the shoots of the wild gourd. This plant, apparently only found close to Indian rancheries, will put forth long tentacles and will have blooms and fruit at the same time. The fruit is very bitter and said to be poisonous.

Along Birch Road the hedges on both sides are mainly made up of the English hawthorn, for in this locality it was introduced by the late Mr. Wain, who brought it out from his native county of Hampshire in England. He also brought several apple seedlings and some of the old orchards along the way still bear fruit.

Off the Chalet Road, at the edge of the bush among the new-growth trees, are many trilliums now in bloom. This beautiful flower, with its thickish stem and large net-veined leaves from which lift the three petals of snowy white and the dark rather fuzzy stamens in the centre, will change color as it ages, first turning purple then pink.

Close by, in the low ground, is the tooth-wort with leaves in varying shape. Its four-petal flower, too, will have a color range from a white to a pink. This plant belongs to the cruciferae family, the same as the mustards.

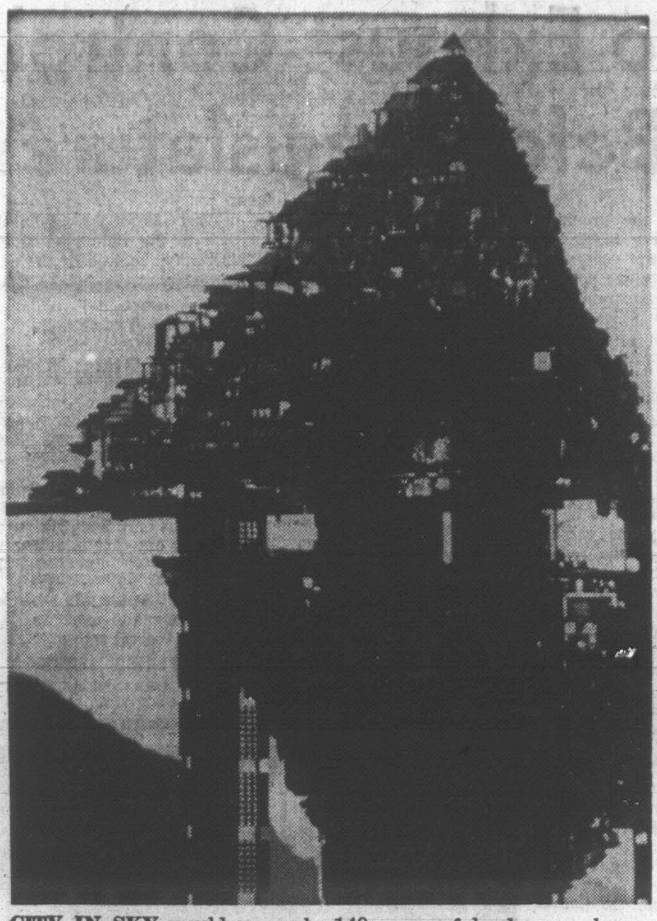
There are many cascara shrubs growing along the way, their four-branched leaves or buds now breaking out. Growing close by are several ninebark shrubs with soft, light green leaves.

There are many flowering currants and Indian plum shrubs in full bloom, but for some reason or other no Easter lilies, and a very few of their leaves showing. Perhaps all have been picked in the past.

Down where the little creek flows under the road there are many bright yellow skunk cabbage in full flower and here many of the red alders have a distinct curve in the lower part of their trunks. This perhaps is due to an extremely slow creep of the soil down to the creek bed and the trees reaching up for the sunlight.



CITY IN SKY would use only 140 acres of land space, house up to 170,000 people and rise more than half a mile.

The Architect as Mystic Utopian

By WOLF VON ECKARDT

Like Noah's descendants, architect Paolo Soleri would have us build Babels — vast "single-building" cities, as much as a mile high—"lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth."

Like Noah's descendants, he is also, it seems, punished by a confusion of language.

But that does not mean we, too, should be confused.

Soleri calls his gigantic cities "arcologies" (from "architectural ecology"). His visions and room-size diagramatic models of his cities, are now on public view at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington.

This is an enormous show of strangely beautiful, haunting drawings and sculptures that, in an age of often insipid simplism elate with their masterful complexity.

But do not confuse these architectural fantasies with a solution to the clear and present danger that man is despoiling the earth.

The answer is not to despoil man's humanity as well by making him bring up his children in Babylonian stone piles and/or to remove him further from contact with nature. The answer is not more unnatural technocratic arrogance, but more humility in the way we treat the land.

There is ample space on earth for generations to come if only we use that space rationally and respectfully. As Buckminister Fuller once pointed out, the world's population could be packed on the island of Manhattan, and there would still be room for everyone to dance the twist. The Garden of Eden is not in the sky, but on earth.

It is symbolic of Soleri's confusion of language when, in a pseudo-rational explanation of his towering cities, he says: "The centripetal forces giving a vertical axiality to the whole are cultural inasmuch as they are turned-on complexity, the vectoriality of life."

Never mind.

Most avant-garde artists and technocrats rationalize their work with gibberish. Confused language is the stuff of mysticism. Mysticism is often the stuff that art is made of. Art has often inspired architecture of fantasy.

Some of these fantasies have been realized. Others, like Soleri's, will always intrigue us as Utopias.

At the end of the 15th century Leonardo da Vinci proposed that the Duke of Milan build satellite towns rather than let his city grow to unmanageable size. Leonardo also suggested that vehicular traffic be put underground so people might walk unencumbered under the sun.

By the end of the 20th century Leonardo's sensible fantasy will no doubt be realized.

Antonio Sant'Elias's futuristic drawings of 1912 are already a clear and present threat. They show monstrous multi-level superfreeways piercing a city of "air rights" skyscrapers.

Paul Scheerbart, a romantic German poet, declared tongue-in-cheek in 1914 that, "to raise our culture to a higher level," we ought to live in glass buildings.

Mies van der Rohe and others were quick to take up the challenge. Culture, however, has not noticeably improved on Park Avenue.

Soleri, too, would raise our culture to a higher level and preserve the countryside to boot by having as many as half a million people live in poetic megastructures 300 and 500 storeys high.

This architectural fantasy, however, seems as Utopian as Bruno Taut's famous proposal to reshape the Alps.

Taut, who was also a very practical modern architect, proposed in 1919 that the Swiss mountains be carved into more orderly shapes and their valleys be roofed over with transparent material. This, he imagined, would transfer whole regions into paradisaical greenhouses.

Long live utopia. The Bruno Tauts and Paolo Soleris are, as one of Taut's pamphlets put it, "the lords of art . . . the spiritual warriors of this world . . . destroying and building at the same time in a heavenly craving for justice and love . . ."

And the Utopian urge to do the impossible, to disdain mere technical difficulties and blur the line between dream and practicality is always strongest in times of man's frustration in dealing with reality.

The only trouble is that such blurred visions, though they conjure such splendid art as Soleri's, can also be hallucinatory and thus, in the end, add to our frustrations.

It seems, at any rate, a blurring of the line that the Department of Housing and Urban Development saw it to give financial support to this exhibition. For intriguing as Soleri's "towers of Babel" are to behold, they hardly promise more humane housing or more rational urban development.

(The Washington Post)

Outlook Sunny for PR Men in Ottawa

By DONALD NEWMAN

When the federal government's Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs revealed its plans for price stability during the next 12 months, many businessmen rushed to newsstands to see how the proposals would affect them. But in Toronto, in the St. Clair Ave. offices of a 2-year-old public relations company, there was no such flurry.

Top executives there didn't have to rush to find out what the paper said. They already knew, since they played a part in drafting it.

A Lot of Flack

The company, Hopkins, Hedlin Ltd., does not consider itself a public relations firm, even if its competitors do. "We are economic communicators, even if we do get a lot of flack saying so," Garth Hopkins, a former journalist who is president of the company, maintains.

But, whatever they call themselves, Mr. Hopkins and his colleagues are kept busy flying from Toronto to Ottawa to undertake projects that are often as varied as the departments and branches of government which commission them.

And it is but one of a number of companies which have been expanding into a growing field: consulting the federal government on the public relations of its policies.

Recently in in the House of Commons, the government tabled a return showing that during the fiscal year now ending, it had paid approximately $200,000 for public relations services.

In the traditional sense, the figures were no doubt accurate. But it is doubtful they revealed the whole picture. For while public relations remains a polite term for press agentry or "flackery" to most people, it is in fact a developing field whose most sophisticated practitioners now have entre into both the executive suites of big business and the inner councils of government.

"Many of the public relations people now dealing with the government never sit down at a typewriter to turn out a press release — that is done in the information branches of the various departments," a senior official of the Treasury Board, which approves all expenditures by the government, conceded.

For example, when the Veterans Affairs Department unveiled new procedures for granting pensions to war veterans last summer, it hired an Ottawa public relations counsellor, John Doherty and Co. Ltd., to help.

The firm performed many of the traditional public relations roles, prepared press kits and arranged for a press conference. But its most important duty was to study the White Paper and decide which questions reporters would ask the Minister, Jean Eudes Dube, and his officials, when they revealed its contents.

Helped Homework

"We had several meetings with offcals of the department, going over the kind of questions they could expect. Really, we were helping them do their homework. It worked — when they fielded questions at the press conference, nothing surprised them."

The coaching sessions stood Mr. Dube and his staff in good stead when they appeared before the Committee on Veterans Affairs to answer MPs' questions on the policy shift.

Government departments aren't the only clients of public relations firms. Crown agencies and corporations also employ consultants. So does Telesat Canada, the hybrid public and private corporation responsible for the building and launching of Canada's first communications satellite.

Telesat has retained Carleton Cowan Public Relations Ltd., which has been engaged to prepare a plan to meet the corporations' communications needs.

Its needs seem virtually endless. But the corporation does not require anyone from Carleton Cowan to write a press release, stage a press conference.

Produce an Image

Instead, Carleton Cowan is undertaking a variety of projects — including redesigning of all Telesat's graphics and symbols — designed to produce the image of the corporation that its management wants conveyed to the public and the government.

In the months ahead, the company will be buffing that image to reflect the corporation favorably to the private investors it will seek through an offering of shares, and to members of Parliament, who must approve the money the government puts into the satellite program.

Carleton Cowan has been putting more emphasis on government business in recent months, transferring responsibility for Ottawa projects from its head office in Toronto to its Montreal office which is closer to the capital.

John Watkinson, who worked in public relations in London and New York before becoming Montreal manager of Carleton Cowan, regards the federal government as "a prime area of growth.

Until 1968, the company was a department of Maclaren's Advertising, Canda's biggest advertising agency. Now, with its own corporate structure, the firm functions as a wholly owned subsidiary of the advertising agency. According to Mr. Watkinson, it "is directed toward counselling organizations on how to use all the tools of comunication.

"In Ottawa, the function of PR is really growing now."

If that is true, Hopkins Hedlin seems to be getting a good share of that growth. Besides its work on the prices paper, it has recently undertaken major projects for the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development and the Senate Committee on the Mass Media.

For the Northern Development Department, the company planned a slick, 29-page brochure full of color photographs of Canada, north of the 60th parallel. It was sent out to approximately 6,000 potential investors in northern development, most in the United States, to try and attract their attention to a more weighty book crammed with economic facts on the Yukon and Northwest Territories, also prepared by the firm.

Combined Roles

On both projects, the company combined traditional and more contemporary roles of public relations companies. Hired as a consultant, the firm and the top information specialists in the department agreed on the double-barrelled approach to attracting investor interest.

But, once the course had been decided on, it turned out the department didn't have necessary staff to produce the material. The result: Hopkins Hedlin took over production.

For the media committee, the company undertook a research study on the economics and financial practices of the publishing and broadcasting industry in Canada. The results were only for committee members, although the chairman of the inquiry, Senator Keith Davey, has agreed to make all the committee's research material available at the end of its investigation.

The use of consulting firms by the government — public relations companies among them — is causing almost as many problems as it is solving. There already has been consideration, at the cabinet level, of whether the government should continue expanding its use of consultants or cut back on hiring them.

He's Suspicious

The problem is double-barrelled, particularly for a government like the one headed by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. Unlike his predecessor, the Prime Minister has a healthy suspicion of the civil service. The feeling is reflected in his ministers, who now have more inclination to involve outside groups as well as career civil servants in formulatng policies.

But, when engaging public relations or other consultants, the traditional government rules of purchasing supplies of services are almost useless. A list of specific contractual requirements is almost impossible to prepare. Agencies bidding for work can rarely do so the way a trucking firm can tender for an order of semi-trailers.

The consultants, of course, argue that the system is saving the government money.

"One advantage of using an outside organization is that you get people with a variety of talents for the period you want them," John Doherty, president of the company which bears his name, said.

"If the government didn't use consultants, it would have to staff up as though it always operated the way it really does just at peak periods."

But in a period when costs are being watched particularly closely, the Treasury Board is wrestling with ways to gain better control over expenditures for a service that it has little way of evaluating. The board can give no accurate figure on how much is being spent annually on services usually provided by public relations agencies — just a total on amounts paid to all consultants.

DUBE
. . . he had help

"If the work they are prepared to do seems reasonable and the price seems reasonable, there is hardly any objection raised," said one official.

Even so, costs seem high. The brochure, Canada North of 60, reportedly cost more than $20,000, and only 6,000 copies were distributed.

For work with the Prices and Incomes Commission, Hopkins Hedlin received $4,090 for 16 days' work, plus more than $500 for expenses.

However, there is more than the problem of costs. A sytem with so few guidelines is open to abuse. Not the least is the danger of political patronage, where friends of the party in power reap a harvest. While this is a danger, occurences of it are minimal.

Cronyism Danger

Where the danger does lie is in cronyism, where people in public relations know people in information branches of the government.

Despite some obvious drawbacks and any future refinements to the system, public relations consultants — whatever name they go by— are destined to play a continuing role in the operation of government. Whatever the dimensions of their responsiblities, the consultants will appear to be doing important work.

'The Human Ants Are Everywhere'

By PAUL RICHARD

Paolo Soleri, the architect, was asked not long ago to diagram the sort of supersonic jetport that might some day be built on the mud flats of New Jersey, across the Hudson River from the city of New York.

The structure he suggested was not just an airport but a city. Ringed with runways it would include hanging sunlit gardens, terminals and offices, hotels and theatres and dwellings for one million. All these elements were to be included in a single complex "building" 300 storeys high.

An enormous diagramatic model of this enormous project — Soleri's apprentices have named it "3-D Jersey" — has been constructed in the columned, two-storey high atrium of the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington.

"3-D Jersey" is but one of the compact single-structure cities dreamed of by Soleri. Models of a dozen others — some designed for mesas, some for prairies, some for the open sea — are included in the Soleri exhibition.

For weeks, a group of 15 young apprentices worked with Soleri constructing the often room-size models.

Soleri, a small, lithe man, spoke about his dreams. He seemed dwarfed by the giant model towering above him.

"Mine is an architecture of miniaturization," he explained.

He was not joking. The structures he proposed — though far larger than any built before — appear as miniatures beside the cities in which we live.

What is, in actuality, a single city stretches southwards from Boston, through New York and Philadelphia, to Washington. That city has devoured wilderness and farmland and it is growing still.

"The teeming human ants are everywhere," says Soleri, "and everywhere are teeming human ants."

"Flatness is killing our cities," says Soleri. Soon they will be dead, for they suffer from a 'flat gigantism' that nails them to the surface of the earth."

Soleri's solution—"3-D Jersey" is an example — are small enough so that man could reach any portion of his city within 15 minutes by foot.

He imagines his cities surrounded not by sprawling suburbs, but "by an uncluttered and open landscape." Within minutes, and without car, the city dweller could leave his home for the wilderness beyond.

Compound Interest on 1 Per Cent

By ART STOTT

The House of Commons was informed earlier this month that one per cent only of the total 1967-68 Canadian Indian student population was enrolled in Grades 12 and 13. In the eye-straining print of Hansard, that seems a small and forlorn statistic. It is also a little misleading. If enrolment were equally divided between the various school years from kindergarten to University entrance, Grade 12 and Grade 13 would claim eight per cent each of the total. In point of fact, the division is not equal. It begins to fall sharply for Indian students after Grade 8.

Stott

Detailed statistics for British Columbia tell a much more encouraging story. The authorities report that almost all school-age Indian children who can get to school stay until Grade 8. There are exceptions, because some of them are located in areas too remote to reach any established classes. The bulk of those attending last year went to schools under the direct jurisdiction of the provincial department of education—roughly two-thirds.

Statistics for last year reveal that of those who had earlier completed Grade 8, 90 per cent went on to Grade 9, 67 per cent to Grade 10, 39 per cent to Grade 11, and 28 per cent to Grade 12, the matriculation year. That is far below the retention rate for the school population as a whole in the province. The figures for the latter show 89 per cent of those who passed Grade 8 going on to Grade 12. But, if comparisons could be make, it would be materially better than was the case a decade or so ago.

Comparisons aren't possible, because a hyper-sensitive authority earlier did not differentiate between Indian pupils and others since such differentiation, it was felt, might be considered discriminatory. Pupils were pupils — and don't single out the Indians. It isn't nice.

It says something for social maturing and for the revived pride of Indians in being Indian that we don't have to bother with such delicacy—at least for statistical purposes—now.

But there's still a fuzzy area. We don't know—or haven't figures to show—how many of the Indian pupils were on academic programs leading to university entrance and how many pursued vocational studies, which may have been discounted in some statistics, with a consequent reduction in the percentage reaching Grade 12.

Frank Calder, British Columbia's first and only Indian MLA, has opinions on the issue drawn from personal observation. He's not too definite, but he believes a large number of the girls reaching secondary school level turn to vocational training about Grade 10. They take courses that admit them to stenographic jobs or equip them to enter hospitals to train as nursing aides. Those who take the academic courses successfully advance to better stenographic jobs or can take full nurse's training. Among the boys, he thinks more take academic courses, though a lot leave school for jobs before they get to Grade 12. And when they matriculate, he loses them. Some, though, show up in places like the Columbia Cellulose plant at Prince Rupert—and a number have progressed beyond the classification of casual labor. They're holding posts of some responsibility and some future.

I asked Frank if the advance in school—the same schools attended by other Canadians—diluted the Indian culture under the flow of Canadian life. His answer was definite: "Forget about Indian culture, or be specific. Do you mean the culture we lost, the nomadic culture of a wandering people, when we were put on reserves, or the culture that arose on the reservation?"

He puts it this way: "We want to retain our identity as Indians. But we want to—and we have to—get along with the other guys too."

Frank Calder is not insensitive to the past, "but we're living here and now and the only thing we can look forward to are the years ahead." To meet the problems of today and tomorrow, he recognizes the advantages of education.

The statisticians have figures to emphasize the importance of that outlook. They'll tell you that Indians, as defined under the Indian Act, represent about 1.6 per cent of the total British Columbia population. Of their number, 59 per cent are under 20 years old. Among non-Indians that age range represents 39 per cent of the population. These figures scarcely threaten "the revenge of the cradle." They do, though, indicate a potential for advance among young people of an age when they should be flexible enough to adapt to the current world around them.

How that potential is developed will depend largely on the interaction of Indians and non-Indians. It won't all be easy and pleasant, but inherent in it is promise—far greater promise than is suggested by the 1 per cent statistic cited in the House of Commons this month.

Richter Says Oilmen Unexcited by Gulf

Nobody in the oil business is very excited about drilling in the Gulf of Georgia, Mines and Petroleum Resources Minister Frank Richter told the legislature Friday.

MLAs from all three parties have expressed apprehension that oil drilling in coastal waters might result in a disaster similar to those in California and Louisiana where wells out of control have harmed the local environment.

Richter was pressed again Friday by opposition MLAs to state that no drilling for oil would be permitted in the gulf, especially in view of a report in the magazine Oil Week that several companies were taking a hard look at possibilities in the area.

No applications have been sent to the provincial government, the minister said, and no permission has been granted.

"It hasn't been proven yet that there are oil resources off the coast," Richter stated.

When Frank Calder (NDP — Atlin) asked that the minister take precautions to ensure that the salmon industry was not destroyed, Richter replied that the government was concerned with the protection of all the province's resources.

Richter said he would take no adamant stand and say "yes" or "no" to questions whether one industry would be developed and others forgotten.

Seismic permits have been granted to various companies to do work off the coast, but only Shell has done any drilling. The company drilled 14 holes some time ago under a permit granted by the federal government, Richter said, but found nothing and left. The claims had lapsed, he added.

Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) asked "how in all conscience" the government could grant seismic exploration permits if it wasn't willing to consider that offshore drilling permits would also be issued.

"Surely you don't expect people to spend money on exploration unless there is an expectation that they will be allowed to drill . . ." he said.

Frank Ney (SC — Nanaimo) urged the government to study legislation that would put the onus on paying for pollution on the polluter. He mentioned suggestions that oil tankers would be sailing the waters of the gulf, and pointed out that California requires the polluter to pay cleanup costs.

The government is giving away the benefits of a non-replenishible resource by not collecting more revenue from mining companies, Leo Nimsick (NDP — Kootenay) charged. He suggested a new look at the industry with elimination of the three-year tax exemption for developers. Calder called for development of better access to the north to aid in opening up the area to exploitation of resources.

The $5.4 million estimates of the department passed after two hours of discussion.

MLAs Jeer Williston For 'Timid' Reforms

The provincial government was criticized Friday for failure to deal strongly enough with people who stake mining claims as a means of acquiring crown land for its real estate value.

Both liberals and New Democrats opposed amendments to the Mineral Processing Act which would enable holders of mineral claims on unreserved crown land to acquire the land at the going rate of real estate values instead of at the traditional rate of $5 an acre.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said the bill would enable promoters of controversial Cypress Bowl, stalled West Vancouver ski development to hold on to the land on the basis of mineral claims staked there earlier.

REVERSIVN BETTER

Resources Minister Ray Williston said the purpose of the bill is to tighten up the rules by which existing mining claims can be used to obtain surface rights of land and said it had been under study for 10 years.

New Democrat MLAs said the minister is being too "timid" in cracking down on abuses of mining claims for real estate purposes and should change the law to allow only lease development of mining operations with the land reverting to the crown when mining is completed.

Barrett said that 60 claims staked in Cypress Bowl can be used as a "dodge" to give the promoters prior rights to the land even though they may not legally have any leases for recreational development purposes.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the Liberals opposed the amendments because they are contrary to the spirit of reform in land policy brought in by the government this year in its revised Land Act.

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said the bill lends itself to "fradulent mining."

Earlier he had asked Mines Minister Frank Richter what improvement has been made to the Cypress Bowl mining claims by the promoters of the ski develelopent on crown land.

Improvements in mining claims must be made to maintain rights to property.

Barrett warned the bill would solidify the giveaway of Cypress Bowl."

Williston said the mining industry has been concerned along with the government about mineral claims being used for real estate pruposes and the bill represented a "compromise" approach to the problem.

New Democrats voted against second reading of a bill establishing what Leo Nimsick (NDP —Kootenay) termed a "tight little empire" under which professional foresters will govern their own profession.

"In the final analysis, it's a self-interested group setting up . . . for their own self-interest. Whether it's doctors, lawyers, foresters . . . any time you set them up into a closed little group you aren't benefiting the people of B.C."

All parties backed second reading of a bill giving the mines minister power to order up to 50 per cent of a mine's production sent to a processing plant, a move primarily intended to encourage establishment of a copper smelter in the province.

DIFFICULTY SEEN

But Dowding said there would likely be "difficulty in the courts" over the power given to the minister by the bill, the Mineral Processing Act.

Approval "in principle" to a grab-bag of amendments to the Municipal Act evoked disappointment from Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) that full voting rights have not yet been extended to tenants in municipalities.

Second reading approval of amendments to the Medical Act brought a defence of self-regulation by the medical profession from Dr. Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) who said Nimsick was incorrect in suggesting the medical profession was "closed shop."

During debate on the mines department estimates New Democrats called for a division to vote against $150,000 expenditure under the Iron Bounty Act of 1960 which they said was nothing more than "welfare" for Cominco Ltd. The Liberals also voted against the expenditure.

Bob Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) said the company made $52 million last year and that it hardly needs the aid under the vote.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, a social worker, said: "Put me on the case. I'll get them off welfare."

To Premier Bennett's jibe that the NDP had supported the bill when it was first passed, Barrett replied that the party would only continue such support to "a struggling little company" and Cominco didn't qualify under that description.

Gaglardi's Alliance Places 1,281 in Jobs

About 25 per cent of persons placed in jobs to date by the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen were recipients of social assistance.

The information was given in as answer to a question to Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi.

The figures indicate that 1,281 persons have been placed in permanent employment since the alliance began operations last year. Another 157 were placed in temporary jobs to January 31.

Permanent employment was given to 282 social assistance recipients and 47 in this category have been given temporary work.

Salaries and wages for the 16 salaried staff totalled $61,000 of the $140,000 goverment grant given last year. A $500,000 grant will be given to the alliance for the 1970-71 fiscal year. About $28,000 of last year's funds were unexpended as of Jan. 31.

R. S. Price is the executive assistant of the alliance and receives a salary of $1,050 per month.

One regional director, D. A. Chapman of Kelowna, receives $850 per month, and four other regional directors in Vancouver, Nanaimo, Kamloops, and Prince George receive $730 per month.

The alliance members are Gaglardi; David Anstey, Coordinator of Adult Technical and Vocational Training, Department of Education; John Melville, Assistant Deputy Minister of Labour; and Norman Brooke, supervisor of the social assistance and rehabilitation division of the department of social welfare.

Labor Wins Byelection

AYR, Scotland (Reuters) — The Labor party won a parliamentary byelection here Friday by an unexpectedly large majority of more than 10,000 votes.

Although the party lost ground to the Conservatives, the voting shift was not as great as had been expected.

James Sillers retained the House of Commons seat by a margin of 10,886 votes over his Conservative and Scottish Nationalist opponents.

Tory candidate Christopher Grave polled 9,778 votes and Nationalist Sam Purdue 7,785 votes.

Sillers' total vote of 20,664 was 1,168 below the Labor majority in the 1966 general election, and it represented a swing of 2.9 per cent to the Conservatives.

This was far below the average 12-per-cent shift to the Tories in byelections last year.

LIQUOR REPORT UNDER STUDY

Recommendations for sweeping reform of provincial liquor laws are getting point-by-point study from the provincial government Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Friday.

He said in an interview he is not in a position to indicate what action will be taken as a result of the report submitted two weeks ago to the government by the Morrow royal commission.

But he noted that "a great many" of the recommendations could be implemented without need for legislation. Changes could be made under regulations of the Government Liquor Act.

Peterson had been asked if the government's legislative program has been completed for this session now that the traditional wrap-up bill — amending and repealing "Certain Provisions of the Statute Law" — had been introduced Friday.

He agreed the bill is traditionally the final one, but said, after discussing the liquor report:

"I would want to make another possible exception in the case of the committee report on automobile insurance — they may come forward with recommendations which require changes in legislation.

The committee has been studying whether provision of existing legislation should be implemented to ban suits for motor vehicle damage in excess of $250 and whether B.C. motorists are getting good value for their car insurance dollar.

Auto Exhaust Control Bill Before Legislature

A bill giving the provincial government power to prohibit sale or operation of motor vehicles without proper pollution control devices was introduced in the legislature Friday.

But no date for proclamation of the bill once it is passed by the legislature, has been set because it will take some time to equip provincial motor vehicle testing staions with exhaust measuring devices, said Attorney-General Peterson.

The standards, for pollution control would remain to be set by regulation by the cabinet. Peterson indicated the regulations would apply only to new vehicles sold so long as no effective means can be found for installing control devices on older vehicles.

Emission control devices are already being built into new American cars and those built in Ontario which has copied U.S. regulations.

Peterson said the legislative authority is being established now to control vehicle exhaust "as soon as possible" and "as much as possible."

Anyone contravening the regulations would be subject to a fine of not less than $50 and not more than $500.

Another amendment to the motor Vehicle Act will make an automobile dealer responsible for tampering with odometers by employees. Peterson said the change results from a recent vancouver court case in which a dealer was ruled free of responsibility for the actions of an employee.

Another change will put the onus on the accused to prove that he possesses a motor vehicle liability insurance card, to correct a loophole through which some drivers without the mandatory insurance coverage were escaping the full penalty of the law.

The bill raises from $100 to $200 the amount of vehicle damage that may be repaired without a certificate of vehicle damage from the police. The certificate is still to be required for any amount of damage in an accident involving personal injury or death.

Vehicles making way for a police car, ambulance, fire truck or similar emergency vehicle with red light flashing will be able to pull over to the nearest side of the road rather than to the right-hand side as currently required by the act.

Student Scientists Air Ideas

Twenty-six high school students will give up two days of the Easter holiday to present papers at the annual University of Victoria Humanities and Sciences Symposium April 3 and 4.

Grade 11 and 12 students all over the province were invited to submit papers on a topic of their choice.

The 26 to be presented represent the best of 162 submitted. Papers cover topics in natural sciences, social sciences and arts. There are samples of creative writing and a film.

Fifty-four runners-up will attend as observers and take part in discussions on the work presented.

Also in the audience will be 25 teachers who sponsored top projects by students.

Local participants include Bernice McGowan of St. Anne's, whose topic is "Religious Strife in Northern Ireland," and Bruce Turkington of Oak Bay senior, "Computer Analysis of Planetary Motion."

Controls Set For Pollution

CAMPBELL RIVER — A total of $2,000,000 will be spent on 15 projects related to control pollution at the Elk Falls Co. pulp and paper mill at Duncan Bay near here.

Mill manager Janius Sapp told the Campbell River Pollution Control Society this week the figure did not include additional costs for operation of the proposed facilities.

The proposed new anti-pollution equipment will do much to improve the quality of the water and air in the district, he said.

Sapp also said the mill plans to separate and treat all domestic waste. This would involve construction of its own sewage treatment plant, at an estimated cost of $250,000.

Different Picture of 'Mutineers' Seen

By LEROY AARONS

LONG BEACH, Calif. (WP) "Dearest Love . . .

"When the ship gets back, around the 23rd of April, I'll take my test for 2nd electrician . . . I can apply for a job at Todd Shipyard in San Pedro. They pay 4.00 and something-hour, plus I'll be home with you and Jr. By the way, you had better not have the baby until I get there . . ."

These were Alvin Lenoard Glatkowski's words to his wife, written Feb. 24 from munitions ship Columbia Eagle, just 14 days before the Eagle was hijacked by two seamen and forced to put into port in Cambodia.

Named Mutineers

Glatkowski, 20, of Long Beach and Clyde William McKay, 25, of Escondido, Calif., have been named as the men who took over the ship enroute with war supplies to Vietnam.

Both young men were described by crew members as "Pill popping and marijuana blowing hippies" who had acted in protest of the Vietnam war.

Conversations with their families evoke a different picture.

Glatkowski is described as a neat, hard-working youth, indecisive and easily led, who is against the war in Vietnam but did not participate in anti-war movements. McKay comes through as a well dressed, studious young man who speaks several languages. Both men had plans for the future.

'Hard to Believe'

"It's hard to believe," said Florence Glatkowski, Alvin's 19-year-old wife, who is expecting a child in five weeks. "He wanted to come back and settle down, and he had everything to come back for."

"Alvin always mentioned he was against the war, but he never participated in peace marches or anything like that," said Florence's mother Betty Longenecker, who was interviewed with her daughter in their modest three-bedroom home in Long Beach. "He likes to debate a lot. But he was wishy-washy. He never could make up his mind about things."

Immature

Added Florence, a petite, pretty girl with auburn hair and brown eyes, "He was immature in a lot of ways and very easily influenced. A follower, not a leader."

Neither mother nor daughter knew much about Glatkowski's past.

Florence was introduced to him in July, 1969, by her brother, who worked at the time with Glatkowski at a local gasoline station. The couple was married in September, and a week later Glatowski went to work as a maintenance man in an apartment at 2 dollars an hour.

"He never told me that much about himself," said Florence, "we never talked about it." She did know that her husband had been going to sea since he was 16, and that his mother lived in Norfolk, VA., with his stepfather.

Impressed

At the apartment house, not far from the Longeneckers', administrator Roscoe Stroud remembered he was impressed with Glatkowski when the youth came to answer an employment ad.

"I thought, here is a young man who wants to get his feet on the ground, who wants to settle down and be a family man. But, like many other young people, he didn't know where he was going or why. Frankly, I don't think he was capable of doing what they say he did."

Hope for Future

Glatkowski worked at the building for three months, then decided he could make more money going back to sea. He left at the end of December and signed on the Columbia Eagle, which embarked from Long Beach on Feb. 19. His letters from on board — which, ironically, arrived here the day of the hijacking — were filled with love for his wife and talk of hopes for the future.

Clyde (Billy) McKay had plans, too. His mother, Mrs. Franklin Cave, told the Los Angeles Times her son was planning on taking an examination next month to become an engineering officer.

"I knew he wouldn't stay away and miss that," she said, adding, "He was never a rebel and if he knew anything of politics he never told us anything about it."

Bookworm

Billy's great aunt, Ruth White, with whom he often stayed in San Diego, described him in a telephone interview as a "bookworm" type who learned several languages.

"Billy is tall and clean-shaven, and when they say 'beatnik' on him, no one I know can believe it," she said. "I saw him at the end of January and he was planning to come back and go to engineering school in Oakland so he could get on a better class ship. We did discuss the munitions ship as being more dangerous than the others."

McKay had been a merchant seaman for about six years and had been to Vietnam several times, his aunt said. "He had sense enough not to get dragged into the type of thing they said he was."

Both Mrs. White and the Longeneckers said they had been interrogated by the FBI.

Madrigal Singers From California In Free Concert

Sponsored by University of Victoria department of music, the Beverly Hills High School Madrigal Singers and orchestra will perform in Victoria Monday.

The concert will take place in the MacLaurin auditorium at 12:30 p.m.

The Madrigal group was chosen last year to sing at the western division convention of the Music Educators National Conference in Hawaii.

Monday's program will be varied, including traditional madrigals and contemporary works. The orchestral repertoire includes music by Mozart, Copland, Bach, Vivaldi and Sibelius.

The concert is open to the public without admission charge.

"GOLDEN NUGGET AWARD" as Jeweller of the Year is being presented to Ray Rose (at right) by Mr. H. Thomas Robus, President of the Canadian Jewellers' Association at their annual convention in Toronto. The award is made to the jeweller nominated as being the best representative of the industry in dealing with the buying public.

Announcing the fastest beetle ever made.

You won't be able to spot the big change in this year's VW if you just pass one on the highway; but you might get an inkling when one passes you.

The 1970 VW has a bigger engine.

(It's now 1600 cc.'s)

And that means the beetle is peppier.

(Not only can a Volkswagen get you into a tight spot on a parking lot, it can also get you out of a tight spot on the freeway.)

How we did it is interesting: we made the engine bigger without adding any weight. So while it pushes the Volkswagen harder, it doesn't push itself any harder.

(The VW engine revs so low, that while you're doing 50, it isn't going like sixty.)

One of the reasons why Volkswagen engines with 200,000 miles on them are not unheard of.

Still, a little more horsepower hardly makes the bug a Beast.

A new Volkswagen won't show anybody you've arrived.

It'll just make sure you get there.

Insects Most Persistent

By JAMES CLARKE

The list of man's natural enemies is large. It includes 400 species of wild creatures, most of which cause human deaths frequently. This is quite apart from the numerous domestic animals such as rabid dogs, berserk cattle and bolting horses which, in Western Europe alone, cause 800 deaths a year.

The most persistent man-killing creatures in the world are insects; man's struggle with the insect world has still not been conclusively won, although it could have been won decades ago if we had spent as much on fighting the insect plagues as we have spent on fighting each other.

First of Series

Only insects kill more men than man himself.

Although I do not intend to dwell on man as man-killer, the perspective would be distorted if no mention were made of it. In the last three generations, man has with calculation and malice killed at the average rate of three-quarters of a million people a year.

In the last war he killed 22 million. Six million were exterminated in one carefully planned program of genocide. At the end of the war, using his most effective weapon to date, man killed 70,000 in a single explosion and left tens of thousands mortally burned.

In individual acts of murder for gain or passion, his annual toll of his own species must be in excess of 150,000.

Next among the killers come the snakes. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimated in 1954 that these creatures kill 40,000 people a year, 70 per cent of them in Asia. Some authorities believe the figure should be nearer 60,000. The trouble is that it is in remote, undeveloped areas where written records do not exist that one often finds a high proportion of snakebites.

If there is one thing that will put many dangerous animals off guard, and even keep them away, it is the human voice. Richard Perry, an authority on the tiger, says: "Man's noise was particularly upsetting (to the tiger) and noise is the one deterrent that will keep the most confirmed man-eaters at bay." Africans shout to keep hippopotamuses, elephants and wild pigs off their crops at night and a sudden shout has often been enough to confuse a charging rhinoceros.

Just how dangerous are the wilds? Anybody who has grown used to living in the African bush, the Indian jungle, the towering Rocky Mountans or the snowy wastes of the Arctic will tell you how he feels a great deal safer there than in the cities.

Most animals have a set "flight distance"—the distance at which they retreat when they feel a man has approached near enough. F. J. Pootman (Secrets of the Animal World) had a go at measuring them and concluded that lions retreat when a man gets to within 80 yards, elephants at 150 yards (in open country), crocodiles at 150 yards (when discovered out of water), hyenas at 21 feet and lizards at three feet. Most antelope rush off at about 200 yards—this would probably go for the buffalo too.

It is possible to run bodily into some animals in certain types of country. Men have walked into dozing elephants and rhino and on one occasion I witnessed a hunter run slap into a lioness. He got the bigger fright and bolted like a startled rabbit.

Generally speaking then, most animals would rather flee than face man. The wilds are, in normal circumstances, safer than built-up areas, where there are so many ways of losing one's life and where urban man is a dangerous predator.

Once one realizes the rate at which animals are killing twentieth-century man in spite of our awesome array of weapons, one can get an inkling what it must have been like before we had guns to shoot man-eaters or medicines to fight the diseases carried by insects.

Competition, from insects, reptiles, mammals, birds and fishes, must at times have been nearly overwhelmed the human race. Only our astounding capacity for reproduction could have saved us from annihilation.

History Up for Auction In MGM Studio 'Cleanup'

HOLLYWOOD — The Metro Goldwyn Mayer movie studio, plagued by financial woes, is preparing to sell a precious possession — its past.

In a gigantic auction, scheduled to start in May and last at least three months, the sound stages of the huge lot will open to the public and bidding will begin.

Virtually every item saved up from MGM's 56 years of movie-making will be on sale: Greta Garbo's white satin chaise from Camille ... The Unsinkable Molly Brown's brass bed ... a loveseat graced by Norma Shearer and Tyrone Power in Marie Antoinette ... and thousands more.

Some 50 employees of the David Weisz auctioneering company have started tagging and cataloguing the notalgia-tinged treasures.

An MGM spokesman said the studio will continue making movies and television shows, but that the sets, crammed in dozens of warehouses, haven't been used in years and won't be needed in the future.

Weisz wouldn't say what he paid MGM, but commented, "MGM must have spent $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 for all this stuff."

So far, he's catalogued more than 5,000 pieces of furniture; 900 guns, spears, arrows and other weapons; 250 vehicles including Ben Hur's chariot and the Model A Ford used by Mickey Rooney in the Andy Hardy series, and 350,000 costumes—among them Judy Garland's Wizard of Oz dress and the tap shoes of George Murphy, the one-time hoofer who now is a U.S. senator.

The worth of some items, said Weisz, is unpredictable. Who knows the value of an imitation spaceship? Or a replica in red satin of the papal processional chair? Or the paddlewheeler used in Showboat?

Adjudicator Vital In Music Festival

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Although emphasis in the Greater Victoria Music Festival is gradually shifting away from the strongly competitive, the role of the adjudicator is still vital.

In fact, it is perhaps more important than ever. For in the non-competitive class — and several of these have schools' section — his analytical remarks are the kernel of the situation.

The schools section begins the two-week festival this year. Opening date is April 13, when dance groups and bands, instrumental solo and ensemble classes, and school choirs will fill the week.

Vocal solo and ensemble, piano, organ and speech arts take up the second week.

First of the 10 adjudicators to appear will be Mrs. Marcia Snider. Mrs. Snider is president of the Vancouver International Dance Association and a part-time lecturer on folk dance at the University of British Columbia.

She obtained degrees in the subject at Bennington College, Calif., and the University of Wisconsin.

Recorder classes on the first day of the festival will be adjudicated by Dr. Frank Gamble, also of UBC and one of the Pacific Northwest's most outstanding experts on this popular antique instrument.

For this years' expanded string sessions the adjudicator will be one of Canada's best-known musicians, Murray Adaskin.

Now head of the music department of the University of Saskatchewan, Adaskin is a composer whose many commissions have included an opera for the CBC and a composition for the inaugural concert of the resident orchestra at Ottawa's National Arts Centre.

In July, 1966, he was appointed to a three-year term on the Canada Council and recently received the Canadian Centennial medal.

School choirs will come under the critical evaluation of another UBC music faculty member, Douglas Talney.

Associate professor of music theory and history, with degrees in conducting from Lewis and Clark College, Portland, and the University of Southern California, he has had wide experience in conducting choral and string ensembles.

Accordion classes will again be adjudicated by Crawford Clarke, an experienced ad-adjudicator who is president of the Nanaimo Musicians Association.

Dr. William Revelli, a professor of music at the University of Michigan and an active band clinician and adjudicator, has been forced to make a last-minute adjustment in his schedule and will not be able to be in Victoria until April 20.

As a result band and brass and woodwind classes programmed for the first week will have to be set over to the first three days of the second.

Guitar classes will have Vancouver guitarist Chris Jordan as adjudicator, and in the following second week of the festival, British adjudicators Ranken Bushby (vocal and piano) and Sidney Harrison (piano), will join the panel.

BE WISE ... IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

A Bid to Rejuvenate Our Fossilized Politics

By GEORGE OAKE

Canadian political patterns are often as well delineated as the lines on an elderly senator's face. Both are maps of old age. And surprisingly enough — or is it so surprising? — there have been few modern attempts to analyse the lines that form the pattern.

THE PATTERN OF POLITICS by Charles Taylor. McClelland and Stewart. Paperback. $2.95.

TAYLOR

Perhaps it is significant that two men with dissimilar backgrounds and opposite political philosophies would come to the same conclusions. In 1967 Alberta's then premier, E. C. Manning, called for a political realignment in Canada; that is a scrapping of the traditional national political parties for a two-party system of the left and right.

In 1970 Charles Taylor, national vice-president of the New Democratic Party and a possible candidate for the leadership of his party, says essentially the same thing.

No one listened to Manning in 1967. But much has happened in the intervening three years. We are already seeing the politics of polarization at work in Quebec. Some observers feel the same thing is happening in Ontario and will manifest itself in the next Ontario provincial election. Perhaps.

I re-read sections of this book while flying six miles above the Rocky Mountains. Looking down the long carpeted aisle I saw four long-haired unshaven young men in jeans and buckskin discussing our corrupt society as they sipped martinis.

While it is certainly a subjective judgment, I couldn't help thinking that these indignant young men would never polarize anything save the relative merits of martinis and margaritas.

Taylor seems to agree: "I find it hard to believe that an effective agent of the political polarization of our society will come out of university rebellions."

Then where will the political polarization come from? Taylor says from "all of us." But even a cursory glance around the airplane at all the businessmen in conservative blue suits reading the Readers Digest and consulting their briefcases made me doubt the author's vague conclusion.

Of course the fuselage of one jetliner is not Canada, and as Taylor says, the unorganized poor are a thing of the past—in part because their lot is steadily becoming less tolerable. On the basis of the 1961 census the Economic Council of Canada sets Canada's poor at 4.7 million persons or 29 per cent of the population. These people are mad. All around them they see an unattainable level of consumer possessions.

But the political hinge in Canada, according to Taylor, is with the comfortable working class, white collar workers, reasonably prosperous farmers and so on. This group of affluent non-elites can swing the political door from consensus to polarization.

The question is, will they?

MANNING

The author presents an articulate case based on a kind of yearning sociological speculation:

"In the capitalist West, industrial society has grown up without planning and without the imprint of any collective purpose. There is little to celebrate collectively because the most intense and important purposes have been private, the result of private enterprise . . . The atrophy of public meanings thus seems to stem from the rise of industrial society itself."

This lonely crowd of Canadians tends to focus on the political process. More often than not their quest for meaning and involvement is met with ritual.

That's where the New Young Leader makes his entrance. "The function of the NYL in rejuvenating his country at the centre cannot help but remind us of the role of the Rain King in some primitive religions. In this way, the present cult of the NYL is, like nationalism, a reversion to—or perhaps a parody of—an earlier form of sacralization. But fortunately, we have not yet got so far as reinstating the annual sacrifice."

If that sounds a little cute and catty we can forgive Taylor because he was defeated in the 1968 election by a guy called Pierre Trudeau in Mount Royal constituency.

And interestingly enough, Taylor's proposals for rejuvenating the country are not far from Pierre Trudeau's promises. (Both men have similar backgrounds. Charles Taylor is a Montreal native of English and French parentage. He has a PhD from Oxford where he founded the New Left Review and has headed the World University Service in Vienna. At present he teaches philosophy at McGill University.

To strengthen both poles of the political spectrum Taylor sees regional governments—"real authorities must be elected by universal suffrage," even at the village or neighborhood level.

At the national level: "English Canada remains poised between the tempting prospects of original creative change and the old fears of innovation."

Taylor sees three important national goals. The first is the building of a bicultural society. Secondly, as an advanced, very rich country, in good standing in the West, and yet also trusted in Africa and Asia (though virtually unknown in Latin America), Canada can do certain jobs of contacting and mediation which few other powers are well-equipped to do. We should play our United Nations role to the hilt and sink no further into satellite status beside the United States.

The third goal is the creation of a more egalitarian society. "Canada suffers from great inequalities, not just between different social classes, but also between regions—and this certainly puts a strain on our unity."

For some Canadians these goals are distasteful. Their first reaction will be, "yeah . . . another damn socialist." Perhaps. But certainly a pragmatic one.

The author admits that it is sheer utopianism to think of freeing ourselves totally from dependence on the United States. And towards the end of the book he even doubts his own hypothesis. ". . . the powerful hold of the corporate mystique . . . and the attendant deference towards elites, the sense of powerlessness, which have kept the radical change within modest bounds. It is this that makes me seriously question whether a political movement of the left can ever succeed in fully polarizing Canadian politics without being more than a political movement."

This is an important book. Much of what Taylor says has been articulated elsewhere but he has woven a Canadian fabric from disparate threads and whether you agree with him or not, he makes a cogent case, which is more than can be said for many Canadian politicians.

However, this reporter's ingrained skepticism after a little more than two years of covering everything from the invocation of a United Church Minister to the invocation of Pierre Trudeau in Ottawa's Civic Centre takes me back to my jet plane ride.

On the port wing there is the social justice of Charles Taylor; to starboard the private enterprise of E. C. Manning. But the manna of the affluent comes straight down the middle; that's the way the plane goes and the long-haired students and conservative businessmen all have a ticket to ride.

Books

Some Canadian Classics Reproduced in Paperback

The continuing trend to series or anthologies of Canadian writing in paperback is illustrated by some recent releases from Toronto publishing houses.

Clarke, Irwin's paperback series, introduced in 1964 to provide inexpensive reprints of outstanding hard-cover books, now includes The Sam Slick Anthology. This revives Thomas Chandler Haliburton's prankish hero of the 19th century in a 264-page collection of tales from the popular Clockmaker series plus collections from The Attache, Sam Slick's Wise Saws and Modern Instances, and Nature and Human Nature.

The selection and introduction are by R. E. Watters and W. S. Avis, both professors of English at Royal Military College of Canada. Haliburton's 19th century text has been edited for modern readers.

Clarke, Irwin also has released a new addition, Poetry, to its Folios for Writers series. These represent a new approach in the teaching of English composition and are designed to stimulate a creative response from the students. The four folios now available can be combined in a two-year school program or used individually by teachers.

Poetry is by Bruce Vance of the Toronto board of education's language study centre, and is illustrated with photographs by Michael Milne. Other titles in the series are Description, Narration and Exposition.

The New Canadian Library, McClelland and Stewart's paperback series of Canadian classics, will mark 1970, the Stephen Leacock centennial, with publication of the famed humorist's Last Leaves. One of Leacock's nieces, Barbara Nimmo, wrote an affectionate preface to the original edition, published after Leacock's death, and this is included in the New Canadian Library reprint. The well-known Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town will also be published this year in the series.

Other New Canadian Library reprints for 1970 include works by novelist Margaret Laurence, Sinclair Ross, Leonard Cohen, Gabrielle Roy, Frederick P. Grove and poets Malcolm Ross and Milton Wilson.

Ryerson Press has published the first two volumes of a paperback anthology series under the heading Critical Views on Canadian Writers, edited by Michael Gnarowski of Sir George Williams University.

The first volume is on poet E. J. Pratt and includes assessment of his work by such writers as John Sutherland, Northrop Frye and A. J. M. Smith. It is edited by David G. Pitt, like Pratt a Newfoundlander by birth. Professor of English at Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld., he is currently writing a biography of Pratt.

The second volume is The McGill Movement, with reviews of the works of poets A. J. M. Smith, F. R. Scott and Leo Kennedy, whose writings at McGill University in the 1930s were a major influence in the Canadian poetry scene. This volume is edited by Peter Stevens, associate professor of English at the University of Windsor and poetry editor of Canadian Forum. (The Canadian Press)

MRS. CORETTA KING

Wife in Whirlwind

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Since the assassination of her husband in 1968, Coretta King has shunned almost all press interviews, preferring to protect for her own book the first detailed recounting of her life with civil rights leader and Nobel Laureate Martin Luther King Jr.

Her wishes are understandable, for who was more privy to the private thoughts, the doubts, the philosphical agonizing of Dr. King than his wife? Who knows better the impact of so public a life as his on his own family?

This book is at its best when it concerns itself with such matters and with the childhood of the strong-willed author herself.

Married to another man, Coretta King might well have worn the pants in the family. She as much as says so in this book. When she was a child, her mother advised: "You get an education and try to be somebody. Then you won't have to be kicked around by anybody, and you won't have to depend on anyone for your livelihood — not even on a man."

She did get an education, moving from rural second-rate schools and occasional poverty near Marion, Ala., to earn a degree at Antioch College and do advance work at the Boston Conservatory.

On a blind date, she met a young minister studying at Boston University. He talked about marriage on their first date. Martin King was under family pressure to marry, she was to find, and he himself seemed to regard it as something needing prompt attention so he could get on with his work.

MY LIFE WITH MARTIN LUTHER KING JR. by Coretta Scott King. Holt, Rinehart. $8.50.

He was not being cold-blooded; he was just relieved to find his ideal woman. She was unimpressed at first and reluctant to abandon her career, but the power of his personality won her over.

Yet the author comes through strongest not when she is recapitulating these events, but when she is telling what it was like to be a wife and a mother in the midst of a social whirlwind.

Diver Digs Up Alaska History

By TORCHY ANDERSON

Virgil Burford told this story — part of his life — to Walt Morley. Between them they produced a fascinating documentary about life on the Alaska coast.

The easy, friendly tone of Burford has been admirably retained by Morley. One suspects they both love that Alaska country and the story might have been told at the far end of the bar or in the cosy, coffee-scented cabin of a seiner on a night when the Williwaw howled outside and the rain drummed on the windows.

Burford went to Alaska with one dollar and his ticket. He had never, probably, been nearer a salmon than a can, never met an eel with teeth long and sharp enough to cut his air hose, never confronted a shark in the confines of a fish-trap, never dived where octopus were big enough and ugly enough to hold a diver captive. But he met them all as a diver in Prince William Sound. Valdez, Sitka, Cordova these were his towns.

NORTH TO DANGER by Walt Morley and Virgil Burford. Caxton Printers, Caldwell, Idaho. $5.

Burford became a diver when that last buck was gone and when, as a deck helper to a diver, he learned that they paid $100 a dive.

With a little advice and a great deal of nerve — and slightly hung-over — he applied to a cannery boss for the job. He got 200 pounds of second-hand diving suit and began practising. On his first dive the air vent jammed and he came close to closing his underwater career there and then.

He soon learned the prime lesson of commercial diving: never take anything for granted. His chief work, other than occasional salvage dives, was the constant inspection of the vast fish-traps where thousands of salmon began their final journey to the steam-table.

The fish-trap was a large underwater structure of piling and netting. At the beginning of the season they had to be repaired and rebuilt. In mid-season fishing a break in the structure meant the loss of thousands of fish, and dollars. Burford policed the traps.

Despite their current theatrical runs killer whales in Alaska waters earned the respect of every fisherman and diver. They have a mouthful of deadly teeth and an uncertain disposition. To go underwater, with a thin air hose between you and a compressor you hoped would keep compressing, to free a killer tangled in the netting was a job to make a man wonder why he was such a fool.

Sea lions were a nuisance too. Burford was first introduced to one of these 200-pound individuals which insisted on nosing his face-plate. But he got to like sea lions.

Not so with giant eels. His first eel was a monster — well, it looked that way — which bared his formidable teeth at a distance of six inches. All the diver could think of was that those teeth could do to an air line. Giant octopus came to call. You could usually wait out an octopus; eventually they would go away.

A diving partner made a dive looking for a wreck in a place notorious for giant octopus. He stabbed one with a pike-pole but it fastened on his legs.

He was in a panic and Burford and two others, tending pump and telephone, could not budge him when he called to be pulled up. They finally got him up by starting the boat. When he emerged the octopus was draped completely over his helmet and still had hold of his body. Of all the ugly things he saw underwater the octopus was the one that made Burford shiver.

One of the boys asked Burford, after a touch-and-go emergency with the air line, why he did not use an aqualung. He had thought about it, but he could stay down much longer, work better, have tools lowered to him and give instructions by telephone with the old diving suit with its 20-pound boots.

On the side Burford hunted giant Brown bears and spent a couple of months in the shadow on Mount McKinley collecting a poke of 20 ounces of gold.

Here's a "Western" that has a little of everything including the fine art of fish pirating.

Poetic Glimpse Into Dark Past

By STEVE HUME

Twenty years ago in a Danish bog, two men cutting peat unearthed the contorted body of a man who appeared to have been strangled to death.

The rope was still around his neck.

The corpse was a mystery to police, but not to the professor of prehistory and archaeology from Aarhus University, who had been invited along.

His name was P. V. Glob, and he confirmed the early suspicions. The man had been murdered by strangulation—2,000 years before.

Tollund Man, as he was subsequently named, died when Caesar was raiding Britain, when the Roman Eagles were methodically sweeping through Gaul and Iberia.

But while the find sparked a flurry of interest in the press, it created no more than a minor ripple in the academic world of prehistoric archaeology.

THE BOG PEOPLE: Iron-Age Man Preserved, by P. V. Glob, trans. Rupert Bruce-Mitford, Cornell University Press. $8:50.

In the 200 years preceding the Tollund find, about 700 specimens of preserved or partially preserved prehistoric human remains have been found in European peat bogs.

What interested Glob was that nearly all of them appeared to have died unpleasant and violent deaths. He began to formulate a theory around the idea of ritual human sacrifice to some early Iron Age god or goddess.

Painstaking work went into the researching of the problem over a 15-year span, and in the process Glob became known as a world expert on Iron Age man in northern Europe.

But despite Glob's tireless studies and evaluations of data, no comprehensive work on the subject of the peat bog finds was available, either to archaeological scholars or interested laymen.

Then, in 1962, Glob received a plaintive letter from a class of English schoolgirls requesting information on the Tollund find. That he relates, triggered his decision to write a book about the Bog People.

Three years later a Danish edition appeared, but it was not until 1969 that an English translation was available — thanks to Cornell University Press and Rupert Bruce-Mitford, Keeper of British and Medieval Antiquities in the British Museum.

Glob's 200-page book, short as anthropological texts go, is a major work in the discipline of archaeology. It is to the publisher's everlasting credit that The Bog People was recognized for what it was.

Cornell University Press has done a smashing job on the Bruce-Mitford translation. It is printed on heavy gloss paper which lends itself perfectly to the 76 impressive plates that accompany Glob's text.

And the translator has captured the easy brilliance of Glob's presentation. For the Danish professor writes like anything but an academic anthropologist. His style is clear and crisp, and the book carries an almost poetic insight into the dark deaths of sacrificial Iron-Age men.

"Yet they were made of earth and fire as we,
The selfsame forces set us in our mould:
To life we woke from all that makes the past.
We grow on Death's tree as ephemeral flowers."

Glob quotes poet Thoger Larsen to begin the book. The verse sets the tone for The Bog People, and the author is faithful to it throughout, never sliding into archaeological jargon or the rhetoric of anthropology.

And yet there is no lack of detail to sustain the most nit-picking of scholars. He describes minutely the moss, the peat, the water action — everything in fact associated with the Tollund find.

But it is done with a delicate and touching sense of respect for the dead men, alien as their situation was.

"The dead and the sleeping, how they resemble one another," he quotes beneath a peaceful photograph of Tollund Man lying in his peat grave, a serene expression on his face.

With a poet's eye, Glob captures the essence of sacrifice, the continuity of life and death, the cyclical nature of things.

He sums it up with a final paragraph that is moving and somehow leaves one feeling guilty — something that good shouldn't end a book about archaeology.

"The Tollund Man and many of the other bog men, after their brief time as god and husband of the goddess — the time of the spring feasts and the wanderings through the villages — fulfilled the final demand of religion.

"They were sacrificed and placed in the sacred bogs; and consummated by their deaths the rites which ensured for the peasant community luck and fertility in the coming year.

"At the same time, through their sacrificial deaths, they were themselves consecrated for all time to Nerthus, goddess of fertility — to Mother Earth, who in return so often gave their faces her blessing and preserved them through the millenia."

With the Metis in No-Man's Land

By LORRAINE PARSONS

Suspended in a no man's land, trapped by their own resignation and bound by white and Indian indifference, for the Metis the only reality is frustration.

The Humback is a story of a people who have been virtually neglected by society since the days of the Louis Riel uprisings, when for a short span in Canadian history they were actually taken seriously.

THE HUMBACK by Mort Forer. McClelland and Stewart. $7.95.

Author Mort Forer worked for several years as the lone government social worker in southeastern Manitoba, and he writes of the Humback, a rambling Metis settlement with a grim and realistic insight.

The story is woven around a central figure, the massive Toinette, mother of 17 children fathered by several men. But it reaches out to engulf the entire population of the Humback as they fight for their survival against overwhelming odds to destroy the only way of life they understand.

Forer shows great understanding of the motivation of these people, their resignation and acceptance of fate.

He is a master of words and when he cannot find the exact one he wants, completes an image in Gerard Manley Hopkins style by making up his own. For this reason The Humback is a delight to explore for the pure value of its word invention.

FORER

But it is definitely not a book for the faint or weak of heart. Forer spares no details, takes no precautions to tastefully describe the distasteful, and occasionally hits hard at the reader.

No one can emerge from this book feeling self-righteous. Indeed if the reader identifies with the character or at least accepts his part of the blame that in a "civilized" society, people are forced to live as they do in the Humback, it takes him a little time to regain his self-respect, which is, in the way we understand it, so totally lacking in the inhabitants of the settlement.

Forer, a free-lance writer for CBC in Toronto, writes with drive and force, in the hope that "the Humback and all its people may find a new life outside my imagination."

TALENTED THEATRE TECHNICIAN

He looks like a first or second-year university student, age about 19, or at the most, 21.

In fact he's 29, holds a Master's degree from Ohio's Miami University, and is married with three young children.

His name is Bob Field and, since September, he is Uvic theatre division's technical director.

He also lectures, giving an elective course in stage lighting and a basic introductory course in theatre techniques.

The project with which he and the students are involved at the moment is Turcaret. This is the 18th century high comedy by the French playwright Alain-Rene Lesage which will be part of Victoria Fair this summer.

It is the first of three plays to be prepared because it will be premiered April 8-11 at McPherson Playhouse.

Mounting this period comedy calls for quantities of lavish and ornate furnishings, properties and objects d'art.

More than that, the big, beautiful set designed by Robert Cothran calls for 66 framed paintings of all shapes and sizes to be hung on every inch of wall space.

This is where Bob Field's particular expertise comes in. He and the theatre students have taken up the challenge with zest.

Sixty-six handsome frames constructed of wood, celastic, fibreglass and a molded plastic resin, are stacked in the prop room awaiting the finishing touch of antiqued gold paint.

In another room about half the number of pictures are ready for the frames. These are being prepared by means of projecting reproductions onto heavy paper and then drawing and filling in the color over the projected picture in a sort of variation on the paint-by-numbers idea.

"It's not really difficult," says Field. "Once the students have been introduced to the materials they have no problems in producing the articles."

On the workbench beside him is a guitar. Not an ordinary guitar, but a lovely, slender instrument with an indication of rich ornamentation traced on its white pine belly and in the delicate filigree rose set in the centre.

It's a perfectly proportioned and practical prop which will be strung and played by a member of the Turcaret cast. Knock on the wood and there is a fine resonance in it.

Field has made it from scratch, including the delicate carved ornaments. He has never studied instrument making. But an 18th century version of the guitar was demanded.

"So I just read a book," he says.

Some of his professional experience was gained at the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre in Minneapolis, some with a theatre in Baltimore.

It was at a theatre conference that he met Dr. Ralph Allen who is directing Turcaret, and heard of the opening at Uvic. He has not regretted coming.

"I like it here very much," he says. "And I have definitely not worked with better stage design and construction anywhere I've been."

He foresees expansion of the technical aspects with more skills being adopted such as welding metals and usage of plastic foams and other new, versatile materials.

"These things are not really costly," he says, "nor difficult to master if the interest is there. That's the key."

Judging by the many hands at work, Bob Field's students have grasped the key and are playing a big role in the backstage expertise that is the base of that pyramid whose beauty will be revealed when the lights go up on Turcaret.

ORNAMENTATION that will embellish the 18th century guitar he has made for Victoria Fair 70, is demonstrated by technical director Bob Field for benefit of stage carpenter, Lyle Laycock.

Concert Proved Conservatory Worth

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

It has not taken six years to prove conclusively what some of us suspected and hoped might be the case when the Victoria School of Music was incorporated in May, 1964.

In fact it became clear to the close observer at least two years ago that what was happening was likely to exceed our best expectations.

That was when Robin Wood had settled in as principal and what Rodney Webster has described as "the unique affiliation" with the University of Victoria began.

A year later further progress was made possible by the City of Victoria when the school, which had become a conservatory, moved into Craigdarroch Castle.

Tpyical Talent

This week an event took place that was designed to highlight for the public the typical achievement of students working under the conservatory roof, as well as the professional performance standard of the faculty.

It was a representative concert presented at Newcombe Auditorium, the first and most significant of a lengthy spring series.

First half of the program was presented by the students who ranged from astonishing four-year-old pianist Geoffrey Jay to musically mature and brilliant Linn Hendry and Susan de Burgh.

Representative of the 70 University of Victoria students who are doing their practical instrumental work at the conservatory was the quintet of wind players.

The ensemble consists of Jan Pearce, flue; Ian Franklin, oboe; Donna Zapf, clarinet; Geoff Pearce, horn, and Alan Denike, bassoon.

Good Direction

Violinists Nancy Meredith with Linn Hendry at the piano, and Stephen Calder with Wendy Stofer (both pianists also appeared as soloists), soprano Lynden Felton and young pianist Maudie van Klaveren, made contributions to this part of the concert that were impressive not only for notable talent but for intelligently artistic direction.

In the faculty half of the program, soprano Catherine Young with Winifred Scott at the piano, performed a vivid Spanish suite by de Falla.

So excellent is the relationship between these two musicians that one might suppose that they had been working together for years rather than months.

This then was a capsule impression of the conservatory — the total musical environment it provides for its students, the fact that young musicians can go all the way through to a Bachelor of Music degree in this city, encountering along the way as fine tuition as is available anywhere.

If a thing is worth having — a conservatory, a festival, a symphony — then it is worth the effort and expenditure to make it the best possible.

"You have to work for what you want," says Rodney Webster.

Is the Victoria Conservatory theratened? Yes, because like all institutions of its kind, it is obviously impossible to raise fee structures to a level where they would meet all operational expenses.

Needs Assistance

Says Webster in his official report: "Although the (present) operational deficit can be somewhat reduced it cannot be eliminated unless the conservatory becomes much larger or lowers its standards considerably — neither of these courses being desirable.

"The conservatory will, therefore, continue to require financial assistance from various governments and private sources.

"The trip that I have taken has convinced me more than ever that the Victoria Conservatory of Music is worthy of such support and that it should go to individuals and organizations for funds, not with a cap-in-hand attitude, but rather with the attitude that it should be supported for its merits and as an institution in which the city should take great pride."

On Stage Next Week

The opening tonight at Langham Court Theatre of the Eric Nicol comedy, Like Father Like Fun, will initiate a run that continues each night throughout next week. Edna Kowalchuk directs a strong Theatre Guild cast. Curtain time is 8:15.

Catherine Young, a fine new vocal artist in Victoria, pianist Winifred Scott and Vancouver's noted guitarist, Chris Jordan, will present the final program, Sunday, in Victoria Musical Art Society's 1969-70 series. The concert takes place in McPherson Playhouse at 2:30 p.m.

University of Victoria Chamber Singers, directed by George Corwin, will provide the Tuesday 12:30 noon concert at Uvic's MacLaurin Auditorium.

Mr. Hulot Is a Bit of Everybody

Almost as though he felt it was expected of him, Jacques Tati made his entrance, the lugubrious face a mass of perplexed wrinkles, felt hat pushed back on his head, his expression a vast question mark: "So I have lost my car, I park it this morning, and now I do not know where, I search all over but it is vanished."

The act is pure Monsieur Hulot: this ingenious disbelief in the capriciousness of life, and yet the idea that Tati has become a sort of Identikit Hulot is not right. It suggests too much that "Le Roi" — his words delivered with extravagant French bow — is a bumbling innocent whose films are a success by sheer chance rather than the precision and perfection he insists on before he will be satisfied with even a single shot.

It took two years for him to make "Monsieur Hulot's Holiday" and "Mon Oncle," and day" and"Mon Oncle," and four years for "Playtime," which he insists is his best, dismissing the critics' disapprobation. "Pooof. Ignorance."

He is in Holland now working on a new film "Oui, Monsieur Hulot," which he describes as the adventures of the camping car en route to the International Motor Show in Amsterdam. It is an icy cold morning and he propels himself around the hanger at Schipol old airport, the set for most of the film, peering into the lens, changing the angle a little here, or moving one of the actors to a different position, and suddenly he is satisfied.

The face creases and sad, hooded eyes are transformed, by benign delight: "This is a good shot. It will be a perfect picture for you." The Dutch camera crew he is working with are indulgent and infuriated in turn, but Tati is the master, and he is firmly implacable, and always charming.

"I know how the film must be so I must have what I want, but that is not always popular. It is the same if I write scripts with other people: always we end up quarrelling. Now I do it alone, and perhaps that is better because my films are about the people I see around me and the way they react to life. No two people see this the same and so you have friction."

By ANGELA NEUSTATTER

In 22 years of film making since his apprenticeship in English music hall, Tati has made his four films with a combination of carefully thought out action and plot and sheer chance. He has a script, visualises the broad basis of the film, and then allows the actors to experiment and create within the framework. Carefully coined lines are not a part of his films.

Nor are carefully preened performers. The "star" of this film is Ton, a muscular, red-haired builder with a smiling indiarubber face. Tati found him working on a construction at an Amsterdam exhibition hall, watched him for two days, then signed him up. He chooses most of his cast this way, starting only with a small fixed skeleton group, then choosing the rest from people he finds in streets, pubs, cafes, the Metro.

"I choose ordinary people because that is what my films are about. If I want an actor then I will have an actor, but if I want a postman it is better to have a real postman, or a real butcher or whatever. I do not want a performer who everyone will know is playing a part.

"It is important to me that they are real people because my films are concerned with real people coming up against the absurdities of life, and how they handle the situations. Life can be so funny just by itself, but I want real people reacting as they would in real life, and for that the Hollywood star or method-trained actor is not right."

For the same reasons he believes Hulot has been a universal success. "You see he is any man in any country. He could be a painter, a shop assistant, a milkman, it doesn't matter. Hulot is a bit of everybody magnified. He is not particularly a Frenchman — you find Hulots on the beach in Sweden, walking the streets in Germany, driving a limousine in America. The things that happen to him can happen to anyone. People like Hulottites because suddenly they see themselves. I had a letter from a schoolboy who saw one of my films and wrote and told me that suddenly he could see life differently. That is wonderful"

While we talked he changed into the Hulot "uniform" — baggy trousers too short for his long spindly legs which protruded from the bottom to show bright green socks; an old raincoat with collar turned up, the bottom flapping around his calves, felt hat pulled down to brow level, the eternal pipe dangling from his lips.

In front of the cameras he struck up a pose, hunched shoulders and agonized bewilderment. "Is that good?" He felt it was right and spent two hours perfecting a two-line sequence. Sometimes he does no more than two shots a day.

"My films take a very long time it is true, and I know commercially this is not good. But I make them the way I want because I believe this is right. They are important so I make them my way. Either I must please the Bank of France or have my own respect, and it may be nice to have lots of money in my hand, but respect is more important."

Masterpieces in Provincial Museum

Looking at Art

... With Gordon Rice

Once you get over the idea that the art of the Northwest Coast Indians is "remote" or "distant", and you get absorbed in their work, you realize that the Provincial Museum is a major art resource for us here.

In the glassed-in area just outside the museum lounge there are the monumental totem poles, some quite old, and some very well preserved. These poles cast long and powerful shadows into the history of world art, a strange and formidable power which art historians have generally ignored.

There is one pole there, not yet labelled, which presents the most astonishing metamorphoses of human and animal forms. The mouth-like opening at the bottom of the pole identifies it as an entry way to a chief's long house. The clan symbols above this entry may (as they often do) tell of his family history.

What can interest one immediately is the way in which (for instance) two fish, nose-to-nose, become opposite sides of a face, possibly a human face, in a front view. Or again, how the scales of another fish become like greatly magnified human teeth, really a bit of surrealist magic.

Again, in this same pole, you see a kind of weathered green and yellow which blends marvelously with the old silvery gray wood.

Some of these poles are almost impossible to see because of a glare on the glass which protects them. Upstairs, on the third floor, one finds a great range of the smaller works. These are much easier to view and it takes only a little consideration to realize that these artifacts are absolute masterpieces.

One could question the setting. That is, we understand the steel and glass case is designed to both protect and present a mask or a blanket, and present it (if you like) as a work of art. There is labor and thought behind this presentation, and yet something incongruous.

If a Plains Indian chief were to collect some of our new hard-edge paintings and have them neatly sewn onto the sides of his tent one might see this incongruity reversed. Hence one wishes for some flavor at least of the original setting.

Accepting the inevitable then one does get absorbed in the expressions of the masks behind the glass. The Tsimshian moon masks stare down at us with a radiant forceful expression that is as steady as moonlight.

Then the walking sticks, made by the renowned carver Charles Edenshaw in the late 19th century, attract our attention. These intricate and delicate works reflect a variety of foreign influences incorporated by the carver with a really creative and ingenious skill.

On two of these canes snakes wrap around a stick which one realizes only after a while has been carved (from a larger stick) to resemble a stick. That is, the snake, and the stick he wraps around, have both been carved from the same larger stick.

The Chilkat blankets were made by Tlingit peoples who lived in the territory now part of Alaska and were traded down this way. They use eye-forms woven in blues, yellows, whites and blacks.

What is especially remarkable is that these blankets (the Chilkat word for blanket translated literally is "fringe-about-the-body") are also great "paintings."

One has to qualify that ... what I mean is that they present in a highly abstract way a variety of natural shapes which are as closely interated as any cubist work by Juan Gris of Picasso, or "hard-edged" work by Ellsworth Kelly.

More than that they have wrapped up in them a profound sense of the mysteries and depths of Nature, who we seem less and less able to approach in a way that is natural.

Tom Northcott Creating Sounds That Are Made-in-Canada Hits

By MICHAEL BENNETT

Tom Northcott, the 26-year-old guitar-picker Cash Box magazine selected as Canada's "most promising male vocalist" in 1968, is trying to reverse the musical brain drain and keep Canadian talent on this side of the border.

Four years ago he formed Studio 3 Productions Ltd. in Vancouver with Jack Herschorn, a young entrepreneur from Los Angeles, and Ralph Harding, former national distribution manager for Quality Records. And with 15 singles released under the New Syndrome label, they've come up with 13 hits.

The studio, now worth almost $150,000 in sound equipment alone, was born out of Northcott's frustration with himself and Canadian recording companies.

"Creatively, it gives me what I need," said Northcott as he sat behind the massive control board littered with dials, lights and switches.

"I'm cursed by not being greedy, I guess. I just work a couple of gigs, then coast for a few months so I can spend more time in the studio."

Studio 3 discovers the talent, records, publishes, manages and markets it, and three of Northcott's singles, Sunny Goodge Street, 1941, and Bob Dylan's Girl from the North Country did well on the Top 40 charts in both Canada and the United States. The company also recorded and published the British Columbia Suite album by Nelson Riddle's orchestra on Capilano Records.

But Northcott is really the success story of Studio 3.

A former host of the weekly CBC television series, Let's Go, he has written for the Kingston Trio, performed with the Jefferson Airplane and worked with some of the leading arrangement men in the United States and England.

The Airplane arranged a gig for him at The Matrix in San Francisco in 1967, which led to a recording contract with Warner Bros. But they have yet to release a Northcott album and by the time they do, Studio 3 will probably have one on the racks.

The company purchased the control-room equipment from Western Recorders' Studio 3 in Hollywood, where the Beach Boys, Righteous Bros., Simon and Garfunkel and the Fifth Dimension record.

"That one room has produced more hits than any in North America," said Herschorn. "In effect, we bought the room. There's just nothing like it in Canada that can match it."

The studio itself, housing banks of tape machines, limiters, compressors, equalizers and echo chambers, was designed by the acoustical engineering firm of Barron and Strachan, and the late Howard Tremaine.

The author of Cyclopedia of Electronics, Tremaine was recognized as one of the world's top authorities on acoustical and electronic engineering.

Northcott said Western's policy was to replace equipment regularly and "they were actually pretty nostalgic about it."

"The equipment was in perfect condition. It was treated something like a Rolls Royce . . . built just beautifully."

Northcott brings a lot of studio experience to his own operation.

He worked with Lenny Waronker, who produces the Everley Brothers, Harper's Bizarre and Arlo Guthrie and Harry Nilsson of Midnight Cowboy fame helped Northcott with The Rainmaker.

"If I go into a studio and it doesn't work in three hours, it's not going to work," said Northcott.

"I worked in L.A. with Lenny for three months on the Warner Bros. Album.

"That represents about $70,000 in studio costs and only now they're getting ready to release it.

"Warner Bros. was very good to me and I love them dearly, but I just backpedalled for three years.

"Now I'm going to get cracking on my career. I've only got about 10 years to get it together."

'Protect Against U.S. Domination'

BRUSSELS (WP) — In its initial attempt to define a common industrial policy, the European executive commission Friday urged the six Common Market nations to protect their growth industries against United States domination and encourage trans-national mergers in Europe.

In a 400-page document, the commission says that a coherent industrial policy is indispensable to ensure economic unity in western Europe and technoligical independence from the major world powers.

Development of vital sectors of industry has been far from satisfactory, the commission says, in large measure due to the practice of reserving public contracts to firms in the same country, this depriving key industries like aviation, nuclear power and computers of the advantages offered by a large market.

Although the commission does not go so far as to propose a "buy European" act and goes out of its way not to upset the United States, it says that firms from non-member nations should only be considered eligible for public contracts in the EED on the basis of complete reciprocity, which is not the case at present — an apparent reference to the "buy American act."

Capacity Unlimited

VANCOUVER (CP) — The nearly-completed container terminal here "can be developed into a container-handling complex of almost unlimited capacity," a Canadian National Railways vice-president said Friday.

E. J. Cooke, chief of CN's express and highway services in Montreal, said the company's container development group has been working closely with the National Harbors Board and Empire Stevedoring Co., operators of the terminal, "to ensure that terminal planning for the initial stages of development would not inhibit orderly expansion to meet future requirements."

"In its present form with one ship crane, the terminal will have a capacity of 1,200 containers per week, more than enough to take care of the short-term forecast," Cooke told a seminar on containerization sponsored by the Canadian Transportation Research Forum.

He said "this figure can be doubled simple by installation of additional container handling equipment."

Aquitaine

Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd. and Banff Oil Ltd. are planning merger that would see consolidation of the joint explorations they have undertaken for the past six years.

It is proposed that Aquitaine give 52 of its shares for every 100 shares of Banff Oil, subject to regulatory and shareholder approval.

Tight Money Continues to Plague Markets

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets drifted lower in dull trading this week.

Markets lost ground in four out of five sessions, holding steady Wednesday.

Observers said that last week's federal government budget speech added to the tight-money pressures that have been plaguing Canadian investors.

The budget called for curbs on consumer credit and for an extension of deferral of capital cost allowances on commercial construction in urban centres of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Bank, trust and loan, merchandising and manufacturing issues were weak, apparently in response to the budget speech. Construction and automobile stocks were steady.

CREDIT TIGHTENED

Observers said that while losses in these groups were not that great, the fact that the government leaned toward tighter credit was an indication that its controls on the economy could continue for some time.

The government's tight-money policy which was put into effect last June has acted as the main market depressant since then.

Even what could be considered positive news from the United States, where markets have been under similar pressure, could not coax markets to gain this week.

On Tuesday, President Nixon ended a freeze on $1,500,000,000 in federal and state funds for schools, hospitals, roads and other public services.

Paul McCracken, chairman of the U.S. Council of Economic Advisers, said the release of funds signalled a change in U.S. fiscal policy.

On Wednesday, Arthur F. Burns, U.S. Federal Reserve Board chairman, hinted that the end of the tight credit policy in the U.S. was in sight.

Any letup in U.S. economic controls would probably touch off similar easing in Canadian controls.

But this week, investors chose to ignore the news, probably looking back at recent weeks when similar reports were not followed by action.

Statistically, on the index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 2.62 to 181.57, golds 3.71 to 162.95, western oils 1.98 to 184.45 and base metals 1.11 to 113.25.

Volume was 7,981,000 shares compared with 9,769,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 529 to 212 with 259 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was off 1.97 to 178.60. Combined volume was 4,965,000 shares compared with 4,927,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 240 to 110 with 111 issues unchanged.

Legal Actions Follow Takeover

TORONTO (CP) — Seaway Multi-Corp. Ltd. and Levy Industries Ltd., both of Toronto, have launched legal actions against the Levy family in connection with the takeover of Levy Industries by Seaway early in 1969.

In a letter to shareholders, Norton Cooper, president of Seaway and chairman of Levy, said Friday a writ issued on behalf of Seaway asks for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation.

We need ambitious men

For the next twenty or thirty years of your life, your job will take more of your time than anything else you do.

What kind of work do you want?
Work that makes demands on your intelligence, your imagination, your enterprise?
Work that is varied and interesting, that involves dealing with people and ideas rather than things?
Work that promised far above average money and satisfaction?

What kind of company do you want to work for?
A company in which you can set your own financial pace and move ahead as fast as your ability and efforts take you?
A company with progressive personnel policies and substantial employee benefits?
A company that gives you an intensive seven month training program including three months with our New York affiliate, Merrill Lynch?
A company with worldwide research facilities?
A growing company in a growing business, the most fascinating business in the world: the securities business?
If all your answers are YES, if you are interested in a sales career as an account executive at Royal Securities, we would like to hear from you.

Phone or send your résumé to Roger J. Davis, telling about yourself, your education, and your business experience. All replies will be held in confidence, of course.

HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATOR
VANCOUVER, B.C.

A new Rehabilitation Convalescent Hospital and Residence is being planned by the Workmen's Compensation Board of British Columbia.

The Board requires a competent and experienced Hospital Administrator to assume the challenging responsibilities of this new position. The Hospital Administrator will report to the Executive Director of the Board, and will be responsible for planning, organizing, directing and controlling all activities of the Hospital and Residence (except medical activities) in liaison with senior Board officials.

This is an unusual opportunity for an Administrator to be involved in the initial planning and operation of this new facility.

The successful candidate will have a recognized degree in Hospital Administration and an employment history that demonstrates broad knowledge and experience in hospital organization and administration, leadership ability, and well developed human relations skills.

The starting salary is likely to be $15,000 per annum, depending on qualifications and experience.

Please send your background details, including present salary, to Mr. Godfrey Chowne.

Giffen

Grouping of five recreational equipment makers into Giffen Recreation Ltd., of Montreal, has been completed.

Subsidiary of Giffen Industries, of Miami, the new company will make snowmobiles under the names Moto-Ski, Boa-Ski and Sno-Prince; and Peterborough, Princecraft and Northcraft pleasure boats. Annual sales of $40 million are expected.

The group includes Bouchard Industries, Lionel Enterprises, Aluminum Boat and Canoes, Boa Ski Ltd. and Northcraft.

Union Oil

Earnings of Union Oil of Canada Ltd. doubled during 1969 to $7 million from $3.5 million during the previous year.

The increase was due mostly to increased operating revenues which rose to $37 million compared with $30.89 million in 1968. Provisions for income tax were also lower.

Average daily production of crude oil and condensates increased and sales of natural gas rose.

Chieftain

Joint acquisition of a 7 per cent interest in 28,000 acres of potential oil and gas property in Ram River area of foothills Alberta is reported by Chieftain Development Co. Ltd., Blue Crown Petroleums Ltd., and Blue Crown Inc.

A well is being drilled on the property about 11 miles west of Strachan gas field, 11 miles northwest of Ricinus, bringing the Chieftain-Blue Crown interest to seven wells. All are deep, exploratory wells in the foothills sector, to be drilled 10,000-17,500 feet.

Utica

A shutdown of up to four months is expected at the end of March by Utica Mines Ltd. milling opreation at Keremeos.

The company said the 300 tons per day operation at present was to be enlarged to 450 tons by rapid development of underground ore stopes, with resumption of milling expected to coincide with significantly higher silver prices by summer or fall.

Canadian Tire

Canadian Tire Corp. Ltd. reports 1969 profit of $7.85 million or $2.28 a share, up more than 30 per cent from $6 million or $1.80 a share the previous year.

Gross operating revenue was up more than 25 per cent to $179 million from $142.8 million in 1968.

YOUR TAXES

More Than Tax Reform Involved in White Paper

When the government tabled its tax reform proposals, it was predictable that public reaction would move through several stages of development. Expression of preliminary opinions soon gave way to the current heated debate.

As this period of examination and review now appears to be settling down, it becomes possible to restore perspective and get down to the essential business of reaching a national consensus. If the Government is sensitive to public opinion it should have no difficulty in reframing both its tax concepts and specific proposals to satisfy those valid criticisms directed at the plan by a substantial number of responsible Canadians.

If it does, then the value of its first major foray into participatory democracy will have been established. If it does not, it will weaken the credibility of its concept of government.

But for the government and Canadians the most important issue in the tax reform debate, other than the final tax program itself, is the fate of the entire program of white papers.

NEW GROUND

The Trudeau government has broken new ground in making the democratic process more meaningful. Indeed, the prime minister carried the country two years ago largely because he projected the image of a leader who would involve more people in the dialogue between governors and the governed.

The white paper program is the implementation of that promise. Traditionally, government policy is formulated by the cabinet, then explained and approved by the governing party's caucus, following which theer may be a general reference to it in a throne speech. The specific plan and method of carrying it out only becomes known to the public when a bill is presented to the Commons.

The public has little or no part in the debate and by the time a bill is introduced, the government is committed to the program. It rarely withdraws or accepts major alterations because it fears the political consequence resulting from what may be called a loss of face.

Mr. Trudeau has wisely decided this approach is obsolete and has promised, and in fact begun, a program whereby the government will periodically publish policy statements, far in advance of legislation. These are the white papers, long a tradition in the British parliament but infrequently used in Canada.

The present government has declared that these white papers contain not draft legislation, nor unalterable policy commitments, but rather, general statements of the government's thinking on a particular subject. Their purpose is to stimulate broad public discussion amongst interested groups so that the government can be clearly directed by the people it serves.

If the program is successful, government in Canada will be very much improved. Laws will not be imposed upon a docile or frustrated public, they will be designed and shaped by it.

It then becomes important to all concerned, regardless of political stripe and without reference to the quality of the tax program proposed in the current white paper, to make certain that notwithstanding what changes are required to make the tax reform acceptable, the white paper method is not destroyed in the process.

The government has not made it easy. It must accept the blame for the dilemma in which it finds itself, for it has not handled itself well in convincing Canadians that they will actually be the decision-makers. Only a few days ago, even former cabinet minister Paul Hellyer implied that nothing can change the government's mind. If that were true the white paper process as practised by this government couldn't be taken seriously.

DIFFERENT VIEW

However, the next day, Minister Without Portfolio, Herb Gray, speaking in Winnipeg again assured an audience of lawyers and accountants that the government isn't unalterably committed to the plan and that it would act on a national consensus as the white paper concept suggests.

One must believe the government is serious and act on that assumption in letting Ottawa know his views on tax reform. If no one has faith in the white paper process of government, it will obviously fail. If only government does and a cynical public does not, then, too, it will fail. It also follows that if the public believes in it but the government really doesn't, then it will be the government that will have been discredited with all that flows from that result.

In all, there is much more than just the tax system involved in how both the government and the public conduct themselves on this and all other white papers.

Tougher Controls Face U.S. Brokers

By PHILIP GREER

NEW YORK (WP) — There is little doubt, at least in this observer's mind, that the securities industry is headed into a period of increased regulation which will ultimately put it under government oversight to about the same extent as banks.

It won't happen soon and it won't be without a bitter fight from Wall Street, but two factors point clearly in that direction:

- The securities industry and the Securities and Exchange Commission have shown no ability to haul the industry out of its vitally important administrative problems such as commission rates, back offices, anti-trust and public ownership.
- The public and the Congress are becoming increasingly aware of the jungle-like turmoil in Wall Street. On Capitol Hill, where securities regulation usually frightens legislators, more and more congressmen are expressing their concern over the fumbling pace of adjustment and reform in the street.

DEPOSIT CORP.

As an indication of the way the congressmen are thinking, Sen. Edmund Muskie (D—Maine) and Rep. John Moss (D—Calif.) have proposed a federal broker-dealer deposit corp., patterned after the federal deposit insurance corp. and there has been a suggestion that part of the planned $15 transaction charge, which would be added to regular commission rates, be used to build a fund to protect investors from brokerage firm failures.

Small indications, true, but real nevertheless. Only a year or two ago, no congressman would have bothered with such ideas.

There is a very real need for something like a FBDIC. Last week, McDonnell and Co., a stockbroker for 65 years, admitted it had run out of money and has to close down. Exchange officials and officers of the firm insist the liquidation will be orderly and that customers will not be hurt. The final verdict, of course, will have to wait until the auditors get finished.

SLUSH FUND

The fact is that people who send their cash into brokerage firms and those who leave their stock certificates with their brokers, have no real assurance — beyond the exchange's word — that they will ever see either again.

The big board has a slush fund which was originally $10 million in cash and $15 million in standby credits. The fund is used in liquidation cases, to loosen up the clerical jam. Sometimes it is used to pay back investors whose shares have disappeared in the attempt to keep the firm alive.

The exchange doesn't talk about it, but word in the street is that the cash portion has shrunk to $6 million. (In addition, each firm carrying public accounts must have a $25 million fidelity bond. That protects customers — up to a total $25 million — from failure, but it does not cover fraud.)

All of this money would do little good if one of the big firms went down the drain. There have been cases — successful, so far — when the exchange has worked feverishly to keep a firm afloat because the failure could send damaging shocks through the whole industry.

French Petroleum

Calgary-based French Petroleum Co. of Canada Ltd., has agreed in principle to merge with Leonard Refineries Inc., of Alma, Mich., subject to further analysis, stockholder approval and regulatory authorities.

Leonard has facilities in five Michigan centres; gathers, transports, refines and markets products over the mid-western areas of Michigan and Wisconsin, while French is an exploration and production company in western Canada.

Holders of Leonard stock will be asked to exchange it for new $20 convertible preferred shares of French Petroleum worth two shares of French common stock at any time, uncallable for five years.

NURSES . . for Canada's North

Nursing Stations and Health Centres are found in the far reaches of Canada's North each serving a scattered population of 250 to 1000 persons. The Nurses handle a great deal of maternity work and also provide emergency treatment, outpatient services and can act as a clearing centre for patients with more serious conditions. As the nursing stations and many health units are isolated, there is ample scope for a Nurse to use her initiative. A spirit of self-reliance, tempered with sound judgment and a sense of responsibility is essential. This, however, does not mean total responsibility! Nurses in these posts have the support of experienced senior visiting nursing and medical personnel both "on call" and by routine visit.

If you feel you can meet the challenge of the North, we welcome your inquiry. Our requirements include professional registration, or eligibility for such registration, in a province of Canada and personal suitability. Working experience and/or additional training are desirable assets.

CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT:

Salary ranges are: Nurse 1, $6,135 - $7,271.
Nurse 2, $7,157 - $8,422.

Additional Allowances are paid on the following basis:

Environmental Post Allowance of up to $1,320 per annum.

At Nursing Stations, compensatory leave and a monthly allowance of $30-$50 per month is paid in lieu of overtime.

Completition of post graduate courses are recognized by per annum allowances of: midwifery ($60-$150), Public Health Diploma ($350), and B.Sc. ($450).

Supervisory Allowances, where applicable, are paid.

In addition to the above mentioned allowances, accommodations and meals are available at an approximate cost of $60 per month. Also, assistance is given in removal and related expenses. When applying please Quote No. 70-E-735.

Apply immediately to: Department of National Health and Welfare, Medical Services Branch, Northern Region, 500 Chancery Hall, No. 3 Sir Winston Churchill Square, Edmonton, Alberta.

White House Inflation Curb Fails Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's worst inflation in 20 years defied White House economic strategy again in February by pushing the cost of living up another one-half of 1 per cent, with prices for food and shelter registering sharp advances.

The labor department reported Friday that prices continued to rise last month at the fastest clip since the Korean War, despite administration efforts to curb inflation by dampening the economy.

President Nixon's chief economic adviser, Paul McCracken, voiced confidence earlier this week that the economy is cooling off and that prices will begin to level off in the months ahead. His prediction was echoed Friday by White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler, who insisted every major indicator shows that "inflation is coming under control."

But there was no evidence of relief in February.

Fort Girds For Attack By Indians

SEATTLE (AP) — Barbed wire was strung Friday around part of Ft. Lawton, which has been invaded twice by Indians claiming the property under an 1865 treaty.

An army spokesman said the barbed wire was put up as a precaution against any further take-over attempts by the Indians.

About 60 soldiers were brought from Ft. Lewis to string the wire and install a new gate.

A group of Indians has been camped outside the fort's main gate since March 10. There was a report the Indians planned to move their camp today.

Voracious Starfish Threatens Pacific Islands

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) — Guam is losing its fight against a marauding star-fish that is eating the coral reefs that supply food and protect the island, a University of Guam marine biologist told a Senate subcommittee this week.

The Crown of Thorns starfish, which is destroying the coral reefs that surround Guam at the rate of a half-mile a month, "has permeated almost the whole of the Pacific," said another marine biologist, Dr. R. H. Cheshire of Westinghouse's ocean research laboratory.

TWO YEARS

"In two years time, if we don't stop it, the island of Guam will have no reef at all," said Dr. Robert S. Jones of the university there.

He testified in favor of a bill to spend 4.5 million dollars in the next five years to control the Crown of Thorns, whose scientific name in Ancanthaster Planci, and find out what caused the sudden population explosion of the normally rare starfish.

Jones told the Senate Interior Subcommittee on Territories that skindivers using formalin injector guns have killed 20,000 starfish and stopped their advance on the island's southwest coast, just short of a proposed conservation area.

But the starfish invasion had moved 15 miles along the northeast coast, Jones said, because the seas are too rough for the islanders' small boats.

"The battle will have to wait until the calm summer months," he said, "but by then the starfish will be in a position to attack along a 25 mile front of our virgin windward reef."

Guam pays a bounty of 25 cents for each starfish killed, but Jones described trying to eradicate the Crown of Thornes on an individual basis as "a fly-swatter technique."

So far, no better technique has been developed.

But Jones said that skindivers found "a sick-looking starfish" in the waters around Guam and scientists there are trying to isolate the fungus that caused the illness. This could possibly be used as a biological control.

Cheshire said a study last summer strongly suggests blame for the starfish problem should be laid to man, who somehow upset the delicate balance of nature in the Pacific.

He said the studies showed "remarkably high levels" of pesticides and wastes from industrial plastics in starfish tissue.

SOMETHING ASTRAY

A starfish lives about eight years, he said, and spawns about 24 million offspring a year. Normally, 99.99 per cent of them fail to survive. Now, however, "something is astray in the biological balance of the Pacific" and more young are living to adulthood.

Without the protection of the coral reef, Cheshire said, the islands' beaches and shorelines will erode away.

Cheshire said some of the devastated coral reefs around Quam are at least 200 years old, and added that it will take that long for them to redevelop.

The invasion was first noted 10 years ago in Australia, where the starfish destroyed more than 100 square miles of the famous Great Barrier Reef.

But scientists thought it was just a local infestation until a year ago, when they noted patches of dead coral around Guam and other Pacific islands.

World Data Exchange

OTTAWA (CP) — A Canadian initiative in launching an international exchange of information on ways that computers are being used in health services was proposed Friday to a national computer symposium here.

A resolution presented at the conclusion of the three-day conference, jointly sponsored by the federal government and the Canadian Hospital Association, called for Canada to raise the matter with the World Health Organization.

Other proposals put forward at final sessions:

—Formation of a national committee to select priorities for computer applications and encourage action on them.

—A numbering system for all Canadians which might be used in health and other integrated systems involving computers.

Dishwashers need gallons of piping hot water. An Esso Water Heater delivers.

When it comes to delivering all the hot water you need, some water heaters just don't make it. And that's no mystery, they just cannot heat water fast enough! But an Esso Water Heater can. In just one hour an oil-fired Esso Water Heater delivers over 80 Imperial gallons of piping hot water. Enough for half a dozen dishwashers, aproned or automatic!

What an Esso Water Heater delivers in efficiency it equals in economy. All you pay is a nominal monthly rental that includes maintenance, plus fuel. There's no charge for a standard installation if you already have an oil tank. And in most areas domestic heating oil is the most economical fuel you can buy. If you prefer, you can purchase your Esso Water Heater outright.

Enjoy all the hot water you want with an Esso Water Heater. It won't mysteriously leave you cold.

Only $4.13 a month rents an Esso Water Heater.

DISCRIMINATION CHARGED

NDP Fails in Federal Bill Fight

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democrats fought unsuccessfully in a day-long debate Friday to remove provisions in a government bill which they say discriminates in favor of MPs and senators and against other public servants.

The NDP moved 15 amendments to a government bill which grants increases in pensions to public servants ranging to 42 per cent from two per cent. But pensions for MPs and senators would soar up 100 per cent in some cases.

Public servants would retain benefits not shared by MPs, however.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) accused the government of "unfair and underhanded" methods designed to cloak unfair increases for MPs in inadequate increases for public servants.

David Lewis (York South), NDP deputy leader, said there was a principle involved: "When the government brings down a bill covering all public servants, then that bill should treat all public servants alike."

He said the principle was especially valid when the government is telling Canadians to "tighten their belts."

Legislators were public servants just like all other government employees, he said.

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said he had "no apology whatever" in proposing the increased benefits for MPs and senators.

MPs had given up opportunities for establishing pension and insurance plans in business and professional life, and their families should not be made to suffer because of this, he said.

A government amendment to the bill to increase benefits to widows and orphans of MPs was passed by the Commons in Friday's voting.

But the 15 NDP amendments, grouped by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux into three packages to speed voting, were defeated.

NDP WAS ALONE

Conservatives and Creditistes lined up with the government to defeat the first group 74 to 12. The next two groups were defeated 76 to 11, with Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) and Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) voting against their party.

The bill passed the report stage without a recorded vote and will be presented for third and final reading Monday.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 2, vacant 1.

While the Commons debate on the pension bill went on Friday, the Canada Gazette published an invitation to the public to submit briefs to the three-man commission studying parliamentary salaries and expenses.

The government announced the formation of the commission March 2. It is to study changes in the salaries and benefits of MPs and senators, and to advise on procedures for future revisions.

MPs now receive an annual salary of $12,000 and a non-taxable expense allowance of $6,000. Senators receive the same salary and a $3,000 expense allowance.

Murder Ruling Reversed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada, in a decision handed down Friday, unanimously reversed a 1969 British Columbia Appeal Court judgment, and restored a lower court conviction of a Vancouver youth on a charge of non-capital murder.

David Robert Trinneer was charged together with another youth, Isaac Darryl Frank, with stabbing to death Mrs. Rosie Vollet, 40, at Britannia Beach, near Vancouver, Dec. 19, 1967, after robbing her.

He was found guilty by a jury in B.C. Supreme Court Feb. 26, 1969, but the conviction was later quashed by the B.C. Court of Appeal on the grounds that Mr. Justice John Ruttan, who presided over the trial, had misdirected the jury.

MASS PARTICIPATION CORE OF NEW FEDERAL SPORTS POLICY

ADMINISTRATIVE AID OFFERED

Munro Hopes Individual Grants Will End 'Brawn Drain'

OTTAWA (CP) — Mass participation is the core of a new federal sports policy announced Friday by Health Minister John Munro.

"In no way do we feel that the pursuit of Canadian excellence in the world arena need suffer," Mr. Munro said of the new policy directive.

"Indeed, we are convinced that the fostering of the objective of mass participation will greatly enhance our chances of seeing our flag ascend to the middle mast much more often."

The new policy proposes to provide paid help and office space for certain selected sports: grants-in-aid to worthy athletes; establishment of a competition to be known as Canada Olympics to be held every second year starting in 1972; and a communications system to work on publicity and promotion aspects to encourage more Canadians to play sports.

Mr. Munro tabled the proposed new policy in the Commons Friday and then attended a news conference to answer questions on it.

Later he attended the opening session of the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation to amplify further.

He told the news conference he hoped to have the federation's view within a few weeks. While he was ready to make some changes if the federation made a good case for them, Mr. Munro indicated he would be standing on most of his proposals.

"After all, we've had a lot of advice on this," the minister declared.

The new proposals would be funded by the $5,000,000 granted annually under the Fitness Act. In one change, Mr. Munro said the $1,000,000 of the grant now given to the provinces would be discontinued after this year.

He said the sports programs of the provinces now could stand on their own feet and the emphasis now would be on national events.

Mr. Munro said his department will provide office space, secretarial help, office supplies, office furnishings, 100 per cent of travel costs to annual national championships and 75 per cent of travel costs to selected world competitions to sports classed as Priority 1 sports.

Priority 1 sport would be based on participation, public acceptance and the nature of the sport.

In addition, Priority 1 sports would get $12,000 a year to hire an executive director.

Priority 2 sports would get office supplies and secretarial help from the new administrative centre to be established here. They also would be able to tap a $100,000 fund for special projects.

The grants-in-aid, valued at $2,000 each, would go to 45 athletes in the first years. They would not be tied to performance or to competition.

Athletes getting the grants would be free to choose their own schools and would not be forced into playing for that school. They could be applied to a university, or any recognized post-secondary institution.

"Grants-in-aid will be available also to worthy athletes who do not attend any educational institution," Mr. Munro said.

The minister said he hoped the grants would end "the brawn drain" to the United States.

The Canada Olympics would be held in between years of the Canadian Winter Games and the Canada Summer Games.

They would differ from the Canadian games in that the Olympics would be made up of national championships and thus the calibre of competition would be stiffer.

Cities would bid for the Olympics as they do for the other games "and the successful bidders will receive a legacy of excellent permanent sports facilities for the benefit of the city and its various social groups."

Cities bidding for the Olympics would be judged not only on the basis of the proposed facilities. Plans for such development in low-income areas promising a high use rate would get additional points.

Mr. Munro's policy statement also took a slap at coverage that newspapers and other media give to amateur sports.

"Perhaps if we could cut in half the space devoted to coverage of American sports, we might find the space to do stories on the Canadian amateur scene," said the policy brief.

In other ways to promote mass participation, the health department would shortly be inaugurating a new Canadian fitness incentive award program, and make contributions to sports organizations deductible for income tax purposes.

So it's a happy holiday you wish, with some sport thrown in. Go south, young man, go south. It was thus last Easter for your agent. And the fun is still there this year if you don't blow your mind first.

Disneyland ... Watts ... San Diego ... Tijuana ... Santa Anita. You name it. It's all there and available within an hour of our halting point, Oceanside.

Pro hockey, pro baseball, pro basketball, Majestic Prince, surfing, swimming and tequila. It's your choice.

Yes, this was America, a land of six-lane freeways, obsolete even before the last truckload of cement has been poured. A "ping" signals the fact, to be learned with regret minutes later, that a front wheel-bearing has gone. At 70 mph on the outside of four, it is an unscheduled thrill. But the kids aren't complaining. They get to stay in L.A. overnight. The gambling casino is across the street.

It's a sunny Saturday, except at the garage.

Then Bill Hartack does his thing in the Santa Anita Derby. Majestic Prince wins by eight, eased up. Later, there is a bedding-down at holiday HQ. Only now the vacation is about to begin.

Which will it be, the red wine, or white, for dinner? San Diego Gulls against Portland in the Western Hockey League playoffs, or the Rockets against Atlanta in the National Basketball Association set-to.

Atlanta was much too good for the "Big E" and the Rockets, overcoming a 19-point deficit to win, as the Prince, eased up.

Or a day later, riding in the Monsanto display at Disneyland — a visit to inner space through a mini-miniaturizing contraption. The super fantasy theme is that you are shrunk to the size of a small snowflake, amid giant flakes, then into the molecule, and finally into the atom. The feeling is what you make it. Have you ever seen a 16-foot snowflake close up?

Now the Los Angeles Kings are playing the Oakland Seals in a National Hockey League playoff game that was last year — in the beautiful Coliseum. Of if you have another day to spend in L.A., the Lakers and "Wilt the Stilt" will be at home to San Francisco, or Boston and Bill Russell, again in the Coliseum, and before a full house.

Fishing anyone? There are deep-sea boats for hire and the fish guaranteed. The killer whales are in tanks nearby. The act is the same as here.

The Tournament of Champions golf tournament is upcoming at La Costa, the San Juan Capistrano is to be run at Santa Anita. There is a statue of George Royal in the paddock. He won his greatest victory in this event, by a nose. Then the rains came. Yes, it can rain in California. Not often, but hard.

A trip to the strip, a tour of Disney Studios, and a cross-town junket. Now, it is Firestone Ave., on the edge of Watts. Iron bars guard the store entrances; sidewalks are littered with beer cans and last month's Times, the vacant lots with broken glass and broken cars.

It costs $10 a tow and $1.50 a mile if your car breaks down on the freeway and you use the call-box.

In Watts, leave your car for a minute, and it will be stripped for nothing. "No thanks, we won't stop." The windows are closed more tightly.

Then it's Anaheim, a southern part of Los Angeles.

The Angels of the American League are playing the Seattle Pilots. It's the Pilots' first game ever at the Big "A". It's a huge stadium, but there's hardly anyone there — only about 8,000. It's raining, but lightly, and there's a drizzle the next night, too. But this is major league, and the hamburgers are big, and good. And the beer is cool.

Yacht lovers could spend days on the coast, just looking, but stay clear of the Los Angeles River. It's a trickle of muddy pollution guarded by concrete walls. There are no fish.

And now the Dodgers are at home. This is the National League. Johnny Podres is trying a comeback, against his old team. It won't do. And Hollywood Park has opened because Santa Anita has closed. There are 54 days to go.

But only three days really remain. And it takes that long to get home. Happy holiday. Because the front wheel bearing has become unstuck again, but not at 70!

BEARER OF GIFTS will be Victoria Minor Hockey Association's peewee pup rep team when squad leaves Wednesday for Alberta tour. Rep team captain Mike Shields accepts gifts he will present to mayors of Calgary and Edmonton from Victoria mayor Courtney Haddock (right). Looking on are coach Ron Smith (left) and tour organizer Lloyd Hanna. Reps, who have been beaten only twice in past two years, will play games in Edmonton and Calgary between March 27 and April 1. Players raised $1,050 to help defray costs of trip.

Ski Rarity Fashioned As Gold Medal Shared

LABRADOR CITY, Nfld. (CP) — In a competition that gave early indications of American dominance, skiers from Canada and the United States are staging a battle to the wire for gold medals at the Canadian national ski championships.

The two countries have a split in gold medals awarded so far at the championships being staged at nearby Smokey Mountain, 800 miles northeast of Montreal.

The final men's slalom scheduled for this afternoon will be the deciding race after unusual circumstances Friday in which Edmonton's Bill McKay and Scott Pyles of Vail, Colo. were declared double-gold-medal winners in the men's giant slalom.

An American and Canadian have each taken one women's medal as Diana Gibson, 17, of Toronto won Thursday's giant slalom and Rosi Fortna, 23, of Mammoth Mountain, Calif., won Friday's slalom.

Miss Fortna also won the women's combined title with her earlier third-place finish in the giant slalom. She won the combined championship at the U.S. nationals last weekend.

After the first run of the men's giant slalom Thursday, Americans ranked one-two-three but McKay moved up from fifth spot with a fast run Friday to tie with Pyles for first.

HAD SAME TIMES

Both 22-year-old veteran racers of the international circuit had combined times of two minutes 28.38 seconds through the 49 gates of the course.

Dan Mooney, 20, of Aspen, Colo., the first-run leader, finished third after the two runs followed by Larry Keenan of Aspen in fourth.

The next best Canadian was Russell Goodman, 16, of Montreal, one of three brothers who placed among the top 15. Peter, 18, finished 10th and Gary, 15, was 15th.

Miss Fortna, one of the favorites in the women's slalom, trailed Miss Gibson and Ann Black of Crystal Mountain, Wash., after the first run Friday.

Misses Gibson and Black missed gates in the second run while Miss Fortna had a clean run through the 55 gates to wrap up her gold medal with a combined time of 1:25.98.

Almost three seconds back in the slalom event was Denise Crichton, 17, of St. Sauveur, Que., the second-place silver medal winner. Diane Pratte, 16, of Rouyn, Que., was third.

Wind-Loving Trevino Grabs Share of Lead

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Blustery winds sweeping across the Hidden Hills Country Club had a lot to do with second-round play Friday in the Greater Jacksonville open golf tournament and Lee Trevino was perfectly happy with the results.

"Let the winds blow," he said after moving into a tie for the lead in the $100,000 tournament with Bobby Mitchell of Danville, Va.

"The more it blows, the more I feel like I'm home in El Paso."

As Mitchell and Trevino settled into their tie with seven-under par 137s, other golfers were cursing the breezes that sent shots flying right and left of the narrow fairways.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg matched his first-round even-par 72 for a 144 total and Al Balding of Toronto went two over par Friday for a two-round total of 147.

Three other Canadians missed the cut. Ben Kern of Toronto dropped out with a 152 and Gary Bowerman of Toronto and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver each with 156.

Trail Curlers Win Playoff

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Gil Lemoel led his Trail quartet to an 8-5 victory over Jess Jesse's Trenton, Ont., rink here Friday in a sudden-death playoff for the Royal Canadian Legion curling championship.

Archie McCannel, Fred Wendel and Bill Chartres were other members of the B.C. rink.

Lemoel and Jesse finished regular play with 8-1 records.

Distaff Hockey Decider Sunday

The British Columbia women's hockey championship will be on the line Sunday at the G. R. Peakres Arena when defending-champion Esquimalt Carson Bulldozers meet Coquitlam Satellites, starting at 4 p.m.

A third game in the scheduled two-game, total-point series was forced after teams traded 5-3 and 3-1 victories and an overtime session in last weekend's second game failed to break the total-goal deadlock.

Canadian Favorites Falter in Cup Play

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's top-ranked doubles team failed to live up to expectations Friday night, allowing the United States to salvage a 2-2 tie in the first section of the American zone final in the Thomas Cup badminton matches.

"We played like kids who were playing together for the first time," Jamie Paulson of Calgary said after he and Yves Pare of Montreal lost 10-15, 15-11, 15-11 to the second-ranked American doubles unit of Tom Carmichael of Clarkston, Mich., and Jim Lynch, a U.S. citizen now living in Hamilton.

The unexpected verdict turned the tide in the nine-match affair at the Glencoe Club, putting the Americans into the driver's seat over the previously heavily-favored Canadians.

"We did better than I thought we would do," said Jim Poole of New Orleans, the U.S. team captain who joined Don Paup of New Orleans for a 15-12, 15-4 doubles victory over Bruce Rollick of Vancouver and Dave Charron, a Toronto native now living in Calgary.

"We've got a chance now," Poole said after the Americans bounced back from singles setbacks which saw Paulson crush Ray Park of Houston 15-3, 15-1 and Wayne MacDonnell of Vancouver outlast Stan Hales of Claremont, Calif., 15-5, 9-15, 15-5.

The experts had predicted Canada would defeat the U.S. in the zone final for the first time since 1949 and advance to the

The final five matches in the zone final tonight sent MacDonnell against Park, Rollick against Poole, Paulson against Hales and, in the doubles, Paulson and Pare against Poole and Paup and Charron and Rollick against Carmichael and Lynch.

Pro Plea Denied; Canada Stays Out

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — A renewed Canadian request for professionals to be allowed to take part in the annual world hockey championships was rejected here today by the International Ice Hockey Federation, severing Canada's European links for at least another year.

At the first of three meetings during the current world championships, the IIHF voted against the Canadian proposal 34-16 in a secret ballot.

Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said in an interview afterwards:

"This means we will not take part in the championship next year at any level. We are not competing internationally until our demand is met."

Canada, the original host nation for the 1970 championships, withdrew from the present world tournament last January when her opponents failed to abide by an IIHF decision to allow each country to use nine professionals in the tournament.

COUNTRIES WARNED

The federation's January move followed a warning from president Avery Brundage of the International Olympic Committee that participation of professionals could disqualify teams using them and teams playing against them from the 1972 Winter Olympics in Sapporo, Japan.

Dawson said today:

"Brundage's warning was just that and no more. If the International Olympic Committee had made a ruling to that effect, we would have accepted it.

"We're sticking to our guns. We only need nine or 10 more votes to get the proposal through. Let's hope the federation will see the light next year."

Dawson said opposition to the Canadian move had, "as usual," been led by John (Bunny) Ahearne, the federation's controversial president.

Ahearne said: "Of course I voted against. We can't let one country dictate to us like that."

Swedes Bounce Into Contention

STOCKHOLM (CP) — The world hockey championships are wide open at the halfway mark.

The world champion Russians fell to their first defeat of the championships Friday when the Swedes rallied to near-perfect form for a 4-2 triumph and a tie for first place after five games. Each has eight points on four wins and a loss.

In Friday's other game, Czechoslovakia recovered from its defeat by the Russians Wednesday to crush Finland 9-1 and tie the Finns for third place with six points each.

East Germany and Poland, who met in today's only match, are winless in four games and tied for last place.

A near sellout crowd of almost 10,000, biggest so far in the tournament, watched Sweden win its first tournament victory against the Russians since 1963, when the Swedes triumphed 2-1. The Swedes were second in last year's championships, behind the Russians who have won the title for the last seven years.

Soviet star Vyacheslav Starshinov opened the scoring after 12 minutes. Six minutes later, Swedish captain Ulf Sterner deflected the puck off a Russian skate for a tying goal. Sweden made it 2-1 at the two-minute mark of the second period when veteran Arne Carlsson emerged from the penalty box and went straight in to score. Lars-Goeran Nilsson added another one minute from the end of the period.

CROWD WENT SILENT

The Russians silenced the crowd with a goal by Valery Charlamov, who scored from close range after only 90 seconds of the third period. But less than a minute later Soviet defenceman Vladimir Lutchenko was sent off for interference and the Swedes scored on a slap shot by Tord Lundstroem.

One of the heroes of the game was Swedish goalie Leif Holmqvist, who missed early games with a back injury. He returned to top form while the Soviet goalie, Viktor Konovalenko, injured after five minutes of the second period, was taken to hospital with a concussion.

Despite the tie, the Russians still are favorites to win the title for an unprecedented eighth year. They lead the Swedes in goal spread, the difference between goals scored and allowed that is used to determine final placings in the event of a points-tie. The Russians are 26-7 against 27-10 for the Swedes. The Czechs are third in goal spread with 24-13 compared with 15-13 for Finland.

Don't Overlook Action in West

By The Canadian Press

The tension-packed National Hockey League East Division race has provided some exciting games in recent weeks and promises to provide more of the same, but it has also tended to obscure a few developments in the West.

Still often referred to as the expansion division, the West has failed to provide anything equal to the eastern race which has the top five teams packed into a six-point spread.

But a couple of head-on clashes are shaping up in the West with Pittsburgh Penguins and Philadelphia Flyers fighting for second place while Minnesota North Stars battle Oakland Seals for the fourth and final playoff spot.

The Seals took over fourth place from the North Stars by defeating Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in Friday's only game. The loss left the Wings in a tie with New York Rangers in the East, one point behind Chicago Black Hawks and four behind the leading Boston Bruins.

HOLD SLIGHT EDGE

Pittsburgh holds only a one-point edge over the Flyers going into tonight's action which has Philadelphia visiting Montreal Canadiens and the Penguins playing host to Chicago.

The remaining schedule of eight games tends to favor Philadelphia, which plays four home games and four on the road. The Penguins face five more road games and only three at home and the two clubs have a home-and-home showdown series beginning next weekend.

Oakland and Minnesota also have a home-and-home series remaining. The Seals have three more home games and four on the road while the North Stars face six more road games and three at home.

WILL PILOTS OPEN SEASON . . .

. . . IN SEATTLE OR MILWAUKEE?

Angels Reserve Rooms in Two Cities

SEATTLE (AP) — With the date of the Seattle Pilots' home opener drawing near, the American League baseball clubs still belongs to Seattle, at least through the weekend.

That is the only thing clear today as owners of the financially-troubled baseball franchise continue their efforts to clear a series of complex legal barriers blocking their plan to sell the team to Milwaukee interests.

Pacific Northwest Sports Inc., operators of the team, face two court hearings here next week. Their legal battle also has spread to Tempe, Ariz., site of the Pilots' spring training camp.

The Pilots are scheduled to open the 1970 season here April 7 against California Angels. But the Angels, taking no chances, have reserved hotel rooms both here and in Milwaukee, where baseball interests are waiting with money to buy the Pilots.

After a day's testimony, a Superior Court judge Friday continued until Monday a hearing on whether to grant the city of Seattle and the State of Washington a temporary injunction against a franchise move. Also extended until Monday was a restraining order temporarily banning an move until legal arguments are aired.

And on Tuesday, a separate hearing will convene in U.S. District Court here on a request by Pacific Northwest Sports for an injunction blocking the city, state and local interests from interfering with sale of the franchise.

Superior Court Judge James W. Mifflin heard arguments Friday on whether to grant a temporary injunction against a Pilots move. The action is sought separately by the city and state in which all American League teams are defendants and against the Pilots owners by Seattle attorney Alfred J. Schweppe, acting as a ticket-holder on behalf of his "outraged self."

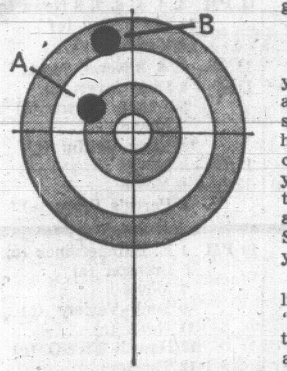
Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

(Three-time World Champion)

In today's situation, blacks are leading by one point late in the game. Whites have last rock and either their second or third is shooting.

THE STRATEGY — Now is the time to make your move for game control. Because the rocks are behind the tee line, call for a freeze to "A". If a good shot is made, you are bound to have a chance for two.



Even if the shooter is heavy and taps "A" back, you can still force your opponent to make a good shot and get your rock past the backing. And this would likely leave a pocket for you to draw into on your next shot. When this type of house develops late in a game, go for the deuce.

TODAY'S TIP — Whenever you call for this type of shot and you have last rock, the shooter must understand that he cannot be light. If he comes up short of the house, your team is in serious trouble and the opposition has an excellent chance to steal. Such a steal will likely cost you the game.

Even if the shooter is a little heavy and freezes to "B", you are not in any trouble, and you may still get an easy chance for the deuce.

UTICA, N.Y. (CP) — The Canadian champions, skipped by Don Duguid of Winnipeg, completed the preliminary event of the world curling championship Friday and picked Scotland as the team to survive the semi-finals this morning.

"I think it's actually between the United States and Scotland," said lead Bryan Wood of Canada. "And I think the Scots will win the semi finals."

The Scots, who took one loss in the preliminary eight-country, round-robin event to finish second, played at 9 a.m. today in the semi-final against the Swedes who upset Wood's assessment by knocking off the Americans 11-3 Friday night.

The Canadians got the big break of the championship by virtue of their first-place finish.

They defeated France 16-5 Friday morning to complete their sweep in the round-robin and drew a bye into the sudden-death final this afternoon.

GOT BREAKS

The United States, Sweden and Norway had tied for third spot in the preliminary rounds before the United States eliminated Norway 10-7 in the first playoff game Friday afternoon and Sweden disposed of the United States.

"Winning first place is what the round-robin is all about," said Wood. "This has been a tough tournament and we got the breaks."

Wood said, however, that the world championship was not nearly as tough as the Canadian tournament.

In other final-round games Friday morning, the U.S. defeated Germany 12-11, Scotland downed Norway 9-6, and Sweden beat Switzerland 11-4.

BOWLER OF WEEK

First out-of-town kegler in past 12 weeks to earn men's tenpin award in annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is Ed MacDonald of Sooke. On his way to division-topping 651 series, Ed opened with sparkling 255 game and tagged on efforts of 232 and 164 in Men's Tenpin League at Rainbow Lanes. Weekly award qualifies MacDonald for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs on Sunday, May 16.

Claremont Reaches Girls' Hoop Final

NEW WESTMINSTER — Claremont of Victoria, handling defending champion Salmon Arm Jewels with surprising ease, went shopping today for a first B.C. high school girls' basketball title by a Vancouver Island team.

Claremont moved to the final by defeating Salmon Arm 45-24 Friday.

The Victoria-area team will face Richmond, which defeated Penticton 38-17 in the other semi-final, in today's showdown game.

Richmond handed Claremont its only loss, 44-34, in the round-robin preliminary portion of the three-day tournement.

Throwing up a tight zone defence, Claremont startled onlookers with the ease in which they handled Salmon Arm. The Jewels had won the B.C. title in each of the past five years, and seven of the past nine.

Lorna McHattie, with 14 points, Barb Munro, with 10, and Lorraine Benn sparked Claremont. Miss Benn connected for nine points but was outstanding in collecting rebounds for Claremont.

Munro and Benn each scored 12 points and McHattie added 11 earlier Friday in the team's 39-34 quarter-final victory over New Westminster.

OAK BAY ADVANCES

In other quarter-final games, Richmond edged Prince George 28-21; Penticton defeated Hillside of Vancouver 23-21, and Salmon Arm downed Mennonite Educational Institute of Clearbrook, 27-20.

Another Victoria school, Oak Bay, sparked by Cecile Van Schaik's 11 points, defeated Creston 35-21 to move into the consolation semi-finals. Also moving into the fours were Kamloops, which defeated Nanaimo 24-20; Nelson, which downed Abbotsford 28-16, and Queen Elizabeth of Surrey, which beat Prince Rupert 34-22.

Canucks Snap Point Record

By The Canadian Press

Vancouver Canucks Friday chalked up yet another Western Hockey League record with a 7-3 win over visiting Salt Lake City Golden Eagles.

The win gave National League bound Vancouver 97 points and set a WHL record for the most points in a season, previously held by Portland Buckaroos with 96 points in the 1968-69 season. It also gave them a record 45 wins in a season.

In other games, San Diego edged Seattle 4-3 before 8,000 San Diego fans and Denver Spurs held Phoenix Roadrunners out of fourth place with a 5-3 victory.

Nanaimo, Trail Move to Front In 'B' Playoffs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Four was the magic number Friday night in the semi-finals of British Columbia Junior B hockey as Trail Junior Smoke Eaters defeated Prince George Chiefs 4-1 and Nanaimo Buccaneers downed Chiliwack Jets 4-2, Keith McIntyre paced the Smokies with two goals in the game in Trail before 2,500 spectators. David Palmer and Gordie Redding added singles for the victors and Dave Rother scored the Chiefs' lone goal.

Second game in the series goes tonight in Trail with the third game, if necessary, in Trail Sunday.

In Chilliwack, Ray Clark got two for Nanaimo and singles came from, Ken Woknits and Murray Randall. Dale Berg scored both Chilliwack goals in the game before 2,000 fans.

NEW COUNCIL MEMBERS

OTTAWA (CP) — Tennis star Robert Bedard of Lennoxville, Que., and Roger Bourbonnais of Edmonton, captain of Canada's national hockey team from 1963 to 1967, Friday were appointed members of the national advisory council on fitness and amateur sport.

Others among the 16 new appointments were Brian Carter, director of the Dolphin Swim Club, and H. A. 'Sandy' Robertson, both of Vancouver.

Comeback Vikings Clip Butlers 4-3

University of Victoria Vikings climaxed a great series comeback Friday by defeating Butler Brothers 4-3 to capture the Colony Cup and the Vancouver Island Hockey League championship.

The league-winning Butlers won the first games in the best-of-five final, 4-2 and 8-5, but Vikings rebounded with 7-5 and 6-5 (in overtime) triumphs to force Friday's decider.

Playing before the season's largest playoff crowd at the Sports Centre, 1,175 fans, Vikings built up a 4-0 lead on two goals by Dwight Fok and singles by Larry Hackman and Bob Buie.

Two goals by Wayne Anderson and one by Orv Coulter put Butlers back in the running, and only some spirited work by the Uvic defence preserved Vikings' victory. Butlers shelled Viking netminder Fred Tenisci with 20 shots in the final period.

Butlers pulled goalie Ed Hastings in the final minute, but failed to produce the tying goal.

11:15: Channel 8: Normandy Squadron (1960 French Drama), Marc Cassot, Georges Riviere. Documentary-like story of Free French air squadron which fought with the Russian air force.

11:20: Channel 6: A Clear and Present Danger (see above).

11:30: Channel 7: Double Feature: Divorce Italian Style (1961 Italian satire), Marcello Mastroianna. Excellent satire on modern Italian manners and mores, and The Wayward Bus (1957 Drama), Jayne Mansfield. About a group of people who take a short bus ride — makes an occasioanlly interesting film.

11:40: Channel 2: The Third Day (1965 Mystery), George Peppard, Elizabeth Ashley, Roddy McDowall. Amnesia, accidental death and family intrigue join to make this an unlikely but entertaining tale.

12:00: Channel 12: The Horse Soldiers (1959 Adventure), John Wayne, William Holden, Constance Towers. Civil War officers have contrasting viewpoints on war.

SUNDAY

6:00: Channel 11: Down to the Sea in Ships (1949 Drama), Richard Widmark, Lionel Barrymore. Life on New England whaling boats seen through the eyes of a young man and a salty sea captain.

6:00: Channel 12: The Roots of Heaven (1958 Drama), Trevor Howard, Errol Flynn. A good film about a group of adventurers, opportunists and one idealist who join forces to protect the African elephant.

9:00 Channel 4; The Cardinal (1963 Drama), Tom Tryon, Romy Schneider. The story of an eventful path from priest to cardinal.

11:20 Channel 6: Normandy Squardon (see Saturday above).

11:40: Channel 2: Birdman of Alcatraz (1962 Drama), Burt Lancaster. Gripping true story of a convict who became an expert on birdlife while serving time for murder. Superior adult drama.

Divorce Sought

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (Reuters) — Singing star Howard Keel was sued for divorce Thursday by his wife Helen. The couple were married 20 years ago and have three children. Mrs. Keele's divorce suit mentioned only "irreconcilable differences" and listed community property.

FEATURED BEAUTY on Bonanza (Sunday, 9 p.m., Channel 5) is Anakorita, above. Michael Landon, who stars as Little Joe, wrote and directed the episode. (NBC Photo)

WEEKEND SPORTS

TONIGHT

Random Notes for Watching TV

By WALTER McKINNON

There are few things more maddening than a fatuously pompous television documentary.

Friday night ABC (Channel 4) pre-empted Love, American Style to make way for an hour-long special about the problems of pollution on this planet of ours, the first of three under the blanket title Mission Possible.

Love, American Style is far from my favorite show ... but Friday night, after a taste of the documentary's insipid oversimplification of one of humanity's most pressing problems, I would cheerfully have welcomed Love back.

At the end of the hour, about all I had gained was the intelligence that the American Broadcasting Corporation believes San Francisco hippies are going to save the world from its own filth.

Tonight

Canadian Efforts Department

Taking of the West (7 p.m., Channel 8) is potentially one of tonight's best bets for viewing. It's an historical documentary based on Frank Rasky's book, The Taming of the Canadian West. Austin Willis narrates the hour, which is illustrated with still shots and film from Banff, Calgary, Winnipeg and Toronto. How Toronto got into the act, we don't know.

For the western music fans, there's still Countrytime (7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) with strictly Canadian talent. Singers include Sharron Lohnes, Robert Bouchard, Keith DeLong and Eric Browers and the Country Folk. Songs — I Love Charlie Brown, Branded Man, Love's Gonna Live Here and Bright Lights and Country Music.

The CBC isn't finished with the Queen Charlotte Islands yet. Last week's Klahanie effort was worthwhile and tonight (9:30 p.m., Channel 2) they interview residents of the north B.C. coast islands.

The Royal Canadian Navy, part two (10 p.m., Channel 2) is unlikely to be any better than part one. Skip it.

B.C. Social Credit has the soapbox tonight (11:15 p.m. Channel 6) on the regular Saturday night public affairs segment.

James Mason Department

Actor James Mason makes the scene twice tonight, first in his Lolita performance (9 p.m., Channel 12) as scholarly Humbert Humbert, destructively obsessed with a young girl in the movie Lolita; and second, in a profile program (10 p.m., Channel 11) in which he traces his career.

Shows We've Seen Before Department

The Honeymooners are back (JACKIE GLEASON, 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12) in a 1967 episode that has bus driver Ralph (Gleason) on the psychiatrist's couch. Not a bad episode.

The Clampetts (BEVERLY HILLBILLIES, 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) are preparing to head for the hills. Granny thinks Elly needs an Ozark husband, so the whole tribe turns predatory.

Moon madness overtakes Green Acres (9 p.m., Channel 7) when Lisa buys a "moon rock" from boy scientist Dinky Watson and it starts beeping.

Down South Department

The American networks are still fighting for number one spot. NBC has it, CBS wants it and has mounted an eleventh-hour push. The viewer wins, because some of the specials they've thrown in to the fight are exceptionally good.

Sunday

Long Afernoon Department

Afternoon movie worth seeing is Francis of Assisi (2:30 p.m., Channels 6 and 8), a biography of the 13th-century saint who founded the Franciscan order. Bradford Dillman stars.

Pianist Glen Gould plays works of Bach and discusses musical concepts (3 p.m., Channel 2) using recordings, film, and electronics for a new approach to the classics in music.

The New Majority (4 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) presents a look at the Canadian music scene, including comments by jazz great Count Basie.

More Canadiana Department

Ninety Days North (THIS LAND OF OURS, 5 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) profiles Manitoba outdoor businessman Svein Sigfusson, who runs a cat train operation in the North in winter. When the ice is thin, it's a risky operation.

Travel is the big thing with Tommy Hunter tonight (7, Channels 2 and 6) with songs like Wait for Sunday, Get On Board, My Love is a Wanderer and Classical Gas.

That's Show Biz (9 p.m., Channels 2 and 6) is a special CBC production in which former Laugh-In writers Lorne Michaels and Hart Pomerantz take a shot at the entertainment industry. Most of the flak is aimed at TV evangelists, chefs, interviewers and spy dramas.

Dirty World Department

Veteran U.S. television newsman Bill Downs has been pulled off his Pentagon beat in Washington . . . to cover ecology and pollution. Dirty war to dirty world in one step.

The Usual Stuff Department

Rod McKuen, Liberace and Liza Minnelli head Ed Sullivan (8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12) and McKuen steals the show with a poem and medley of his songs. Liza sings and dances and Liberace plays . . . the piano, of course.

The Bold Ones (10 p.m., Channel 5) begins the rerun cycle with a doctors episode, What's the Price of a Pair of Eyes? It's a mish-mash of storylines, all of them related to blindness . . . not too bad.

Daytime Serial Star Awaiting New Arrival

By HARVEY PACK

NEW YORK — Janis Young, who looks very much like we once hoped the girl next door might look, seems to strike directors as the personification of a femme fatale.

She's George Segal's mistress in the highly acclaimed film Loving, and on NBC's Another World she's cast as Bernice Robinson, an ambitious, designing business woman out to destroy one of the soap opera's nice gentlemen. Off-screen the beautiful Miss Young is happily married to film maker and record producer Mark Abramson, is six months pregnant and preparing for the blessed event with instruction and exercises in natural childbirth.

She doesn't mind bring given such roles as long as they are juicy. After all, she reasons, the bad girls are generally better written than the angels. In Loving, she hardly speaks a word of dialogue and just seems to run all through harried artist Segal's life like some beautiful and haunting shadow figure. We asked whether this means most of her lines were left on the cutting room floor. "No, it was quite intentional," she explained. "The author wrote the girl as a sort of fantasy of his . . . a dream girl you might say. He never really described what she did, where she lived or how they met. She just represents the kind of girl a commercial artist living in the suburbs might envison himself as keeping in New York."

In that case . . . our compliments to the casting director on his choice.

We wondered how her impending motherhood will be handled on Another World and Janis said "I guess Bernice will go away for a while. My contract has many months to run so I won't die. I don't mind doing Another World, but I think daytime serials on TV paint men as much too weak, perhaps because they feel the women at home want it that way. I'd like to see one serial insert a strong, masculine hero."

JANIS YOUNG . . . mother-to-be

Janis and her husband are hiking enthusiasts and their idea of a glorious vacation is to fly down to Tennessee and spend a week camping out and walking the trails.

"I spent a good deal of my childhood in the country — some in the Ozarks . . . and I really love it. My husband comes from Boston but he was nice enought to try hiking and he's hooked."

Despite the fact that she spent several very productive years in repertory and loves acting, Janis Young seeks involvement. At the moment these include waiting for the new arrival, conservation causes and sharing the excitement of her husband's first film Arthur's Room which will soon be completed and needs a distributor.

"And then we think about where we're going to live after the baby comes . . . and we'd both like Colorado. You're only a few hours from anywhere today and there's no reason why people lucky enough to be in our profession should be trapped in a metropolitan area."

Loving is not exactly Janis' first feature but her debut was completely inauspicious. "I was an early near victim of The Boston Strangler. A very fast scene."

The picture is George Segal's best screen portrayal to date and its success may even relieve him of the need for ego gratification which drives him into the late night talk circuit as a clown with a banjo. Although the film itself is not totally satisfying it has some excellent moments and is superbly directed by Irvin Kershner.

TELEVISION IN REVIEW

Network Musical Chairs

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — This has been a unique television season in the way the networks have played musical chairs with each other's series and specials.

The long-running comedy series Get Smart was, for instance, picked up by CBS-TV after it was cancelled by NBC-TV. It turned out that Get Smart was indeed over the hill, and it won't be back on any network next season.

Another comedy series, The Ghost and Mrs. Muir, also cancelled by NBC-TV, was picked up by ABC-TV, which thought it could make it work with more slapstick. Nothing, however, made it work, and it too is dead on the networks for next season.

Red Skelton, meanwhile, was cancelled by CBS-TV recently, but was immediately snapped up by NBC-TV, which will bring back the comedian next season — though in a half-hour form, which is half the length he has on CBS-TV.

Most recently, CBS-TV has been trying to overtake NBC-TV in an eleventh-hour bid for the year's ratings supremacy. And one of the amusing sidelights has been the fact that CBS-TV, in scheduling some last-minute specials to hype its ratings, has included several reruns shown first on NBC-TV, the network it is trying to beat.

For example, on March 31, CBS-TV will rerun an old NBC-TV documentary called The Lions Are Free. This was first shown on NBC-TV in January, 1969. But because the recent broadcast of the movie Born Free was a smash on CBS-TV, the network figured that the follow-up of The Lions Are Free, with some of the same characters, would be a good bet.

Furthrmore, on April 3 CBS-TV will rerun another old NBC-TV special, a very good variety hour called Like Hep! which stars Dinah Shore and also includes Lucille Ball, Diana Ross and Rowan and Martin.

The same night, by the way, CBS-TV will have a variety hour starring Don Knotts and featuring Andy Williams. Ironically, this program will also be an excellent showcase for NBC-TV because Knotts will begin a weekly variety series on that network in the fall after years of identification with CBS-TV, chiefly through the old Andy Griffith Show. And Williams, of course, already has an NBC-TV variety series that helped knock off CBS-TV's Jackie Gleason this season.

"I always thought a carat was some kind of vegetable.

Then we went to Birks for the ring. Now I know more. Lots more."

"Carats, points, cut, clarity. These aren't exactly words I use every day. So not being an expert I decided to go to the number one experts in the country. Birks.

I discovered that all diamonds have what they call a determinable value. And if a diamond has a certain quality, any jeweller worth his salt can get the regular price for it. If he sells it for less, he's either willing to lose money or something is funny.

Our Birks diamond isn't a very expensive one. In a couple of years we plan to trade it in for something better. But I paid exactly what it's worth. And the setting she chose is one of their new ones. Terrific."

Tokyo Imperial Hotel Open to Guests

By PHILIP SHABECOFF

TOKYO (NYT) — The new Imperial Hotel, the third of its line to rise from the old moat of the Imperial Palace in the heart of Tokyo has thrown open its doors to the world.

The 17-storey steel and glass structure replaces the renowned, rambling and controversial Imperial Hotel building constructed by the American architect Frank Lloyd Wright, between 1917 and 1922.

The new building contains none of the detail, the mixture of Japanese and Western touches, or varied textures of the old Wright building. But the management of the Imperial notes that the new hotel is the biggest in the Orient.

The hotel has 900 rooms and, together with the old annex building next door, can accommodate 2,400 guests and 1,600 employees as well as park 700 cars.

The new building gives a feeling of spaciousness. Corridors are long and the lobby, called the "Rendezvous Room," is large enough to hold at least one basketball court.

Indeed, many of the hundreds of Tokyoites who donned their best kimono and came to the Ginza district for a first-hand look at the new Imperial, found themselves lost among the corridors, arcades and lobbies of the big building.

There are 10 restaurants providing Japanese, Chinese, French and Western food, and four bars, one of them containing some carved lava stones from the walls of the old Wright building.

In a labyrinthine basement shopping arcade it is possible to buy silks and pearls and $90 British shoes as well as old Japanese prints, carved ivory souvenirs, peanuts and canned fruit cocktail.

The rooms, large by the standards of Japan, range in price from $18.10 for a single room to $277.80 a night for the Imperial Suite.

In the original Imperial Hotel, which opened in November, 1890, as the first hotel in Japan designed for Western tastes, rooms cost as little as 8 yen. Today it takes 360 yen to make $1.

The first building was destroyed by fire, and the management retained Frank Lloyd Wright to design its replacement.

In addition to devoting careful attention to design, Wright also employed a then-revolutionary floating flexible construction to support the building on the soft mud of the old moat on which it was built.

The construction proved its worth on Sept. 1, 1923, when Tokyo was struck by the great Kanto earthquake which claimed the lives of over 100,000 persons. The Imperial was one of the few buildings in central Tokyo that was not destroyed. Hundreds of people who sought refuge inside it were saved.

The hotel was damaged but not destroyed by the American raids during the Second World War.

In late 1967, the Wright building was demolished despite pleas for saving it as a work of art. Management had said that the old hotel had to be torn down for the sake of "safety." However, the building contained only 200 rooms and sat on one of the most expensive pieces of real estate in the world.

The new Imperial cost $60 million to construct.

Protocol Essential Part Of Japanese Way of Life

By IRVING C. WHYNOT
CP Business Editor

TOKYO (CP) — Here you are, on your first visit to Japan and right off you come up against a ticklish problem of protocol when you meet your first Japanese.

Do you bow, shake hands, or present your business card?

The answer is yes.

Any one, two or combination of all three are acceptable in this traditionally formal country despite some of the inroads of Western ways.

Bowing is not as widespread as it once was, and handshaking is becoming more common. The business or calling card exchange is a ritual which just can't be ignored if you are to make a hit with your Japanese acquaintances.

BLUFF IT THROUGH

Of course, if you happen to run into a Japanese who hasn't got a card, or has run out, you upstage him if you present yours and he hasn't one to return. The trick is for both of you to bring out your cards at the same time. If you are a bit late, you've lost the oneupmanship game right off.

If you are caught card-short, there is only one thing to do: Bluff it through. Don't apologize. Reach for your pocket as if you are going for a card, then hesitate and forget it. Your Japanese friend will immediately start wondering why you don't want to give him your card. You've come up with at least a draw.

Deciding whether to bow or offer your hand is a bit more difficult.

On the first effort, you will probably try the bow and find yourself examining your friend's shoe shine while he has his hand extended in thin air across the top of your head. The next time things will be reversed, and about the third time you should come up with some sort of compromise.

STILL TRADITIONAL

It's not at all impossible to run into a combination of all three of these social graces, and to watch experts at work is an education in skilful manoeuvring and sleight-of-hand.

Witness two Japanese manufacturers meeting a prospective North American buyer in a hotel lobby: After the preliminary confusion about bowing and handshakes, they agree on the bow. All three bow, at the same time reaching with one hand into a back pocket for their calling cards, coming up together with smiles and cards extended.

A perfect start for a business relationship!

Among the natives, bowing is still a graceful tradition but more and more the younger generation are switching to the handshake. To the traditional Japanese the touching of hands is for close friends only.

Students no longer bow to their teachers inside and outside school, many times a day. Now, a bow at the start of the day and one at farewell is sufficient.

But the tradition lingers on elsewhere. Train ticket inspectors bow on entering and leaving a compartment, and before and after checking each passenger's ticket.

Elevator girls at hotels and department stores, girl ticket collectors on buses and the girls at store escalators almost always insit on bowing as every customer passes.

Someone figured that for a store elevator girl that probably works out to about 2,400 bows a day.

Municipal Finance Plan Not Optional—Campbell

The provincial government won't allow regional districts to opt out of the proposed B.C. Municipal Financing Authority, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell told the Greater Vancouver Regional District Friday.

The authority, to be set up by a bill before the legislature this session, would pool the $6 billion in property assessments in the province to support municipal borrowing for water, sewer and pollution control facilities.

Ald. Ernie Broome, Vancouver representative on a regional district delegation which met Campbell Friday, said Vancouver will opt out of the authority on the grounds it won't get any higher financial rating through it.

North Vancouver Mayor Ron Andrews said that Burnaby and New Westminster "possibly" will decide to opt out as well under a provision that allows municipalities, but not regional districts, to opt out. All regional districts will be assessed for a share of the costs of the new authority including defaults on any borrowing by members.

Andrews said most municipalities in th Lower Mainland would probably decide to join the new authority because they may not feel they can afford to stay out of it.

Co-Ops Supported By Shelford

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Friday all agricultural groups should get together to form marketing boards or co-operatives.

He was commenting on the endorsement of a proposal to establish a grape marketing board by B.C. grape growers. The growers have signed a petition to Shelford asking permission to set up a board.

J. M. Burns, secretary of the association, said the favorable response came from growers representing 97 per cent of the grower-owned acreage in the Okanagan Valley and about the same precentage of producers operating three or more acres of vineyards. The petition was signed by 116 growers owning 1,941 acres.

Shelford said the next step would be a plebiscite on the proposal. Negotiating boards are needed, he said, and there was also a need to establish production quotas.

The example by the federal government of paying grain growers not to produce should not be repeated, Shelford said, and this is why quotas are required.

Crime Busters Lips Sealed On Seminar

Most people attending conventions are only too willing to trumpet about the work they did — maybe to justify their expense accounts.

But 35 policemen from across Canada ended a three-day business session in Victoria Friday and you could call it the silent seminar.

It was the third annual seminar of criminal intelligence units — the specialists who battle organized crime. And like the crime syndicates, they believe in keeping their trade secrets to themselves.

Co-chairmen were Detective-Inspector William Andrews of the Victoria department and RCMP Inspector Jack Routledge of Edmonton.

Delegates' ranks ranged from senior inspector to constable. Many came from western Canada forces but the Ontario and Quebec provincial police were represented and there were some RCMP men from Ottawa.

The chairmen said the seminars have proved useful because one crime-fighting unit disclosing its methods will provide new ideas for others.

ECONOMIC ADVANTAGES UNDER DEBATE

Forest Management Queried

A leading British economist Friday urged British Columbia to take a hard look at its forest economy.

Arnold Grayson, senior economist with the British Forestry Commission, shocked a meeting of foresters when he said B.C.'s forest management programs might be uneconomical in the future.

Investment returns from the forest industry might drop to such a low point that it might be more advantageous to invest the money in other resources, he said.

CRITICAL EXAMINATION

Present concentrated management practices, such as rebuilding a forest, replanting and reseeding, should be critically examined, he said.

In Europe, he said, some countries had decided to drop reforestation and afforestation programs and to let the land regenerate itself naturally.

Grayson said substitutes and competitions from developing countries where trees grow more quickly, might eventually force some countries to re-examine their forest programs.

TO SPARK THOUGHT

The day might even come, he said, when it might be cheaper to import lumber from other countries than to produce it.

Grayson's talk was designed to provoke discussion and some thinking.

It did, though a few foresters refused to budge from a position that "it can't happen here."

Grayson also told his audience that a new trend in Britain and Holland was to grow trees for aesthetic reasons only — just for their looks, or as a cover for other forms of plant life.

In some cases, farmers were subsidized to grow forest lots to improve the looks of the countryside.

When asked if B.C.'s forest industry was justified in cutting trees along river banks and lakes, Grayson obviously not wanting to start a controversy, replied:

"Yes, I see this is quite a problem here as wildlife is an important resource."

He felt multiple use of Crown lands was an important development in B.C.

Grayson also noted that some countries were no longer planting trees to take care of home needs in the event of war.

"In 1957, Britain decided that the atomic bomb was it's defence and growing trees in the event of war was no longer necessary." he said.

Saanich Opposing Fee Hike

North Saanich is opposed to a proposed new hourly scale of fees to be charged by the Capital Regional District for professional planning services.

The fees are $13.50 an hour for a planner; $8.50 for an assistant planner and $6.75 for a planning assistant.

Mayor J. B. Cumming said North Saanich in the past got planning advice for an annual $1,000 contract fee.

"This enabled us to budget for the service," he said. "But under the proposed new system you won't be able to do this. Costs will be an unknown factor."

The mayor said the matter will be further discussed by council.

Air Waves Pioneer Dies

The voice of one of Victoria's earliest radio announcers was silenced recently with the death of E. Clifford Deaville in Tucson, Arizona.

"Cliff" Deaville was an announcer with the first radio station on the west coast, CFCT in Victoria — later CJVI — and his voice was well-known to listeners on Vancouver Island, the lower mainland and the state of Washington during the 1920s and 30s.

Born in Redlands, Calif., in 1907, Deaville came to Victoria with his family shortly before the First World War.

He left Victoria in 1938 for Los Angeles, where he worked in technical design and engineering. During the Second World War, he served with the armed forces radio service of the U.S. Army.

During 30 years spent in Hollywood, Deaville worked mainly in audio and tape recording studios and was also associated with some well-known TV series, among them Gentle Ben.

It's Tulips, It's a Season, It's Rebirth, It's Spring

By JACK SCOTT

The gardener, the scientist and the poet strolled the warm paths of Beacon Hill Park as spring came officially to Victoria at 4:57 p.m. Friday. They saw the ageless miracle in their various ways.

For the gardener — 43-year-old Al Smith, horticulturist for the city's park department, a man who's known every flowering thing in those 154 acres for better than 20 years — the moment of arrival was intuitively measured in the silent, massive detonation of thrusting buds and bursting blooms.

He bent to the fragile buttercup flower of a winter aconite, traditional herald of the season. "Two to three weeks ahead of its time," he said, "but, then, everything is ahead this year."

For the scientist—Allan F. McQuarrie, 57-year-old chief of the Victoria weather-office — it was a moment to contemplate the grand cosmic sweep of the seasons.

"Now, if we were on the equator, the sun would appear to be directly overhead," he reflected. "It has reached that first point in the sign of Aries, the moment of the vernal equinox. The night and the day have become alike in length. Tomorrow the day will be longer — by precisely two minutes at sunrise, two minutes at sunset. In terms of climate, of course, this spring is fully a month early. It is one of the early springs in Victoria's history. But this is the way it is, you see, with the seasons. Generally the same, always different."

For the poet — Doris Ferne, convener of the Island poetry group of the Canadian Authors Association, a tall, handsome woman in a light tweed coat that was warm for the day — it was a time to think of a renewal of the human spirit and the recurring promise of resurrection.

By a bed where the plastic green shoots of tulips were spearing through a carpet of pink forget-me-nots she remembered lines by Leo Kennedy: "Each pale Christ stirring underground splits the brown casket of its root, Wherefrom the rousing soil upthrusts a narrow, pointed shoot . . ."

There was something more than a professional's appraisal in the scrutiny of the gardener as he walked by the park's Goodacre Lake.

"We do it all to an exact schedule year after year, a carefully planned cycle of plants and flowers and trees to keep color in the park all the year. "Al Smith said, "but every spring, just the same, you get a thrill when it happens all over again."

Within his view, a giant, graceful weeping willow cascaded its first bright leaves in a green shower over the still pond. The pale, blush pink, week-old bloom of the daybreak Cherry trees had reached their moment of glory, replacing the fast-fading color of the flowering plums. Narcissus and daffodils a month in bloom — "Golden trumpets of spring," in the poetic fancy of Doris Ferne — stood in company with uninvited dandelions under an arbutus tree.

The hard, bright red petals of a flowering quince were brilliant against the delicate rose-pink of the Japanese cherry. Green-grey buds were swelling voluptuously on the gnarled branches of the Garry oak.

The weatherman was remembering an old English fable. "Spring has come," so it went, "when a maid can set her foot on seven daisies at once." He was remembering too, his years as a meteorologist in Calgary.

"You could call it instant spring there," Allan McQuarrie recollected. "What will take a month or more here on the coast may happen in a weekend on the prairies. Yesterday it was winter, tomorrow it is summer. That's the way it often is in Calgary. Here the effect of the sun's heat dispersed on the earth is more evident in moisture than in warmth. It's moisture that determines climate. Our winter and summer temperatures don't change all that much. We go from the mid-30s and mid-40s of the winter months to the 50s and the 60s of summer. But in precipitation we drop from an average of more than 12½ inches in winter to a summer average of less than 2½ inches."

At that precise cataclysmic moment of spring, in fact, the sun had broken through an overcast. The temperature was a full 55 degrees.

Everything was reacting the way it should. In Goodacre Lake the ducks, transient and park residents alike, were noisily choosing mates. Across the way in their enclosure the male birds of paradise were strutting, spreading their spectacular, painted fans before the hooded gaze of dowdy hens. On a bench by the pond under the last foliage of a plum tree a long-haired couple in blue denim — boy and a girl, it turned out — were laminated in an embrace.

For the poet it was inspiration to scribble the lines of an haiku, the 17-syllable Japanese verse style:

Beneath the plum tree
two lovers see the blossoms
in each other's eyes.

It was a time, too, for Doris Ferne to remember the lyrics of a song written by her husband, Ernest, that seemed just right for the mood of a very special day.

Life is a dream my love,
If we would only see
This world of ours
As always early Spring

The flowers bloom for us,
The song-birds sing—
For in my heart I know,
For you and me my love,
Eternal Spring.

There was a bizarre kind of vernal romance going on in the view of the gardener, too.

Al Smith stood for a moment contemplating the flowering shrub called the skimmia. Here was the female plant, decorated with last year's bright globes of berries, the pale white blossoms just beginning to show. A few yards away stood the male plant. Now the bees and insects were making their busy pilgrimage of pollination. Already the bright red fruit, each bead weighted with four of five seeds, had begun to drop from the branches into the rich loam.

This springtime ritual of nature's rebirth, as immutable as the seasons, caused some longer, graver thoughts by weatherman McQuarrie as he passed that way.

"Nature remains remarkably constant," he mused, "but what man does to it is the imponderable factor. We know little of the lasting effects that pollution will have on our total environment, but there's chilling evidence that spring may not always be this welcome.

"Weather is nothing more, really, than the continual exchange of the cold air from the Arctic regions with the hot air over the equator. There is evidence that the layer of industrial smoke, cloud and pollutants creates what we know as 'the greenhouse' effect. It absorbs and holds the sun's radiation so that the earth is heated in a new balance of our making. The snow lines and timber lines are eding toward the Arctic. The mean temperature of the earth's surface rises and threatens to melt the Arctic ice caps.

"There are those who believe that one day the sea level will raise by 300 feet. There won't be any spring day in Beacon Hill Park if we let that happen."

The poet was having no such gloomy thoughts.

Earlier in the day Doris Ferne had written her own eloquent summation of what 4:57 p.m. Friday meant to her. Now, in the silent explosion of spring in the dark, she read these lines:

March month
impels me to pilgrimage, wandering woodland
paths
to 'consider the lilies
how they grow'

Here in the forest they bend immaculate heads,
ponder renewal, incredible
wonder of Spring,
affirming the ever-recurring glory of Resurrection.

VOTING TURNOUT LIGHT

Voter turnout was "very light" this morning in the Central Saanich aldermanic by-election.

Fred Durrand, municipal clerk, was hoping it would improve later in the day.

Polls in the election, called to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Ald. Philip Bunn, will remain open until 8 p.m. in the Municipal Hall and the Keating and Brentwood Elementary Schools.

Candidates are Ron Drayton, 6871 Woodward Drive, a painter; Patricia Grove, 2396 Barbara Place, a chemical analyst and Ken Stanlake, 2012 East Saanich Road, a cablevision operator.

'Money, Pain, Lives' Price of Politics

By DON VIPOND

The chief of staff at St. Joseph's Hospital said today political bickering over expansion plans is a scandal which is costing money, pain and perhaps lives.

Dr. Peter Banks aimed his sharpest barbs at Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis who Friday said he would recommend to the regional hospital board he heads that St. Joseph's building plans be temporarily shelved in the face of dispute over design with the provincial government.

"I think this is a frank scandal," Banks said, "that this man's petty political peccadilloes with (health minister) Mr. Loffmark should deny half the city's hospital facilities from expanding."

MEETING FAILS

St. Joseph's plans call for expansion on the nearby St. Ann's Academy site. The city is insisting it needs to extend Belleville Street through the over-all site. Loffmark has refused to approve splitting the expanded hospital by a road.

The regional hospital board has approved hospital facilities flanking the road extension but the latest in a series of meetings with the health minister Friday failed to resolve the stalemate.

Meanwhile, says Banks, there are about 40 patients taking up acute care beds at the hospital who should be in more economical accommodation and this is costing the taxpayers about $2,000 a day.

'CRIPPLED'

"Because these patients are blocking our beds we cannot utilize to the full all our expensive extra facilities . . . our operating rooms are inadequate and we are doing a large proportion of the major surgery in the city . . . our obstetrics department is crippled."

Is crowding at St. Joseph's costing lives?

"It's difficult to give exact statistics on that because question of life and death is involved, we just admit the patient, we admit them into the corridors.

"But what is happening is that if you have a gall bladder (problem) or a hernia . . . you can be a year and a half in discomfort because we can't get you into the hospital.

"This is morbidity, not mortality. But mortality is involved here because I myself have had cases that I've had to nurse out of hospital when it's frankly dangerous to do that . . ."

On the debate over whether Belleville should go through or around the hospital Banks said:

"We in the hospital have said time and time again that we'll live with the road either way but that we thought it was absurd for them to plan a hospital and at the same time plan a road going through it.

'AMPLE WAYS'

"When you look at this road question, there are ample ways around this hospital to avoid the traffic that they say in 7½ years might build up at the corner . . .

"Frankly, I think the problem at the corner can be solved with a traffic light. And that's not going to cost $2 million.

"What is happening here is that we are witnessing a fight between one group of politicians and Mr. Loffmark and I object when this happens over the bodies of our patients."

Arthur Mayse . . .

FOR A WHILE THIS week, Victoria reclaimed a third-generation native son and former Times carrier who has done his city proud in the academic world. He is Dr. David J. Lawless, dean of studies at St. John's College, Winnipeg.

Dr. Lawless has now returned to the land of ice and snow after taking part in the Conference of Western Deans, which wound up its sessions Friday at Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Behind him he left some thoughts worth pondering, as well as an impression that he is still an unreconstructed admirer of his old home town.

Victoria, very pretty in the springtime, kept intruding on our coffee-break conversation. However, we did touch on other subjects including the elderly college at which this 37-year-old psychologist holds a senior post.

St. John's, an affiliate of the University of Manitoba, has been conferring degrees since 1866. But it can reach back through Canadian history to years when it served the Red River Settlement as a school.

At this point, a two-masted yacht nicely dressed in white nylon framed itself in our seaward facing window. David Lawless watched it with intent eyes. As a boy here, he passed from Monterey Elementary to now-deceased St. Louis College. But in retrospect, he's convinced that he did most of his learning down around the Oak Bay shore.

The yacht winged on and out of sight. We agreed once more that Victoria is a matchless city.

I learned that this youngish dean is strongly in favor of such college systems as University of Victoria has introduced. The college, as opposed to the impersonal centralism of the multiversity, gives the student a sense of belonging and a point of identification.

What about the student himself? How does he differ from those who came before him?

Dr. Lawless considered those questions. He then offered as the chief difference a shifting of emphasis.

"We had to think about things," he said. "The student today wants to feel about things. It's a turning away from the hard, cool, rational thinking that produced pollution and the hydrogen bomb."

The result, as he observed it, is a veering from the "hard-nosed" sciences to the social sciences. He named sociology, anthropology, and, to my surprise, theology, as fields that have become popular.

"Not theology as we used to think of it," he explained, "but religion as a means by which man can relate better to his world. There's a keen interest in eastern religions which in some ways rely less on thinking than on feeling. This is to some extent inhibited in western religion. We tend to seek God intellectually rather than emotionally."

Dr. Lawless pointed to a similar trend in music. Youth's music isn't ordered, like Bach and Bethoven. It's disorganized . . . meant to be felt.

He does not advocate a complete reversal of attitudes. But he believes an adjustment of balance may be a good thing.

"Perhaps we've held the expression of emotion suspect for too long," he said, "and gone too far on the intellectual approach."

As for the student himself, Dr. Lawless finds him more knowledgeable than his predecessors, but less mature.

"The more complex the creature, the longer dependent on parents or some other source it is likely to be," he pointed out.

"If we accept the hypothesis that the human being is becoming more and more complex, the longer we can expect that period of dependence to become."

The teen-ager who breaks with his home depends on his peers, and must be like them in every way. This creates an ambivalence and leads to problems. The drug user is usually an extremely dependent person.

"If you were searching for a common factor among drug users," said Dr. Lawless, "It would be this dependency."

It was time for the visiting dean, whose six children were disappointed because he couldn't bring them along this time, to return to the conference. But first we talked some more about Victoria.

"You speak as if you're hooked on this city," I told him.

He admitted the charge with a loyal, "Wouldn't anyone be?"

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Here's a new way of sewing you can't miss with . . .

Compliments have been flying our way like confetti since we first appeared in public in the smart stretch knit T-shirt we learned to make last week at a Stretch & Sew class . . . We were invited to attend a 2-hour session . . . which we left literally bursting with enthusiasm . . . not to mention the T-shirt which was whipped up in well under two hours! . . . This Stretch & Sew technique of making things from stretch fabrics is terrific! . . . It's real fun sewing! . . . No basting, no finishing of seams . . . its fast as lightening, and equally electric! . . . Course consists of eight weekly lessons, during each of which you learn to make something different . . . including stretch pants . . . girdle . . . swim suit or bikini . . . You don't need to know a thing about sewing to make beautifully - fitting, professional - looking shirts, sweaters, dresses, slacks, etc., for yourself, your husband and your children . . . Even matching stripes, that bugbear of most sewers, is a breeze! . . . No special machine needed to accomplish all this . . . so we suggest you sign up now for a new course starting the first week in May . . . Everything you need for this special kind of sewing . . . as well as a lovely selection of stretch fabrics . . . is available right on the premises . . . Drop in or phone . . . Stretch & Sew Fabrics, 2541 Estevan Ave., 592-9622.

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

My biggest problem seems to be sleeves. I have tried using a smaller length stitch when I draw up the ease at the cap of the sleeve, but I still have a puffed look at the cap. I think the pattern companies make the sleeves too large. What do you think? — Mrs. H.E.J.

Dear Mrs. H.E.J.:

No, ordinarily the cap of the sleeves aren't too large, but without experience, they are one of the most difficult of all techniques to perfect. Most women automatically pull up the ease too tight. By using a smaller length stitch for this, it is possible that you won't have any tucks or pleats in the sleeve but it will still look too full.

Since we use no shoulder padding in suits and coats today, there is very little easing necessary. Release almost all of your ease. When you begin pinning the sleeve in the armhole, always work from the sleeve itself, not the garment. This makes it easy to shape the cap of your sleeve over your fingers and actually fit in more ease than you can imagine.

The sleeve itself must always be larger than the armhole; just patiently work with it and repin until you have a nice smooth cap. Never press the sleeve once it has been set into the garment. It should have a nice smooth rolled look, not a sharp, flat look that men's suits must have.

This is one of the most difficult of all techniques. You may find my leaflet "All About Sleeves" very helpful. Send 10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I recently purchased a long sleeved basic dress pattern and discovered it has zippers at the wrist. I would like to eliminate this detail. Are there any alternatives? — Mrs. R.K.

Dear Mrs. R.K.:

This sleeve must be very narrow at the lower end. Most patterns today measure around 9 inches at the wrist anr this is unusually large enough to eliminate the zipper closings. You may add a little iwdth to the sleeve seam. I think you will find it will still look nice and trim and not too wide.

Eskimo Carvings Strike Canadian Note Among Embassy Furnishings in Tehran

By KAYE ROWE

TEHRAN (CP) — The hospitality of the Iranians surpasses anything experienced in the Western world. To the visitor, the continuous invitations to evening parties or magnificent dinners usually result in alarming weight gains.

The English-speaking community in this ancient Persian capital falls into similar patterns, and it is understood that Iranians and the growing numbers of the foreign community will bring relatives or friends if they happen to be house guests. Many a hostess will plot supplies and quantities only to discover that she has far more guests than the original list.

Christopher Eberts, the Canadian ambassador, and his wife are frequent entertainers. Mr. Eberts was chief of protocol during Canada's Centennial Year and dealt with a steady parade of VIPs who visited Expo 67 and paid their respects to the government in Ottawa.

CULTURES COMBINED

Typical of formal entertaining was a recent dinner at the Canadian embassy in Tehran. The house is a gracious place constructed with a reception area two storeys high flanked by a gallery for access to sleeping quarters. The height of ceiling aids air circulation during the heat of summer, Mrs. Eberts says. A large conservatory-type room overlooking the garden and pool had been cleared of greenery to serve as additional dining area. Tables for five or six are most popular with hostesses and guests since they permit an intimacy and warmth of conversation.

The chatelaine of the Canadian embassy integrates elements of the Persian culture with North American. She prefers candlelight exclusively for dining, and each table was centred with carnations. The 24 guests, assembled in farewell to a British military attache who was leaving the Middle East for a new posting in Europe, included military and naval attaches from the American embassy, representatives of major international companies and a few professional people of Iran.

Mrs. Eberts chose an international menu consisting of vichysoisse with a flick of curry flavor, roast veal and a summer pudding which involves the building of a mousse or Bavarian cream as topping to fruit gelatine. The Iranian touch was the scatter of pomegranate seeds as decoration.

Laurentian scenes in oils and water colors, a Goodridge Roberts still-life and a few Eskimo carvings helped to establish Canadian notes amid the embassy furnishings. The emphasis is essentially traditional but with admixtures of Persian miniatures on ivory and studies of hunters after gazelle or Omar Khayyam-type men after doe-eyed girls.

KABOB IS STANDARD

A purely Iranian meal begins with the basic beverage, a refreshing combination of yogurt and soda water. Called "dough" (pronounced dooch), the drink dates back to desert culture when the tribes milked the camel and used lemon as a preservative. The kabob—a method of cooking pieces of meat on a long skewer over burning coals—is the prime favorite. Small chicken sections, livers, pieces of lamb or mutton, are as standard fare as the hamburger is to Western palates.

The kabob often comes with rice cooked like a cake in a pan with the resultant crispy top. Flavors include yellow saffron, from a variety of crocus grown on bleak plateaus of the Middle East.

Plain tea with sugar is the finale to a meal. Desserts are normally a fresh fruit or the omnipresent creme caramel, a kind of custard given the zip of a burnt-sugar topping. From London to Rome, Athens and Tehran, the custard is the apple pie of the people. With luck, the menu might contain Backlava, a French pastry base with ground nuts, sweetened beyond reason with honey.

For Kathy, Culture Is a Game

By JEANNETTE SMYTH

WASHINGTON — Kathy Brake is a Renaissance beauty: pale lashed, wise-eyed, with that plump milky skin that Leonardo loved to paint.

Leonardo would appreciate her for another reason. She's an all around genius—a Renaissance child.

She wrote a get-well letter to Lyndon Johnson when she was two years old. She started to play the piano—just when, her mother can't remember—but she was about three. She wrote a piano piece in honor of composer Dimitri Kabalevsky when she was seven.

She's a champion swimmer with a scrap book full of ribbons, and is a fifth grade student at Stone Ridge School. She has a straight-shooting sense of humor and is nine years old.

She spends a lot of her time playing the piano with absorbed concentration and self-discipline. Her technique and power are remarkable.

FIRST BIRTHDAY

"She's the first child prodigy I've seen in nearly three decades of teaching," says piatno teacher Ylda Novik. "There are things which she does that I can't believe are coming out of a little girl.

"If she had different parents she could be exploited. But neither her parents nor I want to make a little freak monkey out of her."

Experts agree that gifted children benefit from a stimulating environment. Children deprived of mental and physical stimulation when they're very young have lower IQs than other children.

The stimulating environment the experts suggest sounds like fun. Read to a child. Teach him reading and numbers as games. Send him to a good school—if you can afford one.

And don't push him. Let him ask questions.

Kathy is protected by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Brake of Bethesda, Md., Mrs. Novik, and composition teacher Mrs. Hansi Alt.

Kathy Brake is living out her childhood in good time.

Mrs. Alt teaches Kathy harmony out of a college textbook and says, "It's nearly like having a lesson in mathematics—she has an enormously logical mind. Her span of concentration and self-discipline are quite amazing. That child will sit down and improvise on anything. If I ask her to improvise in C major she says 'Please can I do it in C sharp major?' It's too dull. She wants to do the hardest."

KATHY BRAKE

Mrs. Alt punctuates her recital by saying, "The thing, is, she's a real child. Since she has talent, discipline and very, very sensible parents, she might make it as a concert musician. How well brought up she is."

The only people who don't talk in marvelling sentences about her are her parents. That Kathy is really just a little girl is due to the Brakes' good sense of things.

Mrs. Brake is a former biochemist who wears lace stockings. She has a sense of good things; she gives you apples and cheese and fortune cookies to eat instead of Hostess Twinkies.

She carpets her floors with Marimeko designs and hangs her walls with posters and crucifixes. She was raised a Catholic and the crucifixes are just a part of the furniture of home.

PHONETIC GAMES

"When Kathy was about two," says Mrs. Brake, "I started teaching her letters and phonetics as a game."

Kathy learned music as a game, too.

"My husband," Mrs. Brake remembers, "would have Peer Gynt or something on the record player, and she'd remember it the next time he played it. 'What's this, Kathy?' he'd say, and they'd begin to act it out."

It is hard to imagine her father and Kathy—only playpen size—thundering around to the tune of the Hall of the Mountain King. He is a tall, courtly man who plays the violin a bit, writes for the United States Information Agency.

"His father's a minister," Mrs. Brake says, "and maybe that's why he gives everything deep thought."

Thoughtfulness, and culture as a game have helped make Kathy bright. But the real achievement is her glad and easy social adjustment. She likes other kids and they like her.

Asked about child prodigies, Washington child psychologist Robert E. Moran says, "The most difficult thing in the world is to hold a child like that down, so that he doesn't feel strange, lonely, and peculiar. He has a great deal of trouble at age 18 or 20 developing as an adult."

MAKES UP SKITS

Kathy is two years ahead of her school age group, and the Brakes refused to have her accelerated more. That would put her with 12 and 13-year-old girls who are getting involved with hormones and lipstick. Kathy makes up skits and plays basketball with her friends.

Kathy Brake collects books and bugs and gerbils and fossils. She started writing a novel about a bored dog, who in his ennui, looks at this bone and thinks "Oh! This bone must have bad breath!"

She loves her own poodle, Dolly, and a china dog that she named after Bela Bartok. She likes a good somersault and a Mozart concerto equally.

Why does she do all these things?

"I just like to do 'em," says Kathy.

BPW Hears Panel On White Paper

The tax reforms proposed in the White Paper would increase, rather than curb, inflationary trends, panelists in a recent seminar agreed.

The seminar was sponsored by the Victoria and Oak Bay Business and Professional Women's Clubs. Panel members were Don Fouracre, insurance agent; George F. Jones, barrister and solicitor; and C. David Moore, chartered accountant.

They also agreed that implementation of the reforms would impose a heavy tax burden, particularly on the middle income bracket.

Mr. Fouracre outlined the various types of pensions and retirement savings funds and indicated what effect the reforms would have on them.

Mr. Jones commended the government for endeavoring to assess the current tax structure and establish greater equity.

However, he felt that some of the reforms would be difficult to implement, such as evaluation of personal assets.

Corporation and capital gains tax was explained by Mr. Moore. He demonstrated the ramifications that could evolve from an ordinary real estate transaction.

Moderator Ella Brett observed the proposed reforms gave recognition to special aspects of taxation of concern to women which the Canadian Federations of Business and Professional Women, University Women and other national women's organizations have repeatedly mentioned in petitions to the federal government.

Such aspects, she said, included the increase in basic exemption, the rejection of the family unit concept of taxation and the exemption for child care expenses.

Housewives' Bill Given First Reading

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave routine first reading Wednesday to a bill that would entitle any woman who has been engaged in domestic work for more than three years in her home to government retraining assistance.

The bill, sponsored by Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway), would amend the Adult Occupational Training Act under which persons who have been three years in the labor force are paid allowances up to $90 a week for retraining.

Mrs. MacInnis said in a statement that the present legislation discriminates and "continues to handicap women without income who want to take up a position that pays."

She said it is unfair "to penalize a woman who has been tied down in home maintenance and whose husband may only be present in the legal definition."

WOMEN

TUNING IN TO EACH OTHER

These Canadian Girls In Training from Oak Bay decided to practice harmonizing Friday afternoon while waiting for Share to begin.

Share drew CGIT girls from Greater Victoria and the lower Island to the Fellowship Hall, First United Church, for an all-night gathering to help them meet one another and share experiences through learning.

Activities included crafts, good grooming, song leading and guitar instruction; folk singing; creative dancing; games; Easter bonnet making and viewing a film, Syzygy. Breakfast and a midnight snack were served.

Girls and leaders from 19 groups affiliated with Baptist, Presbyterian and United Churches participated in the program which was supported by many local businesses.

Prejudice to Go, Says Editor

SASKATOON (CP) — The editor of Chatelaine magazine says society in the 1970s will rid itself of many prejudices about women.

Doris Anderson told delegates to the Saskatchewan Home Economics Association convention Thursday, there will be many new opportunities for women as laws are changed and new life-styles develop.

Mrs. Anderson said, however, the changes are just beginning and the picture is far from clear.

Prospects are complicated because many women feel threatened by the changes and these women, she said, are happy as housewives and want nothing to do with "brassiere-burning" feminist groups.

"If there is any tragedy in the story of women today, it is this conflict among women themselves and there should not be a conflict. The last thing women should be doing is fighting among themselves."

Mrs. Anderson said Canadian women are among the most-fortunate in the world.

In underdeveloped nations, she said, if a woman has been lucky enough to be specially trained she is under tremendous pressure to use her ability because of the shortage of trained people.

She said it was no wonder modern women were confused about their role because they were little better than chattels for centuries.

Orientals Stretch Meat In Economical Dishes

The popularity of Oriental foods is on the upswing and with good reason: dishes from the Far East are as a rule quick and easy to prepare, decidedly tasty, refreshingly low in calories and gratifyingly economical.

Their economy is largely due to the fact that North Americans and Far Easterners handle differently the meats that lead our grocery price parade.

Instead of cooking single large pieces of meat Oriental cooks cut meat into small pieces and then add other ingredients such as vegetables to stretch the number of servings.

Thus each dish tenders a nice variety of compatible flavors and contrasting textures, with good nutrition and economy as welcome spin-offs.

Roast Beef with Eggs Foo Yung is a dish of this type. The beef is canned roast beef with gravy, a convenience food if ever there was one. It is extended to nearly double the usual number of servings by using it as a sauce for Chinese-style egg and vegetable omelets.

Eggs Foo Yung are easy to make, though a bit of care is required to turn them without breaking.

For a complete East-meets-West menu, start with clear chicken bouillon. Proceed with Roast Beef with Eggs Foo Yung, braised celery-cabbage or broccoli, hot cooked rice and a relish tray of celery hearts, radishes and watermelon pickle.

End things sweetly with mandarin oranges segments spooned over sponge cake wedges; and offer tea throughout the meal.

ROAST BEEF WITH EGGS FOO YUNG

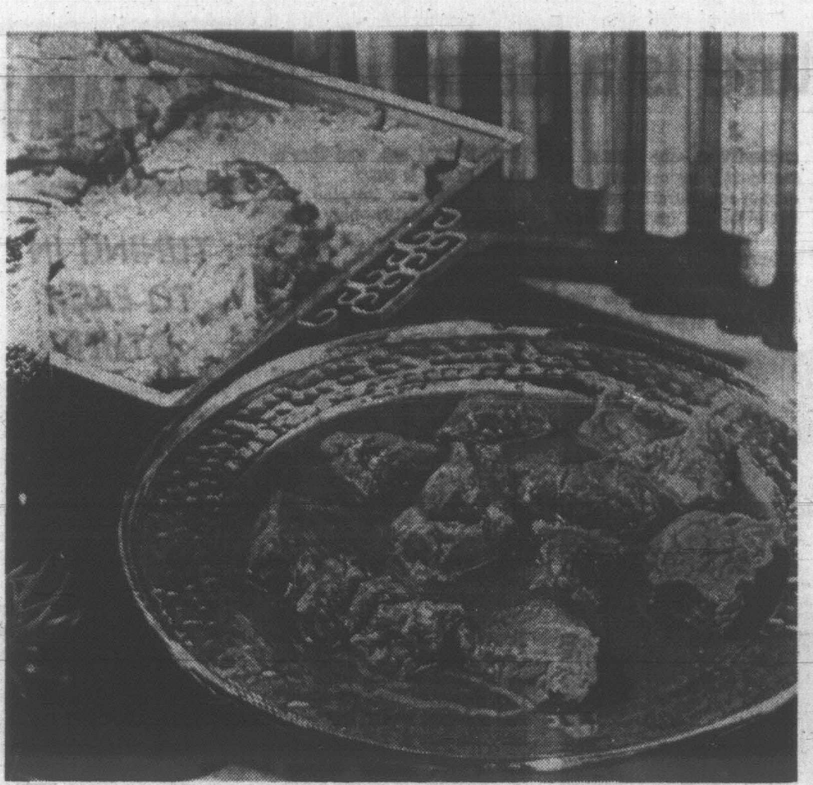
1 small onion, sliced.
Salad oil or shortening
3 large or 4 medium eggs.
½ cup drained bean sprouts.
¼ cup sliced water chestnuts.
1 tbsp. diced pimiento.
2 tsp. soy sauce.
1 can (12 oz.) roast beef with gravy.
Pinch granulated sugar.

For Eggs Foo Yung: Saute onion in 1 tbsp. salad oil until tender. Beat eggs with fork; add bean sprouts, water chestnuts, pimiento, the sauteed onion and 1 tsp. soy sauce.

Heat enough additional shortening in skillet just to cover bottom. For each patty, pour about ¼ cup of egg mixture into skillet. Brown on one side; turn carefully and brown other side. Remove and keep warm while making other patties.

Meanwhile, heat roast beef with gravy, remaining soy sauce and the sugar. Serve hot over Eggs Foo Young allowing two patties per serving. Accompany if desired with additional soy sauce.

Makes 3 to 4 patties.



ROAST BEEF WITH EGGS FOO YUNG

FASHION FLASHES

Why not try the medieval Persian look of long dresses over pants, in trailing chiffon or draped heavy crepe, the dress often smocked or pleated ancient style.

Jewelry in colorful stones and antiqued metal, will dangle whether earrings pendant necklaces or bracelets, or be shaped in Oriental curves.

Look for Japanese influence in spring cocktail dresses, with flowing kimono sleeves, high waistlines wrapped, skirts short but floating gracefully.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Nice Point

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an advisor for a girl's teen club. The mother of one of the girls told me that about three years ago you had two letters in your column dealing with how boys really felt about girls who were nice and girls who weren't. She said one was signed TOO NICE, TOO and the other was signed NOT SORRY, and you printed them both on the same day.

If you can locate them, will you please run them again? Thank you — MRS. A. D. R.

DEAR MRS. A. D. R.: A sharp-eyed secretary found them in the 1967 file, and here they are:

DEAR ABBY: No offence to you, personally, but you're nuts! I agree with that girl who signed herself, TOO NICE. She's right. If a girl is too nice she sits home. It's the fast girls who are popular. I am only 16 and I know from experience that the only reason a boy asks you out is for one thing, and if he doesn't get it, you don't see him again. That's no lie, either. When you said, "If a girl has to fight with a boy to keep his hands off her, she must have led him on," you were wrong. She can be sitting next to him, doing nothing, and he will almost attack her. Since January I have had to break up with three boys because they all tried to go too far. But I'll stay nice because I have my self-respect. But so far it hasn't got me anywhere. Too Nice, Too.

DEAR TOO NICE: Another "nice" girl had this to say on the subject:

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 and freshman year at college. I want to tell all those girls who wonder if boys really like a sweet, old fashioned girl what I learned from experience. Don't be shocked if even the best boys try. After I painstakingly explained my views on the matter of morals many more dates and fine friendships resulted. Some jokingly called me prudish and mid-Victorian, but I was elected to a position of high honor by the student body.

There were times when I actually pitied the girls who allowed boys liberties, thinking it would increase their popularity. (I have a brother, and boys talk.) The girls who parked with the boys on dark roads at night were ignored by the same boys in broad daylight. Keep telling young girls that it pays to be nice, Abby. I am, and I am—Not Sorry.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married nearly two years, and I will never forget one wedding present because 16 of my husband's relatives pitched in and bought it for me. It was an electric appliance which they got wholesale. I figured out that they each put in one dollar!

One of my husband's sisters happens to be very well off, and now she is moving into a new home and is telling everyone not to buy her a house gift. She wants cash instead as she is afraid they might select things which won't look right in her house.

What do you think I should give her? — Eye For An Eye

DEAR EYE: Since you obviously are an "eye for an eye" believer, give her a dollar. But she's your husband's sister, so pass the buck, and let him decide.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a man to be in love with two women at the same time? — Jake.

DEAR JAKE: Yes. And also hazardous.

CONFIDENTIAL TO TORTURED WITH QUESTIONS: A man who continually presses his wife (or girl friend) for every single detail of her past romantic encounters with other men ("tell me the exact words you spoke, the words he spoke, what position were you in at the time, what was he wearing, etc. . . . ") could be attempting to "live" the experience himself, vicariously. I would suspect his masculinity.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, for Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions."

Outgrow Bedwetting When?

Half the children wetting the bed at age 5 will still be wetting at age 11. And bedwetting can go ON and ON. Walter C. Alvarez, M.D., Prof. Emeritus, Mayo Clinic, says: "What can the doctor prescribe . . . He can send the child to a urologist or psychiatrist, but rarely can they help . . . We physicians should know that 1 in 100 Navy recruits are quickly dismissed because of enuresis." Consultant Recommended For Golf Course Problems

An experienced consultant should be hired to review golf course layout problems at Cedar Hill Park and recommend possible improvements.

The recommendation is made in the Development Plan for Cedar Hill Park, prepared by the Saanich planning department.

The report also recommends that the course be operated by the municipality.

The existing layout, the report says, has several problems, one of which is that the clubhouse is at one end of the course rather than the centre.

Construction of a high school, community centre and extension of Tattersall Drive will reduce land available for golf to less than 100 acres or "considerably less" than the 120 to 160 acres recommended by golf experts for a regulation-size par-72 golf course.

The report said the area north of proposed extension of Tattersall should be designated for park use.

CLUBHOUSE PROBLEM

Cedar Hill Park comprises 134 acres, of which 110 acres are used for golf. The park was bought by Saanich from the McRae family in 1967 for 1.2 million.

Thr various arguments in favor of a temporary clubhouse, permanent clubhouse and location are discussed, and the report recommends:

- Council immediately assess the present clubhouse to see it if it is completely incapable of functioning, pending decisions on the community centre-high school planned for the south and southeast parts of the park;
- If the decision is to proceed with new clubhouse, the question of building a temporary or permanent one must be resolved.

The report says a temporary clubhouse, which has been discussed by council at Derby and Diana, will probably allow the best decision to be made in the long run.

'SECOND BEST'

If the existing clubhouse, on Finlayson, can serve the purpose for another year or so, it may provide a reasonable compromise.

It would seem desirable, the report says, to include a permanent clubhouse within the proposed $260,000 com munity centre. But it would definitely be the "second best" location in relation to the golf course layout.

On the community centre, the report notes that nothing has been defined as to the type and range of facilities to be provided and it supported council in appointing a committee later this year to define and recommend on this.

The report recommends that the community centre be alongside the proposed high school, and that 9.5 acres of the park at the southeast corner be sold to the school board and the board purchase 3.5 acres adjacent to the park.

COULD EXPAND

The joint community centre-high school would cover about 22 acres and not interfere with the golf course.

The site would be capable of expansion over an additional 10 acres which will involve eventual changes in the golf course.

The report recommeneded immediate consideration be given to the timing of the community centre, together with the timing of the school and construction information from Victoria city on the extension of Finlayson.

It also recommended approval in principal to the concept of the highest possible degree of joint use of the community centre and the school, mentioning, for example, a common heating plant.

The report also recommends that a small triangular piece of the park separated by Cedar Hill Road be developed for town house apartments, and mentioned that an apartment development is under study between the city and Saanich between Ocean View and Finlayson, east of Cook-Maplewood.

The report concludes there is tremendous potential for the park but much depends on timing and council must "very soon" reach decisions which will effect this timing.

Major Metro Park Still Envisaged

The long-term future of the golf course at Cedar Hill Park in Saanich will have to be studied by future councils in the light of changing conditions.

This opinion is voiced in one part of the municipal planning department's Development Plan for Cedar Hill Park.

The report states:

"There is no doubt that over the years development densities will build up in this area and there will be more and more public demand and need for general park development.

"In addition, the community centre-school will undoubtedly expand from time to time.

"In our view the ultimate future of the Cedar Hill Park may well be as a major multipurpose metropolitan park although any such move should be predicted upon an alternative municipal course. We are not making recommendations or even predictions here but merely stating a logical possibility based on many similar case histories."

NINE HOLES?

The draft development plan, published by the Victoria Daily Times last November, stated:

"In our view, the ultimate future of the Cedar Hill Park will be as a major metropolitan park. As this becomes apparent the existing golf course should be reduced to a nine-hold course as a first step and phased out entirely at a later stage.

"Study should be given to ultimately provide an alternative course, although it is not possible to recommend any timing at this time."

Planner Tom Loney was asked if the final report represents a "softening" of the views expressed in the draft, which foresaw the eventual end of the golf course, and said the park will (not may) become a major metropolitan park and the course chopped to nine holes.

"No, I think we qualifed it to some extent to try to put this issue in its proper persepective — and that is it's a very minor part of the report," he said.

"Those comments in the draft were taken all out of the scale we intended and we changed the wording to try and put them into scale."

After the draft was made public, Saanich council reiterated that it has no intention of seeing the golf course disappear and expressed concern that a draft report should "fall into the hands of the press" before being considered by council and senior staff officials.

GOSSE

Wife Can't Sue A Nasty Husband

If an irate husband punches his wife, breaking her jaw, she can't sue him because in common law they are one entity and she can't sue herself.

But if instead he vents his anger by kicking her dog, she can sue him for the vet bill because the dog is her property.

This was one of the anomalies in law cited by a member of B.C.'s fledgling law reform commission Friday night to illustrate the welter of antiquated, outmoded or just plain unworkable legislation in need of overhaul.

ANNUAL MEETING

Dr. Richard Gosse, QC, of Vancouver spoke to the annual dinner meeting of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island on the law and the need for reform.

Vast areas of law applying in the private sector of society get left behind by busy legislatures, he said. Some of today's rules are based on statutes centuries old.

England's Limitations Act, for example, was framed in 1623 "and you just can't make sense of it."

In recommending changes to the provincial government the law reform commission hopes to bring an organized and planned approach to the law, said the former counsel for the Ontario Law Reform Commission.

GETTING OFF

Of the B.C. commission, he warned "we're just getting off the ground and are very much in a state of organization."

In recent years there has been a growing belief law reform commissions should tackle first areas of law with which the public is vitally concerned.

Family law is an example and researchers in Ontario have proposed to the commission there that deserted wives should get a minimum maintenance law paid by the government which should then take on the difficult task of collecting from the deserting husbands.

ECONOMIC PARTNERS

Other recommendations include recognizing marriage as an economic partnership, meaning assets are owned 50-50 by the partners.

Currently the English law concept of "what's mine is mine and what's yours is yours" prevails, he said.

Prior to the dinner in the Red Lion, the society elected its new executive.

President is R. M. J. Hutchinson, a Nanaimo lawyer, succeeding M. Pat Paine of Victoria. First vice-president is Mrs. Hugh Botterell of Victoria, second vice-president Harry Bootle of Campbell River and treasurer, J. A. de Bourcier of Victoria.

Vic palmer of Nanaimo was honored for lengthy service by presentation of a plaque.

Cost Climb Forces Ebb Of Tide Plan

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has abandoned for the time being any plans to harness the giant tides of the Bay of Fundy to provide electric power in the Atlantic provinces, Energy Minister J. J. Greene told the Commons Friday.

Instead, he said, it will continue programs already under way to assist Nova Scotia and New Brunswick build thermal electric plants fired by coal or oil.

Greene's statement followed release of a report earlier Friday that concluded that use of the Bay of Fundy tides to generate electricity would be uneconomical. It said high interest rates are a major reason.

Outside the Commons, Greene defended the decision want to do so in effect want not to go ahead: "Those who us to give the Maritimes highpriced power.

"That's not the way to end regional disparity. The way to end regional disparity is to provide low-cost power."

David Lewis (NDP—York South) said development of tidal power should be considered "a public development" requiring massive government financial support.

The study announced Friday was set up by the federal, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick governments and it was submitted to the Atlantic Tidal Power Programming Board, formed in 1966.

The study looked at 23 potential sites where the Bay of Fundy's high tides might be harnessed and used to produce hydro-electric power. The technique has been the subject of lengthy Canada—U.S. studies for the Passamaquoddy Bay area near the New Brunswick—Maine border but high interest charges on the investment capital have ruled out that project, too.

Uvic Holds Blood Drive

The Student Union Building at the University of Victoria will be the scene of a three-day Red Cross blood donor clinic March 23, 24 and 25.

The target set for the clinic, which will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day, is 900 units of blood.

Salvation Army Meeting To Have Personal Theme

Delegates from all over British Columbia and parts of the United States are expected to attend the Salvation Army's first Easter Holiness Convention in Victoria from March 26 to 30.

Three speakers, Lieut. Colonel Thomas Ellwood, Major Margaret Green and Captain Bramwell tillsley, all from Toronto, will engage in a panel discussion with a six-cadet team from the Salvation Army's Toronto Training College.

Theme of the convention is "I was there," the personal involvement of the Christian with the Cross and Resurrection.

The convention, to be held at the Empress Hotel, is the first of its kind ever staged here, and Salvation Army officials are hoping that it will become an annual affair.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

Sincerity Always Needs Proof

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

"Sincerity is always subject to proof." John F. Kennedy said that in the address he gave at his inauguration as president of the U.S.A.

But isn't sincerity one of the great personal virtues, a self-validating quality of character? Is it not a primary lubricant of good relations among persons? Was Kennedy being cynical about it?

Kennedy, of course, had in mind declarations of sincerity and appearances of sincerity. He was aware of the element of ambiguity in the whole sincerity business. He had learned, as we all learn, that an image of sincerity is no guarantee of honesty and integrity. Most of us have had the experience of being conned by slickers who exuded sincerity like cheap after-shave lotion. It seems that one of the marks of maturity is a gentle suspicion of appearances of sincerity.

Lord Thomson, with a twinkle in his eyes, once said this: "I'm frank, brutally frank. And when I'm not frank, I look frank." What would you call that? A man being sincere about his own occasional insincerity? As the popular saying has it, "Whether you mean it or not, be sincere!"

I needn't say more about the kind of sincerity which is calculatingly deceptive. But sincerity in our society has other popular aberratons. There is the sincerity, the quite genuine sincerity, of the fanatic. This is the terrible, sometmes terrifying, sincerity of the person who believes that he, along with those who think as he does, has a monopoly in some significant segment of truth.

He may be intolerant, bigoted, utterly prejudiced, sometimes hating those who disagree with him, sometimes a willing practitioner of cruelty on those who disagree with him—but you've got to give him credit for complete sincerity.

Then there is the alarming, sometimes dangerous, sincerity of the person who combines splendid initiative, self-confidence, and gross incompetence. If you have ever had much to do with such a person you will know that sincerity can sometimes do more harm than malice. May the good Lord protect us against the sincerely stupid!

As we go through life most of us develop some sophistication with respect to these aberrations of sincerity. And we do come to demand that appearances of sincerity be given some kind of proof.

But do we ever become so sophisticated that we are never wrong about our own sincerity? How readily we excuse our own folly and ineptness by assuring ourselves that we are sincere anyway! How often we assume that our sincerely good intentions allow us to be incompetent and foolish in their implementation!

We must not, of course, fall into the cheap cynicism which assumes that all appearances of sincerity are bogus, merely deceptive masks. But we need to be aware that even genuine sincerity is never a guarantee of truth, never a substitute for knowledge, never an excuse for unnecessary competence.

In the Bible the word "sincerity," as one of the authoritative biblical dictionaries says, "implies that between the inner self and the expression nothing intervenes to confuse or distort."

And an examination of the use of the word in the Bible shows that sincerity is never merely feeling or sentiment, never simply a matter of one's intentions, never an image or a pose, but, rather, a matter of the response of the total person to the challenges and opportunities of the world, a response showing consistency of inner being with outward conduct.

None of us, of course, achieves an absolute sincerity—but our sincerity has reality to the extent that our motives for the good are expressed in the world with all the competence that we have. And it will always be subject to proof.

Palm Sunday Mass To Be Updated

NEW YORK (AP) — A "new" mass that opens with a popular Protestant blessing, uses a Jewish prayer in the offertory, and revives the ancient Kiss of Peace is in store for many Roman Catholics this Palm Sunday.

The revised liturgy is another in the series of changes made in the Catholic mass in recent years to modernize the service. The new mass emphasizes flexibility through a wider variety of scripture readings and new and optional prayers, blessings and hymns.

The new opening for the mass, St. Paul's Second Epistle to the Corinthians, is the traditional Protestant blessing: "The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit be with you all."

A hall mark of the new flexibility of the mass is the increased number of scripture readings, which used to be repeated every year but now will go through a three-year cycle before there is a repetition.

FEWER REPETITIONS

Throughout the service, many repetitions have been omitted. "Lord I am not worthy," now repeated three times before communion, will be said only once. Several repetitions of "the Lord be with you" have also been dropped to increase the continuity of the liturgy.

At the offertory, the priest will offer a prayer with which Jews usher in the sabbath, the "Kiddush" or "Bekarah" "Blessed are You, Lord God of all creation. Through Your goodness we have this bread to offer, which the earth has given and human hands have made."

The Kiss of Peace, an early Christian expression of fraternal charity and peace currently used in some churches on an experimental basis, will again be incorporated in the Eucharist. In some churches following the breaking of bread, the priest will embrace, shake hands, bow or touch cheeks with some worshippers who, in turn will transmit this graphic sign of love to the rest of the congregation. The gesture will vary, in some parishes involving only a nod and a saluation of "peace."

TOP HUNTER WILL WIN 10-POUND EGG

A ten-pound easter egg.

That's the grand prize some lucky youngster will walk away with in this year's Jaycee Easter Egg Hunt at Elk-Beaver Lake park.

All children 12 and under are invited to join in the search for the thousands of easter eggs the Jaycees have hidden throughout the park.

A special area will be roped off for toddlers accompanied by adults and several live Easter Bunnies will be on hand.

Festivities start at 1 p.m.

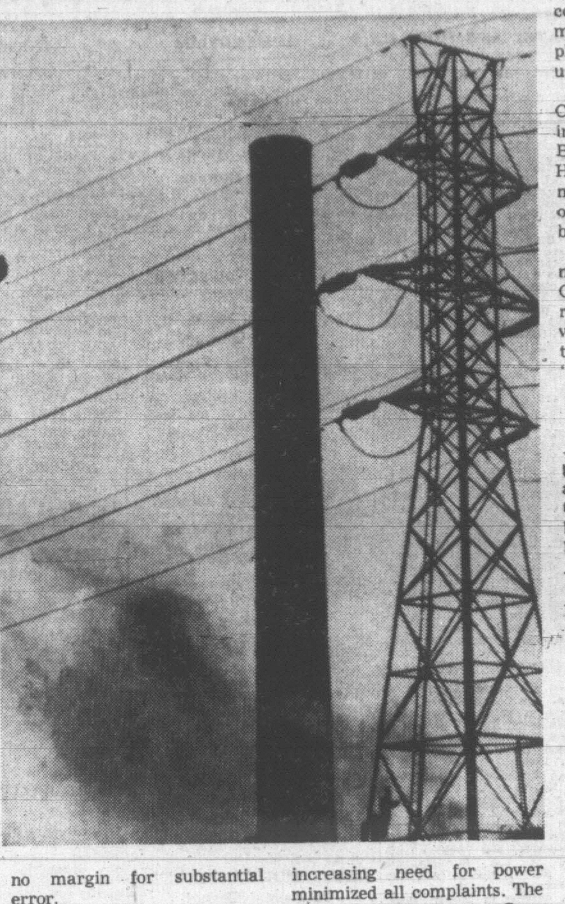
NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS: Salvation or Suicide?

The generation of electricity through atomic fission—clean, quiet and efficient—has been a dream of mankind since the beginning of the nuclear era. In the beginning the potential of atomic power for peaceful use was seen as the salvation of our planet. But now, more and more, sober second considerations are being taken. Will it merely mean the substitution of one evil for another? Will we be trading our smoke-filled skies for a deadly, invisible new form of pollution? Nobody can say . . . but battle lines are forming.

By JACQUIN SANDERS
Newsweek Feature Service

Since the dawn of the atomic age, one of man's fondest fantasies has been to create a nationwide network of nuclear plants — cleanly, safely and smokelessly supplying power to every community.



But one man's dream is another man's nightmare, and lately more and more people are wondering exactly how safe those friendly neighbourhood nuclear power plants would actually be.

Conservationists

First, the conservationists began to express their doubts about the complete beneficence of the "nukes." Then, scientists began to have second thoughts; so did some political figures.

Finally, the uneasiness reached the public, especially those whose homes are near the 15 U.S. nuclear power plants that are now in operation, as well as the 82 other plants that are planned or under construction.

As a result, battle lines are forming. For the first time since the Second World War, the American "atomic establishment" — including the major private and government power companies and the immensely powerful Atomic Energy Commission — have been forced on the defensive.

States' Rights

Eleven states have banded together to assert their rights to set higher safety standards for atomic plants than those set by the AEC. A union and an organization of propety owners have sought an injunction to stop the building of two plants 42 miles from Chicago.

Around the country, construction of several plants has been halted.

An anti-atomic bloc is forming in the U.S. Congress. "There are enough qualified people who have doubts about this business," says Republican Rep. Ogden Reid of New York. "I think it's time the government showed some doubts, too."

And Democratic Rep. Lester Wolff of New York suggests that the entire nuclear-power industry be put into "mothballs for the next 10 years, until the environmental effects of the mammoth plants now nearing completion have been reliably assessed."

The most obvious danger from the nukes — an explosion that could wipe out entire communities — seems least in the realm of possibility. So far, at least, nuclear plants have the best safety record of any major industry.

They have to, of course. With atomic power, there is no margin for substantial error.

But there are other dangers. In recent years, indeed in recent weeks, there has been a succession of serious leakages of potentially lethal radioactive materials. The effects — if any — of these leakages may not be determined for many years.

Effects Felt

But the ecological effects have already been felt. The nukes ingest cool water from rivers and bays and then turn it back considerably warmed. For instance, the free world's largest nuclear power plant run by the Connecticut Yankee Atomic Power Co. in East Haddam, Conn., has been discarging water that is 14 to 16 degrees Fahrenheit warmer than the normal river temperature. Authorities have so far detected no ill effects.

Yet given a nuclear plant's huge water requirements, the damage to all forms of marine life from this warmer water can sometimes be cataclysmic, Con Edison's Storm King plant on the Hudson River in New York has on two occasions been responsible for fish kills of 1,000,000 or more.

Need Paramount

Until the recent surge of concern about the national environment, the adherents of nuclear power had things pretty much their own way. If nothing else, the steadily increasing need for power minimized all complaints. The U.S. Federal Power Commission estimates that by the year 2000 there will be a demand for fully eight times more power than is presently available. Coal and natural gas will not be enough.

Nuclear power is in its infancy now, providing only about 1 per cent of the U.S. output. By the end of the century, it will probably be the source of half the national total.

But there will be changes made, if the critics have their way. And the place where such changes must begin is in the AEC itself.

Concept Suspect

To its detractors, the very concept of the AEC is suspect, for the agency is both the regulator and the promoter of nuclear power. Thus, reason the critics, the AEC has become another of Washington's self-perpetuating bureaucracies, with its own growth and power depending upon the growth and power of the nuclear industry.

Chiefly, the agency's enemies charge that its safety standards are too low and its supervision too lenient. Predictably, the AEC considers that its detractors carry caution to an extreme.

"It is as though we decided not to get out of bed anymore because we might slip on the way to the bathroom," says Theos J. Thompson, an AEC commissioner. "In the ultimate application of this philosophy, we should each of us stop breathing."

Without strong friends in Congress, the AEC would be in far more precarious shape. But Democractic Rep. Chet Holfield of California, chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, is a believer.

He calls the critics of nuclear power "20th century Columbuses" who have only recently discovered the "new world" of ecology, and he thinks they are hampered by "technical ignorance."

Basic Premise

Yet the AEC's basic premise — that a small amount of radioactive material can be safely absorbed by the human body — has been disputed by experts. According to the agency, 0.17 rem per year is safe (rem is the technical unit of measurement used). But many able scientists disagree.

"The statement that there's some number that is safe is an absolute, unmitigated lie," says John Gofman, a professor of medical physics at the University of California at Berkeley and a research associate at the AEC's Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, Calif.

Death Rate

Gofman calculates that if the entire population were to absorb the "permissible" 0.17 rem per year, the death rate from radiation-connected cancer and leukemia would rise by 32,000 per year.

Though all scientists do not agree with Gofman, it is statements such as his, from similarly reputable sources, that caused the state of Minnesota to set its own new and considerably higher standards for nuclear plants within its borders. As a result, construction has stopped on a nuclear plant at Monticello on the Mississippi River, some 30 miles north of Minneapolis.

Lawsuit Entered

Northern State Power Co., which wants to build the plant, has sued in the hope of having the law voided by the courts. Ten other starts have joined on the side of Minnesota, and the legal confrontation has now become a test case.

If Minnesota succeeds in setting its own standards, much of the power of the AEC —and the permissive governmental supervision of the nuclear-power industry — will be ended.

This permissiveness is best exemplified in another controversial situation — at the AEC's Rocky Flats atomic bomb plant, 16 miles from Denver. The plant has been releasing radioactive plutonium into the air, water and solid for a number of years.

Leakage Miniscule

According to the AEC, the amount has been "miniscule" and, anyway, has been contained inside the plant and its immediate vicinity. But a group of Colorado scientists, investigating independently found that enough plutonium had been released to pose "a serious threat to the health and safety of the people of Denver."

Further, they found some of it had spread on the wind as far as 15 miles from the plant.

"You can't run an atomic processing plant and guarantee that one molecule won't escape," said Maj. Gen. E. B. Giller, and AEC aide.

Perhaps not. But it seems an excellent goal to shoot for.

B.C. ROUNDUP

Intensive Search for Lost Plane

VANCOUVER (CP) — Military and civilian aircraft and a navy ship today continued the search for a twin-engine Beechcraft missing since Thursday night with five persons aboard on a 527-mile flight to Seattle from Terrace.

A search and rescue spokesman said three Albatross aircraft, a helicopter, the navy vessel Laymore and three civilian planes were aided by fairly good weather as they scoured the route along the B.C. coast.

Aboard the plane for the three-hour flight to Seattle were Pilot Arthur Wiebe and Don Robb, both of Prince George; James J. Robey of Port Moody, Orville E. Rowland of Bellevue, Wash., and Randolph J. McMaster of Portland, Ore.

Big Sewage Program

VANCOUVER (UPI) — The health department has approved the Greater Vancouver Sewerage District's $52.5-million sewage treatment program for the eastern metropolitan area.

It calls for 1974 completion of a $22-million treatment plant on Annacis Island and installation of 114 trunklines and 13 pumping stations at a cost of $30.5 million.

Lower Insurance

CHILLIWACK (CP) — R. B. Stocks, general manager of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture, Friday told delegates to the Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association convention they should demand lower farm vehicle insurance rates.

Park Defended

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The local chapter of the Society for pollution and Environmental Control said Friday it opposes use of Mission Flats Class C park here for a proposed holding lagoon for an expansion to the Kamloops Pulp and Paper Co. mill.

Strike Spread

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Eighty members of the Teamsters Union struck two Dawson Creek companies today, joining 200 union members who have been on strike against three lower mainland trucking companies for a week.

MONEY WORRIES MAIN PROBLEM

TIMES NEWS SERVICES

Financial difficulties represent the biggest problem facing Canadian families today, according to the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion.

In a national survey released today the institute reports that 45 per cent of the population cite the cost of living, lack of money, high prices, low wages, inflation and other economic troubles as their family's biggest worry.

This was also true in 1958 when 33 per cent named finances as their greatest problem. However, in 1958 unemployment was the second urgent problem, listed by 11 per cent of the population.

Today, despite the fact that 6.1 per cent of our population is without work only 4 per cent name unemployment as their biggest problem.

Health, education, taxes and inflation all command concern among Canadian families but now a new element of concern has emerged, overshadowing the general problems of raising a family — teenagers with drugs.

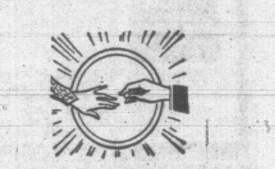
The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 27, 1970, at 2:00 p.m. in the Christ Church Cathedral. Reverend R. Hoult will be officiating.



Weddings

Howe — Humphries

On February 21, 1970, at the Brentwood College Chapel, Brentwood Bay, a double-ring ceremony was solemnized when Penny Yvonne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack W. Humphries, of Georgia Park Terrace, Victoria, exchanged vows with Mr. Philip Geoffrey Howe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Howe, Saanichton. Archdeacon Maddock officiated. The organist was Mrs. Dorothy Jenkins, of Vancouver.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in a floor-length gown of white velvet with wrist-length sleeves and bodice trimmed in white lace daisies. The bride wore a matching hood and carried a purple orchid corsage surrounded by white heather and roses.

Mrs. Terry Christianson, sister of the bride was matron of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. Anne Garner, Miss Elizebeth Howe and Miss Cynthia Garland, who wore identical floor-length long sleeved gowns of purple peau d'elegance trimmed with lace daisies en tone, Teardrop bouquets of white mums accented by mauve carnations were carried.

The best man was Mr. John Cook and Messrs. John, David and Paul Howe, brothers of the groom ushered the guests.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where Mr. Don McMuldroch gave a toast to the bride.

After the reception the couple left for points of interest on the Mainland, and will reside in Victoria.

For her going away outfit the bride chose a black wool sheath dress with matching trotter length coat trimmed at the neck and cuffs with sapphire mink. A black velvet beret and patent leather accessories were highlighted by the orchid corsage.

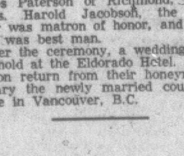
Paterson — Munro

A quiet wedding took place March 7th, 1970, at 4:30 p.m. in St. James United Church, Vancouver, when Reverend A. G. McLeod united in marriage Barbara Jean Munro, youngest daughter of Mrs. Munro, of Sidney, B.C., and the late E. H. Munro, to Mr. Stanley David Paterson, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Paterson of Richmond, B.C.

Mrs. Harold Jacobson, the bride's sister was matron of honor, and Mr. K. Stein was best man.

After the ceremony, a wedding supper was hold at the Eldorado Hotel.

Upon return from their honeymoon to Calgary the newly married couple will reside in Vancouver, B.C.



Harper — Fieldhouse

A double-ring ceremony took place February 14, 1970, at 7:00 p.m., in Metropolitan United Church when Reverend Laura Butler united in marriage Laura Joan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Fieldhouse, 45 Vickery Road, Victoria, to Mr. James Stuart Harper, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Harper, 3131 Mars Street, Victoria.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of peau d'elegance, featuring a bolero jacket with lily-point sleeves and train falling from the back of the jacket. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis.

The bride was attended by Miss Cheryl Harris, and her two sisters, Misses Janet and Elizabeth Fieldhouse, and Laurie Aldred, cousin of the bride was the flower girl. They all wore identical floor-length gowns of mauve sheer crepe, and carried cascade bouquets of pink carnations and heather. Mr. Ron O'Brien attended as best man, and ushers were Messrs. Jack Harper and Russ Williams.

A reception followed the ceremony at the War Amputees Hall, where Mr. W. Law toasted the bride.

Murchie — Webb

A double-ring cermony was solemnized on March 21, at 11 a.m. in Cadboro Bay United Church, when Gladys Bernice, daughter of Mrs. Frank Webb of Dawson Creek, B.C. exchanged vows with Mr. Richard Thomas Murchie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Murchie, 281 Kamloops Street, Victoria. Reverend Leighton C. Sreight officiated.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Frank Carson, the bride chose a lovely white bubble brocade silk dress with a high waistline accentuated with jewelled buttons with long soft sleeves. A satin band held her shoulder length veil in place. A removable white orchid with red roses and stephanotis cascading formed her bouquet.

Matron of honor, the bride's sister, Mrs. Frank Carson, wore a soft yellow dress with a corsage of white roses. Mr. Frank Carson was best man. Wedding music was played by Mrs. C. Carere.

After the ceremony a luncheon was held at Holyrood House. The bride's going away outfit was a navy and white pant suit, on which she wore the white orchid. Mr. and Mrs. R. Murchie will reside in Victoria upon their return.

Out of town guests were from Dawson Creek, B.C., and Eugene, Oregon.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends, relatives and neighbours for their kind words, expressions of sympathy, floral tributes and donations to the Cancer Society sent to us during our recent bereavement, in the loss of our beloved husband and father. Special thanks to Rev. Dr. E. A. Wright; Dr. A. N. Reid; Dr. N. R. Stewart and the nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital. — Mable McKenzie and family.

We, the parents and families of the four young boys who met their tragic deaths on Sunday, March 1st, 1970, would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all those wonderful people who were so kind and considerate. It is most gratifying to know that the thoughts of so many people were with us at this time of need. Special note of thanks to Rev. Emma Smiley, Father Costello, McCall Brothers and staff for a most excellent service.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Hall
Mr. and Mrs. A. Child
Mr. and Mrs. C. Hungle
Mr. and Mrs. D. Stevenson
And Families.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CONNOR — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Martin Connor who passed away March 22, 1969.

Deep in our hearts his memory is kept,
To love, to cherish and never forget.
"He was kind and just to the end of his days."

—Ever remembered by his daughter and son-in-law, Colleen and George Tahouney; grandsons Richard, Daniel and Leonard.

LUMLEY — In loving memory of our mother, Mrs. M. Lumley taken from us March 21, 1961.

John O'Flaherty Vancouver Scout

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, bound for the National League next season, have named John (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, 48, as chief scout.

O'Flaherty, a Toronto native, turned professional with New York Americans and later played nine years with Pittsburgh in the American League. He was coach and manager in the Ontario Junior A league in St. Catharines and Toronto.

No Neutrality in Survival War Says Antonioni in New Film

By BOB MITCHELL

Zabriskie Point, which opened Friday at the Fox Cinema, is a film about revolution, being a revolutionary and the end of America.

There are no night scenes, the whole film is shot in brilliant sunshine, but at the end the sun is setting over Death Valley and Zabriskie Point.

Zabriskie Point is an official tourist attraction in the Mojave Desert. It is in Death Valley, lowest point in the Western Hemisphere, and is named after an early executive in the borax industry. facts that seem to indicate its choice by director Michelangelo Antonioni as a film name was not entirely whimsical.

It's an incredibly beautiful film. Panoramic views of the empty, peaceful desert are juxtaposed against jangling sequences of Los Angeles billboards panned with a telephoto lens.

It starts with blurred closeups of skin, hair, faces, then you see Kathleen Cleaver and some other Panthers leading a strike meeting at some college.

"Are you prepared to die?" a white kid asks one of the Panthers, and he answers that black people are dying all the time: "We earned the leadership in blood."

It's at that point the protagonist Mark (Mark Frechette) leaves the meeting because he feels no one except the blacks is totally committed to the strike.

"As soon as you stop counting on losing, that's when I join the movement," he says later to a friend.

As the police move in to end the strike a cop shoots a student with a shotgun. Moments later someone evens the score by shooting the cop in the back.

The action moves into the desert and slows down. Mark, now a murder suspect, steals a Cessna and flies out of L.A. Daria (Daria Halprin) drives east in an old '53 Buick.

They meet, not face to face, but through their respective machines. He dives his flying machine at her horseless carriage as she drives through the desert. It's a fantastic feat of flying. During practice sessions, according to MGM, the plane actually did crash on the roof of the car.

Meanwhile, the Sunnydunes Development Corp. boys are planning to create an artificial lake in the desert, sell the land around it as waterfront lots, build a marina, etc.

In effect, they intend to spread the disease of the city out into the untouched desert, for as the voice on the tape says over a period of 20 years, given the population growth of California, they can gross something like $5 billion.

The impact of the film lies in the ultimate conflict between those who exploit the earth for their own greed and those who will lay down their lives to oppose them.

Antonioni is telling the generation of youth that will see this film: there are only two sides in the struggle for survival, and you must commit yourself to die for one of them.

It's a troubling message because it means for those who inherit the earth there is no path of moderation. And for many who see the film it means they must commit themselves to the forces destined to blow up the Sunnydune corporations of the world.

Drug Forum Monday Night

Saanich police department and the B.C. Government Employees' Union, Victoria branch, are jointly sponsoring a drug forum Monday at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Speakers will include Sgt. William Chisholm of the Saanich department, Dr. W. Lysak, a noted lecturer on drugs, and Andy McKeand, a 22-year-old former drug-user.

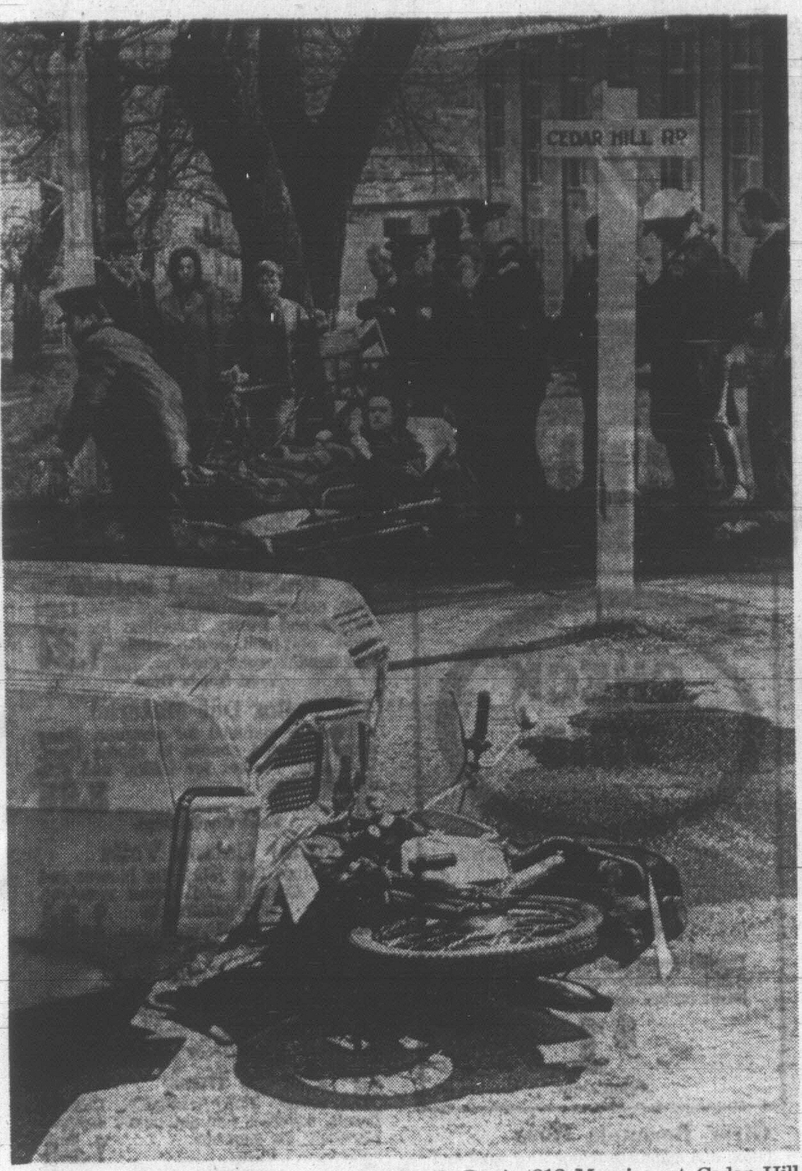
Chisholm is with the traffic and educational branch of the Saanich force and gives lectures and demonstrations to students from grades one to 12.

Admission is free.

Woman Fair After Accident

An 83-year-old woman is in fair condition at St. Joseph's Hospital today after being hit by a car while crossing Burdett Ave. Tuesday night.

Mrs. Lillian Voice, 857 McClure, has a broken leg, internal injuries, cuts and abrasions.



SADLY SURVEYING wrecked motorcycle from stretcher is Robert G. Wood, 16, of 3535 James Height, who escaped serious injuries when he collided with a car driven by Nellie B. Davis, 212 Menzies, at Cedar Hill and Cedar Hill Cross Road Friday noon. He was treated and discharged from Royal Jubilee Hospital. (Robin Clarke Photo)

Amalgamation Talks Back in Limbo—Almost

By JIM HUME

Those who rejoiced briefly, but hopefully, when Ald. Clyde Savage trumpeted the call for amalgamation a couple of weeks ago can subside again to somnolence.

Savage, it will be recalled, asked for the first round of discussions to start as soon as possible, at least before the end of the month. When he made that request he was assured by Mayor Courtney Haddock that plans were already under way for a four-mayor conference on March 25.

Hume

Haddock said he wasn't sure just what the mayor wanted to talk about, but that he was sure amalgamation would be one of the main topics.

Maybe it would have been, if the conference had been held.

But it won't be.

It appears that the foursome had a chance to get together over a cup of coffee a few nights back and Haddock thought that chat sufficient. The big conference was subsequently cancelled—and the amalgamation talks went back into limbo.

Well, maybe not quite limbo.

Copies of the formal Victoria council resolution calling for a talk-session have gone to the chief magistrates of the other three core municipalities.

So far no member of the trio has hastened to reply. As a matter of fact there is the distinct impression that while for the sake of intermunicipal harmony they might be willing to talk, they really aren't interested.

Basically they subscribe to the philosophy of Ald. Hugh Ramsay, the lone council dissenter when the vote was taken a week ago. Ramsay said, and with some conviction, that he couldn't see any point in discussing an issue which obviously would never get off the ground.

It's difficult to buck that line of reasoning, especially with regional districts growing lustier by the day.

On the other hand the special committee Haddock has been requested to strike to study the good and the bad of amalgamation, could come up with some strong guidlines to lead all municipalities into some sort of streamlining of police and fire fighting forces.

Esquimalt, with its combined police-fire force, could be the stumbling block to the one police department-one fire department concept. But even so, the other municipalities could join forces to provide better all-round protection for the people.

One day they will have to, and the sooner the better.

The surprising thing emerging from last Wednesday's debate on rock bands in Centennial Square was the almost complete lack of desire to find a solution to a problem.

Rock bands will not find any support in this column. That weird cacophony of amplified anguish is, for a 46-year-old, difficult to love.

But, like Michael J. Griffin, I'll wince and flee but defend the right of the kids to play the music they enjoy. Just as I'll defend the right of the opera lover (the caterwauling of a busty but dying soprano doesn't send me, either) to call for an encore.

Griffin's suggestion that the kids be allowed to play, but without their amplifiers, had to be made tongue in cheek. Heck, surely he must know the youngsters couldn't play if they could hear the music.

So, instead of taking the arbitrary "never an electronic chord in our fair city" how about telling director of recreational facilities Jack Morgan that he can book two concerts—with amplifiers—into the Square, one to start the summer, one to lament its passing.

With the kids told to hold the amplification below the glass-cracking level, and concert time from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., it's difficult to see what harm could be done.

And let the 9:30 p.m. cut-off be firm so that the youngsters know well ahead of the event that when the witching hour arrives the plug will be pulled voluntarily or on command.

Maybe I'm getting soft, but I really can't believe that there are ears in the city too sensitive to stand four hours of raucous rock this summer.

Jim Greaves Scores In Another Debut

LONDON (CP) — Jimmy Greaves scored two goals in West Ham United's 5-1 win today over Manchester City, maintaining his record of scoring in every debut he's made for a team.

The much-travelled Greaves has also scored goals in his opening games with Chelsea, A. C. Milan of Italy and Tottenham.

Greaves scored his goals in the 10th and 37th minutes against the recent winners of the English League cup. Geoff Hurst also got two goals and Ron Boyce scored the other goal.

Martin Peters, who went to Tottenham in the deal that sent Greaves to West Ham, scored a goal against Coventry in his debut, but Coventry came back with two second-half goals to win 2-1.

Sterilization Or Jail Term, Rescinded

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — A judge Friday rescinded an order that Richard Aguiar be sterilzed or go to jail and put the father of three illegitimate children on probation for six months instead.

Supreme Court Judge Joseph S. Mitchell put Aguiar on probation for violating the state illegitimate child law.

Aguiar, 35, of Fall River, also has three legitimate children. All six offspring are supported by public welfare although Aguiar has a job.

Two weeks ago, Mitchell told Aguiar he had two weeks to ungergo sterilization or "you'll go to jail."

Both the prosecutor and Aguiar's lawyer said they knew of no precendent in Massachusetts for such an alternative, nor of any law under which the court could order sterilization.

Aguiar was surrendered to the court March 6 by probation officers who reported that he had not made support payments ordered by a court for his illegitimate children.

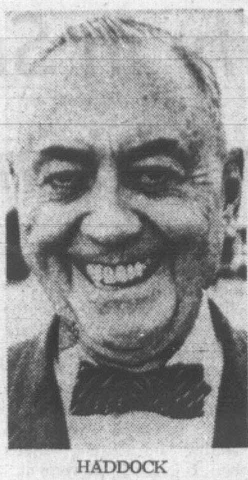
Publicity Body Budget Results Spark Query

By AB KENT

Mayor Courtney Haddock Friday denied he is knocking Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, but is concerned whether its budget is producing results.



HADDOCK
. . . not knocking it

He told Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors "the word is going around that I'm speaking against the publicity bureau. I'm only trying to find out if we're getting the best mileage out of our dollar."

He said he felt the bureau is not getting the exposure it needs, and suggested moving it from the causeway to some place where more visitors' cars will pass it.

DUPLICATION

If $60,000 to $90,000 a year is to be spent on promotion, then more should be achieved than just meeting the objectives set when the bureau was set up 20 years ago, Haddock said. Also, there is duplication of effort between the bureau, the chamber and city hall, he added.

Perhaps the bureau could join the staff of Greater Victoria Celebrations to share office expenses, the mayor said.

"We appreciate the suggestion and will go to work on it," chamber president Clare Copeland said.

SUNSET SERVICES

The mayor added that he was told there is a way to finance military sunset services during July and August, when regular force troops are normally at camp. He said this would be worthwhile and might be possible "if we use some of the money we're wasting now."

Directors were told April 23 is the date set for a special tour aboard the Queen of Victoria following her stretching. Chamber members will leave Blackball Transport dock at 3:30 p.m. for a two-hour cruise, returning in time for a reception and banquet hosted by the premier in Empress Hotel.

Philip Holmes, speaking for the tourist advisory committee, said a subcommittee under Ian Stewart had been struck to deal with environmental quality and bring under one agency the various groups interested in Victoria and its surroundings.

MP's Form Letter Irks Businessmen

A form letter on white paper proposals mailed by Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson to some of his constituents was attacked indignantly by Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors Friday.

Philip Holmes, reporting on government affairs, told directors the letter was "causing a good deal of aggravation among the people to whom it has been sent," and urged the chamber to reply.

"I was mad as hell when I got mine," a director interjected.

OFFICE DELUGED

Chamber manager Brian Small said his office had been deluged with calls, some wrathful, when the letters began arriving here.

Holmes said the chamber committee had had about 1,100 endorsements of a white paper brief, which in some respects opposed taxation proposals. Citizens at large were invited to sign their agreement, and the chamber sent in 750 names, addresses and occupations.

Holmes said the replies were representative of the entire community, coming from all job categories "from Beach Drive to Marigold Flats," and indicated disagreement with white paper proposals.

IMPOSSIBLE

Anderson said in his mimeographed letter:

"It is quite impossible to accept the implication of the sentence quoted above (in his letter) which is that you oppose the entire white paper. The paper contains a great number of proposals for reform."

He said it was the result of eight years of study and noted that another year was being devoted to it before legislation is introduced.

"I regret that the clipping that you sent in is not helpful in this regard," Anderson said, inviting detailed, thoughtful comment to be mailed to himself or to Victoria MP David Groos.

Saanich Chamber of Commerce president John Hicks, who attended the Victoria meeting, said his chamber also is opposing the form letter approach by Anderson.

Prince Rupert Players B.C. Favorite

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Judging by adjudicator Roberta Dolby's opinions, the North Pacific Players of Prince Rupert could well be British Columbia's nomination for a position in the Dominion Drama Festival to be held in Winnipeg in May.

The Prince Rupert group staged Sean O'Casey's Irish tradedy Juno and the Paycock Friday — the second presentation of the three-day B.C. regional drama festiva, which ends today.

Dolby praised the group for its decision to do Juno and the Paycock, because it is "one of the most superb tragedies ever written in any language."

She was unable to find many flaws in the Prince Rupert production. The characterizations, the sets, the costumes were all "wonderful."

CHAMBER MEET TOLD

Quality, Number Of Motions High

Resolutions submitted by the annual meeting of Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island last week, were notable for their quality and number, Victoria directors were told Friday.

Chamber vice-president Philip Homes, who helped represent Victoria at the Parksville meeting, said he was struck with the efforts of up-Island chambers of commerce in pressing for action by the provincial and federal governments.

Tenor of the resolutions passed was aimed at parks, recreation, fishing, pollution in keeping with the conference theme, Managed Environment.

The main ones:

- Survey and development of a trial system in Strathcona Park, with two of them, to Forbidden Plateau and Alberni Valley, to eventually become roads.
- Absolute protection of the Moyeha River watershed, also in Strathcona Park, from industry and any change in park classification.
- Development of ski areas in Campbell River and Gold River areas.
- Establishment of small boat harbor administrators and a system of moorage fees.
- Licensing of salt water sports fishermen along the lines of U.S. and Mexican systems, together with stiff penalties for infraction.
- Setting up a provincial fish farming technology.
- Unqualified opposition to oil drilling or development in any waters adjacent to Vancouver Island.
- Assignment of highway strip development controls to the provincial highways department, or where possible, regional district boards.

Student Job Crisis Attacked by Chamber

An appeal to businessmen to help ease a student job crisis this summer will be made through Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Some 2,000 university students and from 4,000 to 5,000 secondary school students will be in the job market when classes end, the chamber's youth development director said Friday.

SURVEY CITED

Walter Donald said a survey "indicates a crisis is developing," and through the University of Victoria student placement centre and Manpower a number of job questionairs are being sent to potential employers.

He said as far as university students are concerned there will be only about 500 full-time summer jobs for the 2,000 seekers, leaving the 1,500 remaining to take part-time work, menial, lowpaid jobs, or to return to their families for support.

Only full-time work can provide the $1,500 to $2,000 savings needed to pay for the next year's university expenses, Donald said.

On top of the university student job-seeker there will be the high school students, with the difference that they will accept lower paid and part-time jobs, he explained.

Manpower manager George Bevis is undertaking recruitment of jobs through a standard form, copies of which will be distributed with additional information to chamber members.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Impaired Driver Gets Jail

A 48-year-old man was sentenced Friday by Judge William Ostler to 21 days in jail for impaired driving and an additional month for assaulting a police officer.

Lawrence R. Stewart, 788 Hillside, had earlier pleaded not guilty to the offences but changed his plea when he appeared Friday.

Police testified they first observed the accused about 10:30 p.m. Feb. 23 walking to his car from a drive-in restaurant, get into his vehicle and drive away.

The officers didn't feel Stewart should be driving because of his apparent condition and stopped the car two blocks away.

The accused was abusive and struck a constable in the side of the face when he was being put into a cell at the Saanich station.

Stewart had a similar impaired conviction three years ago.

Michael I. Bateman, 28, of 1704 Newton, was sentenced to one day in jail and fined $500 when he pleaded guilty to fraudulently obtaining funds.

The accused took his pay cheque of $269.22 to his bank Nov. last year, deposited $220 to his account and managed to retain the cheque as well as receive the remaining cash.

He went to Oakcrest Stores, 3475 Juadra, cashed the cheque the following day and wrote cheques on his account where the money had originally been deposited.

"I don't understand how you hoped to get away with it," Ostler told Bateman before he passed sentence.

Ostler also ordered Bateman to repay the bank the $269.22.

A 48-year-old man who was sentenced to a year in prison last month for false pretences and obtaining lodging by fraud was sentenced to four months for two more similar offences, to be served concurrently with the previous sentence.

Robert Kenough also had the parole he was on at the time of the earlier convictions revoked.

The two new charges, one of false pretences under $50 and the other logings by fraud, were both committed in Vancouver in January about the time the earlier convictions occured.

Wayne S. Hill, 20, of 127 Menzies, was fined $250 for driving without insurance.

He was stopped March 19 about 8:30 p.m. on the Trans Canada Highway and did not have insurance coverage at the time.

Conrad W. J. Leclerc, 22, of Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, was also fined $250 for driving without insurance.

He didn't have insurance coverage when stopped by police on Esquimalt Road March 1 about 2:20 a.m.

Brian B. Morgan, 22, of 308 Mary, was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

He drove into a parked car on Lyall Feb. 13 about 7:30 p.m. and drove away.

He was fined an additional $250 for driving without insurance and another $25 for driving without a driver's licence.

His right to obtain a licence was suspended for 12 months.

Harry William Pearce, 31, of 520 Forward Drive, was fined $350 for driving when his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent.

He was involved in an accident Feb. 20 about 11:30 p.m. and he gave a breathalizer reading of .18 per cent at the time.

He was prohibited from driving for four months.

Jack Ritchie, 61, of 1015 Collinson, was fined $250 for being in the care and control of an auto while his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent.

He was found sleeping in a car parked on Cranmore Feb. 28 about 2:35 a.m. and he had a breathalyzer reading of .11 per cent at the time.

It was recommended his licence be suspended for four months.

Struan David Shirley, 18, of 1144 Pandora, was fined $250 for driving without insurance.

He was stopped on Newport Avenue Feb. 27 and he didn't have coverage at the time.

Wayne W. H. March, of 1171 Lockley, was fined $300 for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for four months.

He was the driver of a car that swerved to miss another vehicle at Beach Drive and Bowker March 19 about 2 p.m., jumped the curb, hit a tree and overturned.

Two other occupants in the car suffered injuries, one being hospitalized.

William M. Fell, 29, of 631 Raynor, was fined $200 for driving when his blood-alcohol content was over .08 per cent.

Police found him standing beside a vehicle Jan. 19 about 8:45 p.m. on the Patricia Bay Highway and he had a breathalyzer reading of .18 per cent at the time.

The car had run out of gas but the accused said he had been driving the other occupants in the vehicle home.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

PM Viewed Terrible Conditions

By BOB BOWMAN

As outlined in Friday's story, Prime Minister Sir Robert Borden went to Britain in 1917 to attend meetings of wartime leaders and the cabinet. He also toured the Canadian sector in France and saw the terrible conditions in which the soldiers had been fighting. They had suffered heavy casualties at the Somme, Vimy Ridge and other actions. Passchendaele, the worst of all, was still to come. Borden returned to Canada convinced that there must be conscription to fill the ranks.

He would have been more worried than ever if he had known what was going to happen almost exactly one year later. On March 21, 1918, the Germans opened an offensive that took them almost to Paris. During the early part of the drive they advanced 40 miles a day which was an almost unbelieveable feat in a war in which gains of 40 yards a month were mentioned in communiques.

The Germans swept through Arras, Cambrai, and the Somme almost to Amiens. The Allies were nearly forced to ask for an armistice, but Field Marshal Haig issued an order that the British were to fight to the last man. Sir Arthur Currie, newly appointed commander of the Canadian Corps, sent a message to his troops that was typical of the times: "Under the orders of your devoted officers in the coming battle you will advance or fall where you stand, facing the enemy. To those who fall I say, you will not die but step into immortality. Your mothers will not lament your fate, but will be proud to have borne such sons".

Fortunately the German drive petered out. What happened is still a mystery. It may have been a case of too much success and and over-confidence. One German observer reported "As soon as I got near the town I began to see curious sights. Strange figures, which looked very little like soldiers and certainly showed no signs of advancing, were making their way back out of the town. There were men driving cows while others carried a hen under one arm and a box of notepaper under the other; men carrying a bottle of wine under an arm and another open in their hand; men staggering; men who could hardly walk. When I got into the town the streets were running with wine."

The tide turned in August, 1918, when the Canadians opened an attack that led to the final 100 days of the war.

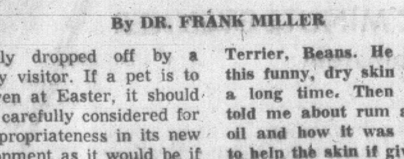
The Wonderful World of Animals



By DR. FRANK MILLER

Eggs, especially hard-boiled ones, have a very low personality quotient. But they do offer compensation. Eggs are easy keepers. They require little care and can be stuck practically anywhere (for a while). They make far better Easter "pets" than many animals given for the purpose. Live pets, whether hatched eggs or young kittens, often require far more care than they receive from young owners.

After an initial brief flash of enthusiasm, youngsters tend to lose interest in adequate care of their very dependent living pests. Parents set a poor example too, showing little concern, particularly if the pet was casually dropped off by a holiday visitor. If a pet is to be given at Easter, it should be as carefully considered for its appropriateness in its new environment as it would be if given at any other time. Give a pet which "fits" and will be truly appreciated. Or, get hard-boiled about it and stick to eggs.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My problem is with my Boston Terrier, Beans. He has had this funny, dry skin thing for a long time. Then someone told me about rum and olive oil and how it was supposed to help the skin if given three times a day. Soon he's been getting it. At first he spits it out but now he laps it right up. I admit he feels better, and he doesn't scratch so much. But sometimes he gets awfully wobbly and he has lots of trouble with diarrhea. I hate to quit his medicine because he feels happier but how can I tighten him up?—F.K.

DEAR F.K.: Actually, Beans is too tight right now. In fact, he's probably stewed most of the time. (You'd wobble, too, if you were taking that "hair tonic" three times a day.) The best way to cure the diarrhea is to take Beans off his present formula and revise the approach a bit. Basically, the rum and oil mixture is to be applied on the skin, not drunk. And it's bay rum, not the guzzling variety. Nor would it be a bad idea, while you're sobering Beans up a bit, to take him in to the doctor for a skin examination. While there's nothing wrong with the old oil and (bay) rum mixture as an external skin tonic, the doctor may find other medication more appropriate and effective.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My parakeet drops a feather now and then all year long. But my canary goes into a genuine molt and sheds its feathers fast, usually in late spring. As far as I know, this is usual for the canary but I don't know that much about parakeets. Do they have a special molting season or not?—H.G.

DEAR H.G.: Canaries do normally molt in the late spring. Usually the process lasts through the summer. Parakeets don't have a particular period for molting. Instead, they drop a few the year round. However, the more prudent parakeets prefer to parcel out the process so most feathers are lost in spring and summer with more retained through the colder months.

When you buy fertilizer you receive one or more of three basic materials regardless of the price you pay or the brand name on the package.

These three materials, or elements, are nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, their chemical symbols being N, P and K. We mix these three in different proportions to suit the needs of different plants or the requirements of different soils.

Tips For Home Gardeners

This accounts for the number of fertilizer mixes on the market, also for the utter confusion of the home gardener who is neither a scientist nor a chemist.

We can clear the fog a little if we understand the effect of each element on our plants, and realize that the food content within the container is more important than the brand name on the outside.

Nitrogen promotes rich green growth essential to a good looking lawn, a nutritious lettuce leaf, and the general appearance of the foliage on all plants. While it increases the green coloring it also promotes rapid soft growth, lacking in stiffness and easily damaged by adverse weather. It is essential to young plants and tends to prolong the juvenile state.

Phosphoric acid promotes seed production, which means good flowers on flowering plants and good seeds in our peas and beans. It stiffens plant cells and turns the juvenile plant into an adult. It also helps in producing healthy roots.

Potash is essential to all plants, a cell stiffener which balances the effects of the other two elements, adding vigor, disease resistance and over-all well-being. Lack of potash can result in die-back, winter-kill and a condition of weakness unable to resist diseases.

From this we see that each element, to do its job effectively, depends on the assistance, or the control, of the other two.

The percentage of food elements is shown in three figures, for example 5-10-5. This means each 100-lb. bag contains 5 lbs. nitrogen, 10 lbs. phosphoric acid and 5 lbs. potash (always in that order) in a form available to plants. These figures constitute the analysis, and we use them when buying our supplies.

The three food elements may be purchased separately, or in combinations of two elements with the third missing, Nitrogen only could be 21-0-0: ammonia-phosphate combination 16-20-0, or potash only as 0-0-45. Trace elements are present in most fertilizers as impurities within the chemicals used in the mix.

The question most frequently asked by gardeners is: "What make of fertilizer do you consider best?"

Since all fertilizer manufacturers market the same formulations you are free to purchase any brand you prefer. All 6-8-6 mixes, for example, will be identical regardless of the brand name.

The next most frequent question is: "What fertilizer should I use for my garden?" Obviously it is the mix suited to produce the results are seeking.

To green up the lawn you will need nitrogen, so you look for an analysis such as 21-0-0, that is, all nitrogen. To green the lawn and improve the turf you would need nitrogen and phosphoric acid, so you look for two figures such as 16-20-0.

For succulent lettuce, cabbage and other leaf vegetables, nitrogen is again needed, but for solid lettuce and cabbage heads a balanced, or three-figure, analysis is best, such as 6-8-6 and 5-10-5.

Roses, flowering perennials and shrubs, fruits and edible seeds (peas, beans) require a mix with the first and last figures the same and the centre figure much higher, for instance 4-12 4.

Potatoes, bulbs and most root crops need low nitrogen, high phosphoric acid, and high potash and we find this in the potato and bulb mixes which read 4-10-10.

Taking any set of figures, such as the 5-10-5, we shall find more concentrated formulations of the same mix giving the figures 15-30-15. These are three times as strong; they contain three times as much plant food and are proportionately higher in price.

These concentrated mixes are not for the home gardener. They were formulated for the farmer and he mixes a given amount of inert material, such as sand, with the fertilizer to reduce the strength before applying to the soil.

The reason I advise against their use in the home garden is that one teaspoonful of 5-10-5 is sufficient for a large plant. To spread this small amount over the entire root system is difficut.

When we use a triple-strength formulation we need only one-third teaspoonful, and it is virtually impossible to spread this over a five-square-foot area. The result is plants damaged by over-feeding.

It makes no difference whether the ingredients of a mix come from organic or inorganic sources. Plants can only take in food as salts dissolved in water and these salts must always be in the chemical form known as nitrates. Sulphate of potash, for example, must be changed into nitrate of potash before it can be used by a plant.

The changing is done by soil organisms which live on humus, or decaying plant tissues, therefore fertilizers can only be used effectively and economically when the population of soil organisms is large, and that means when sufficient humus is present in the soil. To apply fertilizers to a soil lacking in humus, or compost, is a waste of time and money.

Organic fertilizers are slow acting because it takes time to change them to the required form of chemical. Inorganics are more readily available because little change is needed, but they are soon carried beyond the reach of roots, therefore need more frequent replacement.

WEEK'S WORK

Get roses pruned now. All areas are earlier than normal this year by about three weeks.

Divide and plant any herbaceous perennials needing this attention and that were not done last fall.

Hardy fuchsias left in garden now can be cut back to about six inches. Give a little fertilizer and mulch soil with compost.

Don't forget to prune Hydrangea Pee-Gee, H. aborescens and serrata acuminata, cutting each stem down to about three pairs of buds. With Hydrangea hortensis (macrophylla) cut out only oldest wood and weak canes, both at ground level, leaving the others unpruned.

Mulch root areas as of raspberries with old compost; do not cultivate as roots are near surface.

Diversifying Enriches

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

"Variety's the very spice of life, that gives it all its flavor" wrote the English poet William Cowper (1731-1800). With that quote in mind — to me, the collector who limits his scope, especially to only one or two topics, is being very foolish as there are a myriad of things to discover in philately.

The potential pleasure and knowledge in an unbounded, greatly diversified collection illimitably outshines the same potentiality in a confined assemblage of the same size. Ideally, one's curiosity would lead him onward into new realms, where new interests can easily be born and can recurrently thrive.

Although there is a pompous satisfaction in being proficient in one area, that's a horrible reason for dwelling on one topic very long — boring your fellow collectors and ultimately yourself — missing so much! And there is no valid reason why an intelligent person should become bored (save momentarily) with philately!

Japan's striking 7-yen, 15-yen and 50-yen Expo '70 pictorials came out March 14. An 80-yen souvenir sheet was also released on that date.

Last month, Barbuda inaugurated a long series of 35-cent stamps featuring likenesses of English monarchs from William I (the Conqueror) to Elizabeth II. Those issued so far are: Feb. 16, William I, who heigned from 1066 to his death in 1087; March 2, William II, who reigned from 1087 to his death in 1100; and March 16, Henry I, who reigned from 1100 until he died in 1135.

Feb. 25 was the date on which Norfolk Island released four photogravure printed definitives. They show birds, namely; 3c, a Norfolk Island flyeater; 4c, two long-tailed cuckoos; 9c, a grey-headed blackbird; and 45c, two Norfolk Island starlings.

Portraits of "prominent personalities" are depicted on six Czech UNESCO adhesives issued Feb. 17. They are: Ludwig van Beethoven, Josef Manes, Frederich Engels, Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, Maximilian Hell and Jan Amos Komensky.

Czechoslovakia's six pictorials for Expo '70 were out March 13. Featured are: 50h, three bells; 80h, a detail of a huge SIU lathe and a portion of a technical drawing; 1 kcs, two wooden beehives; 1.60 kcs, a detail from a late 17th century icon showing three saints and an angel; 2 kcs, a drawing by F.K. Wolf (1765-1836) of Orlik Castle, which is situated in southern Bohemia; and finally, 3 kcs, a view of Mount Fuji by Hokusai (1760-1849).

Four stamps from the Republic of China (Taiwan) honoring Expo '70 came out March 13.

Twenty-five-cent and 2½-cent pictorials observing the 100th anniversary of the death of Moshoeshoe I, the great were issued by that nation March 11.

On March 16, the papal state of Vatican City placed on sale five multicolors publicizing their share in Expo '70. The denominations are: 25-lire, 40-lire, 55-lire, 90-lire and 110-lire. Unlike previous Vatican stamps, this issue will be valid for postage forever.

A reminder: the unique British Guiana 1-cent black-on magenta stamp of 1856 (Scott's number 13) will be auctioned March 24 in New York City.

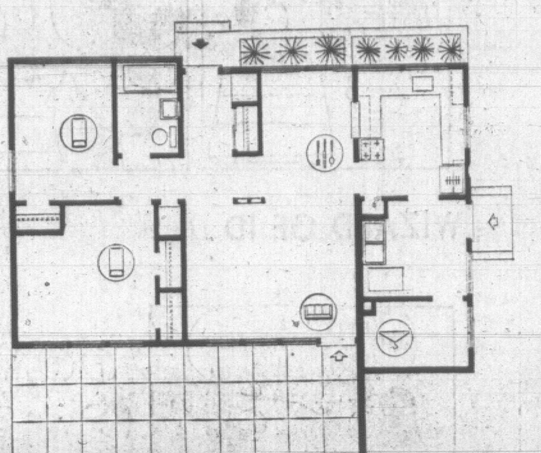
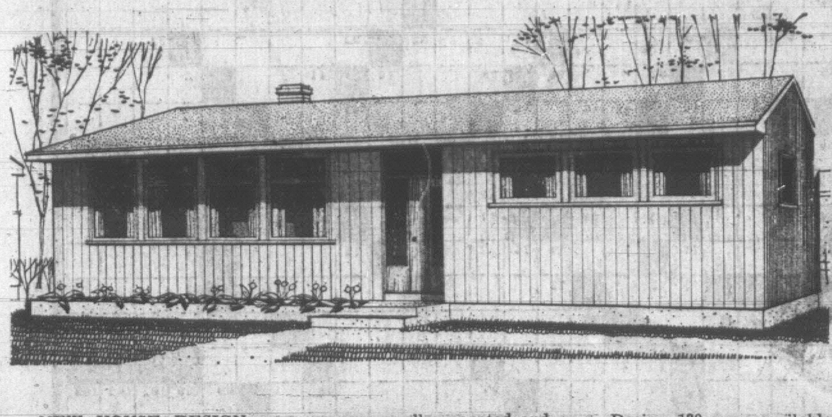
OPEN PLAN TWO-BEDROOM BUNGALOW





NEW HOUSE DESIGN — The open planning of this two-bedroom bungalow, designed by Architects K. R. D. PRATT & S. E. LINDGREN of Winnipeg, makes it appear larger inside that it is.

The good-sized entrance hall, the openness of the living room with its large windowns, the door to the terrace, and the raised living room ceiling all contribute towards this characteristic. Working, living and sleeping areas are well separated and, despite the open planning, the dining space is segregated. Although there is no basement ample space is provided for the normal utilities adjacent to the side entrance. For best siting the living room with its garden terrace should face south.

The floor area is 960 square feet; the exterior dimensions, including the patio, are 40 feet by 24 feet. Working drawings of this house, known as Design 130, are available from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at minimum cost.

Armed Forces To Use North

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian armed forces will begin training in the North on a year-round basis starting in April, the defence department announced Friday.

About 500 soldiers will take part in an exercise called New Viking between April and September. Rotation will take place every two weeks on a two-platoon, 50-man basis.

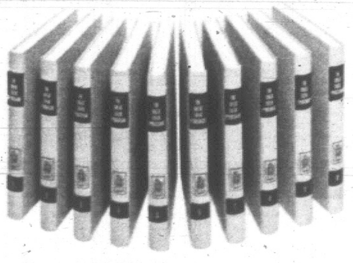
Here is the most superb home library ever assembled—GREAT BOOKS

It may not be popular to admit it, but all people aren't created equal. And the longer they live (and learn), the less equal they get.

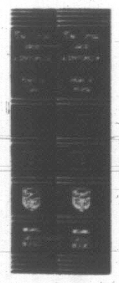
You were probably born with a bigger share of intelligence than most of your fellow men . . . and taught how to use it. And you appreciate the difference. You aren't ashamed of having brains. You enjoy using them.

That's why Great Books belong in your home. These are the writings of Plato, Homer, Cervantes, Tolstoy, Freud, Rabelais, Shakespeare and many more. They contain just about every important thought of Western man for the past 3,000 years! A set of 54 beautifully bound volumes containing 443 masterpieces by 74 of history's greatest geniuses.



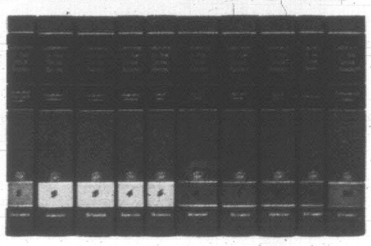
The $1,000,000 Syntopicon included

With Great Books (and available only with Great Books) is a unique reference work called the Syntopicon, shown below.



Also available with the Great Books are the handsome 10-volume reading plans (illustrated above). And you may also get a remarkable 10-volume set called Gateway to the Great Books.

Certainly the Great Books belong in the home of every thinking person. What do they cost? About the price of a good set of luggage.



To learn more, just fill out and mail this card. You will receive a full-color, 16-page booklet describing the Great Books in detail.

Mail Halted Across U.S.

Nixon May Use Troops

Times News Services

WASHINGTON—The first postal strike in U.S. history spread coast to coast today amid spiralling escalations which are expected to result in President Nixon ordering the army to deliver the mail Monday morning.

Letter carriers in a dozen districts as far away as Los Angeles walked out after midnight in a chain reaction of illegal strikes touched off by the first work stoppage in New York city on Thursday.

While the wildcat walkouts spread, New York postal union leaders went to their membership this morning to outline a back-to-work agreement they hastily put together Friday with federal government officials but were shouted down at a raucous meeting of 6,000 postmen who re-affirmed their decision to strike.

Minutes later, at a press conference here, President Nixon warned he would not negotiate with illegal strikers and hinted he would call in the army.

NIXON HINTS FREEZE ON JET SALE TO ISRAEL

WASHINGTON — President Nixon hinted today he has decided not to sell Israel 50 more Phantom jet fighters—at the moment.

The official announcement will be made Monday by Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

The president carefully left his options open, however, noting that further sales might be made to Israel if Russia increases arms sales to the Arab nations. The U.S. decision would not halt the delivery of the remaining Phantom jets purchased in 1968 and delivered at a rate of four per month.

Teen-Age Girl Dies in Crash

An 18-year-old girl riding in the back of a camper truck died early this morning shortly after the vehicle hit a telephone pole on Rockland Avenue near St. Charles Street.

Barbara Thomas, 18, of 108-2065 Oak Bay Avenue, died in Royal Jubilee Hospital at 2 a.m., 15 minutes after the crash.

She is the third traffic fatality in the city this week, and the 12th in the area this year.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thomas, live at Cherry Creek, near Port Alberni.

Stephen Oare, 20, of 1530 Bank Street, also riding in the back of the camper suffered back injuries and is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

City police said driver of the truck was Stuart Alan Bridgeman, 20, of 3880 Cedar Hill Road.

He was not injured.

Police said three other persons were riding in the cab of the truck and escaped injury.

The force of the impact broke the pole in three pieces and lifed the camper off the truck. It came to rest 133 feet from the pole, a splintered wreck. The camper was going east on Rockland.

Wreckage was spread 170 feet from the point of impact on Rockland.

An inquest will be held 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Sands Mortuary Ltd., coroner Edmond de St. Jorre said.

Bike-In Attacks Autos

It looked as if someone had deliberately taken the bicycles off Douglas St. sidewalks this morning and thrown them into the street.

But a closer look showed each bike occupied a parking space, and money had been placed in the meters.

Some of the bikes had balloons attached and some had signs like: "Why Pollute? Ride a Bicycle," or "Make Love, Not Suds."

The bikes were "parked" along Douglas between Fort and Johnson. Each time a shopper returned to his or her car and drove away, a youth was waiting to flop his bike down in the vacated space.

UVIC STUDENTS

By 11 a.m. there were about 20 bikes in position. Organizers of the demonstration Ed Alexander and Bob Jeffs, both Uvic students, were worried they wouldn't get enough machines to fill up all the parking spaces.

Participants were students from local secondary schools, particularly from Oak Bay Senior Secondary's SFERE club.

"We felt the automobile is the best thing we could attack," said Alexander.

"It's mostly to educate people on the lines open to them to fight pollution," he added, referring to information on automobile exhaust, pesticides, phosphates and oil drilling.

Smokestack Syndrome Hurting City—Report

By AB KENT

Support for industrial development in Victoria suffers from the "smokestack syndrome," a new economic report suggests.

Drawn up by a committe of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, the study lists alternative means of improving the existing method of attracting new industry, or of setting up an industrial, or economic development commission that would attempt to persuade a broad range of acceptable business to establish here.

"In the political context," the report said, "there is little support for the establishment of an industrial development board largely because of the smokestack syndrome. However, environmental quality is not incompatible with industrial growth if the latter is properly planned."

AVOID TITLE

But it would be advisable to avoid the title "industrial development," the study said.

It notes Victoria is well advanced in a national trend away from goods producing toward service producing enterprises, with a main advantage being relative immunity from the effects of the business cycle.

A main disadvantage is the limited local capacity to absorb the available labor force, the study said.

Among the general objectives desired are protection of the environmental qualities and unique regional characteristics; balancing payoff for promoting manufacturing against tourist advertising in developing priorities within broad economic activities; specialization; attraction of branches of large, established firms; a properly researched information system.

Estimated cost of setting up the system would be $50,000 a year, to cover the cost of a coordinator and office staff, which should be on a regional basis, the study recommends.

Experience elsewhere has shown that results are not immediate and the average time lapse in the U.S. is three years before a new business is set up.

Competition is strong, too, there being more than 10,000 industrial development boards in North America.

The system at present is for city hall to subsidize industrial development work by making available to the chamber manager $2,500 a year used mainly to answer inquiries. Improvements could include better liaison with the city planning department, preparation of a brochure with maps, and co-ordination of all groups with an interest in regional economic development.

ALTERNATIVE

Alternatively, the chamber could have a single committee called the economic development committee, charged with the whole range of activities, including tourist and convention promotion, commercial and industrial attraction.

Subcommittees could handle individual tasks, the study said.

Or, the chamber could ask the Capital Region District to undertake industrial development functions, which the report said would be appropriate if public money was to be spent.

Some interesting points of background brought out by the study include the fact that Victoria's average age is probably lower than assumed.

UNDER-24 GROUP

The under-24 group compirses 42.2 per cent of the whole population, compared with 46 per cent in B.C., and those 65 or older make up 15.1 per cent, against 9.6 per cent in the province.

Existence of a university and vocational school assure an adequate, qualified labor force; market restrictions will continue to diminish as transport costs go down between Vancouver Island and the mainland; the main anchors of employment continue to be service and government, accounting for 50 per cent of regional jobs, with trade and manufacturing making up 27 per cent.

Oil Industry Not Exempt In Foreign Ownership Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Greene said Friday he could not give assurance that any new legislation governing foreign ownership would exempt the oil industry, bulk of which is American-controlled.

Oil-country MP Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) sought the assurance in the commons while Greene fielded questions about the government decision to limit foreign ownership in the Canadian uranium industry.

Green replied that he is "not able to give the assurance" because the government is reviewing the whole question of foreign ownership.

"I am quite certain that when the decision is made, it will be announced as promptly as possible in order that the industry and the entrepeneurs and investors may know the government's policy in this regard," he added.

NO DECISION MADE

Earlier, Greene told Max Saltsman (NDP — Waterloo) no decision has been made on the question of applying the uranium regulations to other energy industries such as coal and oil.

Greene added in this context that Prime Minister Trudeau has made it clear the government is working actively on an over-all policy decision regarding foreign ownership of industrial and resource assets.

The series of questions were sparked by the government's day-before decision to restrict foreign ownership in Canadian uranium mines to 33 per cent to ensure they do not fall into foreign hands.

Greene's non-commital replies on what the government has in mind for other energy resource industries touched off speculation the government may apply control rules to them as well.

However, there was nothing in Greene's remarks to indicate that the government was planning such a precise step.

MAN IS THE PREY

Tiger on the growl

How is man doing in the endless battle for survival on our planet? That is the theme of a new five-part series by James Clarke, beginning on Page 8 today. It will continue on succeeding Saturdays.

This series, especially adapted from Clarke's new book, Man Is the Prey, steps straight into a nightmare world where man is a meal, or a threat or irritation to be crushed or brushed aside.

Some of the nightmare is just that: imaginary horrors conjured up by urban man's own fancy in his divorce from the real world of nature.

Into this nightmare world man must venture, and immediately, if he is to survive.

For man must have the food now denied him in the land virtually occupied by disease-carrying insects — an occupying army he can scarcely see which infests millions of square miles of potentially good agricultural land.

He must learn to farm the seas—two-thirds of his planet—whose dangerous inhabitants are still virtually incomprehensible to him.

In his researches for this book, Clarke travelled many thousands of miles about the world, from Northern Europe to the Pacific, beginning with Central Africa.

A POLICEMAN'S LOT is not entirely an unhappy one as Saanich Constable Bob Pringle can attest. To him fell the pleasant task of pinning orchid corsage on Judy Hooker after she was chosen Queen at Saanich Police Organization of Teens dance Friday night. Elizabeth Andrews and Wendy Dinsdale were selected princesses at SPOT Teen Queen affair at Reynolds school. (Robin Clarke Photo)

"On Monday I will meet my constitutional obligation to see that the mails go through," he said, if the strikers persisted.

He would not elaborate except to note the administration had "the means to deliver the mail and we will use those means."

But by press time the wildcat strikers were still defying back-to-work urgings and the walkouts in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois Wisconsin, Minnesota, Texas Colorado and California threatened to spread to the entire 700,000-man U.S. postal service.

Nixon said the postal workers in many areas have legitimate grievances and "we are prepared to negotiate those.

ILLEGAL STRIKE

"But under no circumstances will discussions be held with government employees when they are out on illegal strike."

The postal workers maintain they will not go back to work until Nixon promises them higher pay in a long simmering and bitter dispute that has seen the mailmen promised pay increases that were later postponed.

Nixon said he wanted to give responsible union leadership a chance to work out a settlement and that — despite Friday's failure — he still believed there was a chance for such talks.

Boisterous New York union members waved signs characterizing national union leaders who reached a shaky back-to-work agreement with the department of labor Friday as "rats" and "creeps".

Local president Gustave J. Johnson, said: "We have been led down the street of broken dreams for 18 months. There is only one person who can solve this — President Nixon."

Chicago Postmaster Henrv McGee said he may have to order an embargo on mail coming into Chicago Monday. This would be a near-mortal blow to the U.S. postal system which already has had to embargo New Jersey, Connecticut, Major portions of New York, Michigan and Wisconsin, and Philadelphia, St. Paul, Minn., and Akron, Ohio.

FIRST CLASS

Even if the strike ended immediately, embargoes could be lifted only on first class mail and air mail, according to New York Postmaster John Strachan. It would take three or four days to lift embargoes on other types of mail and maybe a week or 10 days to resume normal service, he said.

Only Congress can vote the postal workers a wage increase. Legislation to do so has been bogged down for six months and is now tied to President Nixon's controversial proposal for postal reform.

At present, mail carriers earn $8,442 a year after 21 years of service and they are demanding a 39 per cent increase with a top salary in effect after five years. The House of Representatives is considering legislation which would give them a 5.4 per cent increase retroactive to Jan. 1.

Mundy on Top In Toastmasters Competition

Keith Mundy of Beaver Toastmasters Club 790 won the Golden Gavel Friday in the 25th annual competition sponsored by the Toastmasters Club.

His topic was The Sea Is Not Full.

In second place was Mrs. Dorothy Sanders of the Capital City Speakers Club who spoke on The Most Important Thing In Life.

Third was Francis Littlechief of the Indian Education Club who spoke on Give Them Something to Follow.

Prizes were awarded by David Brown, district governor of B.C. The competition is open to persons over 18 with no more than three months training as speakers.

Nuyen Anymore, Bob?

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — Film star Robert Culp, 39, was ordered Friday in a closed court session to pay $1,400 monthly support to his French-Chinese wife, actress France Nuyen, 30, pending settlement of their divorce suit. The couple was married in 1967, and Culp launched divorce proceedings on his second wedding anniversary.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

It was mainly cloudy throughout B.C. this morning with some rain or wet snow in central areas.

A Pacific weather system brought rain to the north coast this morning. It will weaken as it moves inland and give only occasional rain or wet snow across the Interior. This will be followed by a more active weather disturbance Sunday. There will be a few sunny periods Sunday. Afternoon temperatures will remain mild.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Stories of the "abos" of Australia and their way of living have always fascinated me. They live a hard life that seems to defy all measurements of comfort, because they don't have any comfort. Yet they remain among the healthiest people in the world and they are intelligent in their way.

The aborigine sometimes can't get enough food to burn in his body to produce heat and energy in relatively great quantities. So when he is hungry and cold, he simply allows the skin of his body, and his arms and legs, to get cold. He can gain a state of sufficient comfort and save his woefully small supply of food if he remains sedentary in such a state of cold skin and cold hands and feet. We civilized people couldn't stand such submission to climate unless we adapted back to a primitive state.

When I think of the aborigines of Australia's outback I recollect the story of what one "abo" said in pidgin English when he saw and heard his first piano: "Him big fella bockus (box) you hit him teeth he cry." Not so dumb, is it?

Bloc Voting by Labor Unions Debated for NDP Conventions

By BRUCE YEMEN

A major struggle to control the future direction of the New Democratic Party in B.C. is looming over a radical proposal to amend the method by which its leader is elected.

A party committee studying the constitution of the provincial party has recommended putting a large bloc vote into the hands of affiliated labor unions.

Under the proposal, to be debated at the party's annual convention at Chilliwack June 4, 5 and 6, the leader of the party would be selected by a mailed-ballot referendum of all party members.

But affiliated unions would be given bloc votes in the number of 25 times the convention delegates to which they would normally be eligible.

BLOC VOTES

It is understood the system would give unions 2,800 bloc votes out of 14,000 eligible to vote for the leadership.

This represents a substantial increase in amount and type of union voting strength which currently stands at 112 individual votes out of 800 eligible at the June convention at which Opposition Leader Dave Barrett is expected to win the party leadership, perhaps unopposed, under the existing delegate-vote system.

The effect of the new system would be to frustrate in large measure the current trend within the legislative wing of the party to loosen official labor ties to enable the party to represent a wider cross-section of "working people" than at present.

It could also make it impossible for Barrett to continue as leader unless he shows more inclination than he has to date to work closely with official labor.

REASSESSMENT

A "reassessment" of the party's labor ties has been officially under way since the 1969 election in which Tom Berger lost his legislative seat and subsequently resigned the party's leadership.

Barrett the House Leader, is closely identified with the reassessment. He lost the party leadership to Berger by only 36 votes in April, 1969. Berger, a labor lawyer, was heavily labor-backed. Barrett is a social worker.

The placing of bloc-votes into the hands of unions, not unlike that which occurs in the British Labor Party, could be a club over Barrett's head and over the entire legislative wing of the party.

One party source likened the NDP—labor relationship in the past to a situation in which the party and working men were separated by a wall on which sat labor leaders who interpreted each side to the other.

POOR JOB

The party's record at the polls has suggested to some that the "interpreters" haven't been doing a very good job of explaining to the party what are the real needs and wishes of working people.

The Social Credit government's election record suggests on the other hand, that it has done a pretty good job of tuning in to working people, at least for election purposes.

The proposed bloc-vote system would strenghten the role of labor leaders as "interpreters" within the party and enable both Liberals and Socreds to continue attacking the NDP as a voice of organized labor.

When Barrett took over as House Leader of the party, there were rumors of deep divisions within the 12-member legislative caucus.

NO SIGNS

But no real signs of these divisions have emerged and in recent weeks support for Barrett for the leadership has been expressed by two MLAs once regarded as possible contenders in June — Bob Williams and Alex Macdonald.

In addition, former leader Robert Strachan has declared his support for Barrett who has appeared to gain confidence steadily in the House, keeping himself under tight control while running the fairly relaxed "sharp" that is always possible immediately after an election and two or three years before the next one.

Macdonald, who resigned as deputy leader this year in order to speak more freely on issues concerning the party's position, has made clear both within and outside the legislature that he wants the party to loosen its labor ties to take a more detached view of society and its problems.

While there has been no single government bill comparable to labor legislation which touched off violent debates in past years, the party was clearly moderated its contributions to debates in matters affecting labor, while still making clear where its sympathy lies.

It is known that within some elements of the party there is growing conern about the direction taken by the legislative wing.

One theory is that the draft constitution containing the new leadership voting proposal will be an opportunity for the moderate party elements to attack the labor elements for "going too far" in a desperate effort to maintain strength.

This could precipitate a battle for power much sooner than it might otherwise have occurred — and in a much more public manner.

Barrett is probably not yet in a strong enough position as leader to stake his future within the party on a "loosen-labor-strings" policy but his acknowledged political acumen might enable him to bring it off successfully in time to take a "new-look" party to the polls next time around.

If he fails, however, the party could be seriously damaged by the battle for many years to come.

But if his success at loosening the ties means a weakening of the party's financial base through official labor support without adequate replacement of that support through wide individual worker and "middle-class" contributions, the party might still be in a weekened condition to fight an election.

The constitutional amendment might be defeated at the June convention without changing the current and traditionally ambiguous position of official labor in the party, of course, and the quiet infighting would continue between those who want to shift the party away from labor and those who oppose the move.

Active Sportsman Dies at 68

Funeral services will be held Tuesday for John Reid Clark, a well-known Victoria sportsman, who died Thursday at 68.

Born in Edinburgh, Clark came to Calgary in 1910 and moved to Victoria in 1920 where he became a founding partner in the feed firm of Clark and Cordick.

An active sportsman, he was past president of the Gorge Vale Golf Club and was instrumental in acquiring the club land from the Hudson's Bay Company. Involved in many sports throughout his life, he was a well-known competitor in track and field, tennis and soccer in his youth.

DOG FANCIER

His English setters were shown in dog shows and field trials in which he took a keen interest.

Clark leaves his wife Flora at home, 2646 Ascomb Place; a daughter, Mrs. Gordon (Beverly) Lough, North Bay, Ont., and a step-daughter, Mrs. Keith (Ann) Fitch of San Francisco. He is survived also by two sisters, Mrs. Stan (Jessie) Carr, of Tete Jaune Cache and Mrs. Martin (Betty) Powers of McBride, B.C.; a brother, Tom in Calgary and five grandchildren.

Services will be held Tuesday at 3 p.m. in McCall's Chapel.

James Baird Steps Up to Deputy Minister

James Baird, assistant deputy minister of municipal affairs, will take over the deputy minister's job April 1, succeding J. Everett Brown who will continue as chairman of the B.C. Housing Management Commission.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Brown, who has reached retirement age, will have responsibility for all housing, urban renewal and land assembly with duties combined which were previsouly shared between the commission and the department.

A cabinet order passed Friday made the appointment official.

$3,000 Damage In Duplex Fire

A cigarette falling from an ashtray into a wicker basket containing a wax rag is believed to have caused a fire in a duplex at 417 Government Street at noon Friday.

Damage was estimated at $3,000.

Jack W. Allan, the owner, attempted to put out the fire with a garden hose, but was driven back by the flames.

The bathroom was burned out and the rest of the residence received smoke damage, firemen said.

Beltone HEARING AID USERS Testify

Dear Mr. Hahn:

My husband and I greatly appreciate your extreme kindness in giving me—free of charge—a more powerful aid for my left ear which, after using your hearing glasses for five months, showed an alarming deterioration.

We were touched by your concern for what had happened to my ear and you proved your sincerity and generosity in supplying me with a more powerful aid at no further cost.

An eminent ear specialist confirmed your report and I am now under his care for a physical impairment.

Meanwhile, there is a big improvement in my hearing since I received the stronger aid for my left ear (previously, as you are aware, this had been my best ear). I am almost stone-deaf without my hearing glasses and I can't thank you enough for your great patience and consideration. I must be one of your more difficult customers.

I am convinced that I could not possibly get better care anywhere than at Beltone where—in the words of your representative Mr. Clark—"Service is our Business." He is quite right, as time has proved over and over. We—your customers—can call in at Beltone anytime and be sure of a sympathetic ear for our problems.

It is a pleasure to do business with you, sir, and we sincerely trust that—as your thoughtful services become more widely known—the Victoria Branch of Beltone will expand as it deserves to do.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) MRS. JOSEPH SMITH,
1176 Greenwood Avenue,
Victoria, B.C.

Why don't you entrust your hearing problems with Beltone? You will be glad you did.

'Protect Against U.S. Domination'

BRUSSELS (WP) — In its initial attempt to define a common industrial policy, the European executive commission Friday urged the six Common Market nations to protect their growth industries against United States domination and encourage trans-national mergers in Europe.

In a 400-page document, the commission says that a coherent industrial policy is indispensable to ensure economic unity in western Europe and technoligical independence from the major world powers.

Development of vital sectors of industry has been far from satisfactory, the commission says, in large measure due to the practice of reserving public contracts to firms in the same country, this depriving key industries like aviation, nuclear power and computers of the advantages offered by a large market.

Although the commission does not go so far as to propose a "buy European" act and goes out of its way not to upset the United States, it says that firms from non-member nations should only be considered eligible for public contracts in the EED on the basis of complete reciprocity, which is not the case at present — an apparent reference to the "buy American act."

Capacity Unlimited

VANCOUVER (CP) — The nearly-completed container terminal here "can be developed into a container-handling complex of almost unlimited capacity," a Canadian National Railways vice-president said Friday.

E. J. Cooke, chief of CN's express and highway services in Montreal, said the company's container development group has been working closely with the National Harbors Board and Empire Stevedoring Co., operators of the terminal, "to ensure that terminal planning for the initial stages of development would not inhibit orderly expansion to meet future requirements."

"In its present form with one ship crane, the terminal will have a capacity of 1,200 containers per week, more than enough to take care of the short-term forecast," Cooke told a seminar on containerization sponsored by the Canadian Transportation Research Forum.

He said "this figure can be doubled simple by installation of additional container handling equipment."

Aquitaine

Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd. and Banff Oil Ltd. are planning merger that would see consolidation of the joint explorations they have undertaken for the past six years.

It is proposed that Aquitaine give 52 of its shares for every 100 shares of Banff Oil, subject to regulatory and shareholder approval.

Tight Money Continues to Plague Markets

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets drifted lower in dull trading this week.

Markets lost ground in four out of five sessions, holding steady Wednesday.

Observers said that last week's federal government budget speech added to the tight-money pressures that have been plaguing Canadian investors.

The budget called for curbs on consumer credit and for an extension of deferral of capital cost allowances on commercial construction in urban centres of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Bank, trust and loan, merchandising and manufacturing issues were weak, apparently in response to the budget speech. Construction and automobile stocks were steady.

CREDIT TIGHTENED

Observers said that while losses in these groups were not that great, the fact that the government leaned toward tighter credit was an indication that its controls on the economy could continue for some time.

The government's tight-money policy which was put into effect last June has acted as the main market depressant since then.

Even what could be considered positive news from the United States, where markets have been under similar pressure, could not coax markets to gain this week.

On Tuesday, President Nixon ended a freeze on $1,500,000,000 in federal and state funds for schools, hospitals, roads and other public services.

Paul McCracken, chairman of the U.S. Council of Economic Advisers, said the release of funds signalled a change in U.S. fiscal policy.

On Wednesday, Arthur F. Burns, U.S. Federal Reserve Board chairman, hinted that the end of the tight credit policy in the U.S. was in sight.

Any letup in U.S. economic controls would probably touch off similar easing in Canadian controls.

But this week, investors chose to ignore the news, probably looking back at recent weeks when similar reports were not followed by action.

Statistically, on the index at the Toronto Stock Exchange, industrials were down 2.62 to 181.57, golds 3.71 to 162.95, western oils 1.98 to 184.45 and base metals 1.11 to 113.25.

Volume was 7,981,000 shares compared with 9,769,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 529 to 212 with 259 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was off 1.97 to 178.60. Combined volume was 4,965,000 shares compared with 4,927,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 240 to 110 with 111 issues unchanged.

Legal Actions Follow Takeover

TORONTO (CP) — Seaway Multi-Corp. Ltd. and Levy Industries Ltd., both of Toronto, have launched legal actions against the Levy family in connection with the takeover of Levy Industries by Seaway early in 1969.

In a letter to shareholders, Norton Cooper, president of Seaway and chairman of Levy, said Friday a writ issued on behalf of Seaway asks for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation.

We're expanding in VICTORIA
We need ambitious men

For the next twenty or thirty years of your life, your job will take more of your time than anything else you do.

What kind of work do you want?
Work that makes demands on your intelligence, your imagination, your enterprise?
Work that is varied and interesting, that involves dealing with people and ideas rather than things?
Work that promised far above average money and satisfaction?

What kind of company do you want to work for?
A company in which you can set your own financial pace and move ahead as fast as your ability and efforts take you?
A company with progressive personnel policies and substantial employee benefits?
A company that gives you an intensive seven month training program including three months with our New York affiliate, Merrill Lynch?
A company with worldwide research facilities?
A growing company in a growing business, the most fascinating business in the world: the securities business?
If all your answers are YES, if you are interested in a sales career as an account executive at Royal Securities, we would like to hear from you.
Phone or send your résumé to Roger J. Davis, telling about yourself, your education, and your business experience. All replies will be held in confidence, of course.

HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATOR
VANCOUVER, B.C.

A new Rehabilitation Convalescent Hospital and Residence is being planned by the Workmen's Compensation Board of British Columbia.

The Board requires a competent and experienced Hospital Administrator to assume the challenging responsibilities of this new position. The Hospital Administrator will report to the Executive Director of the Board, and will be responsible for planning, organizing, directing and controlling all activities of the Hospital and Residence (except medical activities) in liaison with senior Board officials.

This is an unusual opportunity for an Administrator to be involved in the initial planning and operation of this new facility.

The successful candidate will have a recognized degree in Hospital Administration and an employment history that demonstrates broad knowledge and experience in hospital organization and administration, leadership ability, and well developed human relations skills.

The starting salary is likely to be $15,000 per annum, depending on qualifications and experience.

Please send your background details, including present salary, to Mr. Godfrey Chowne.

An Ecstatic Nose Rub Between Jennifer Hooper of Nanaimo and Brother Gregory . . . . . . And Something Growing Between John Predy and Suzanne Davis

It's Tulips, It's a Season, It's Rebirth, It's Spring

By JACK SCOTT

The gardener, the scientist and the poet strolled the warm paths of Beacon Hill Park as spring came officially to Victoria at 4:57 p.m. Friday. They saw the ageless miracle in their various ways.

For the gardener — 43-year-old Al Smith, horticulturist for the city's park department, a man who's known every flowering thing in those 154 acres for better than 20 years — the moment of arrival was intuitively measured in the silent, massive detonation of thrusting buds and bursting blooms.

He bent to the fragile buttercup flower of a winter aconite, traditional herald of the season. "Two to three weeks ahead of its time "he said, "but, then, everything is ahead this year."

For the scientist—Allan F. McQuarrie, 57-year-old chief of the Victoria weather office — it was a moment to contemplate the grand cosmic sweep of the seasons.

"Now, if we were on the equator, the sun would appear to be directly overhead," he reflected. "It has reached that first point in the sign of Aries, the moment of the vernal equinox. The night and the day have become alike in length. Tomorrow the day will be longer — by precisely two minutes at sunrise, two minutes at sunset. In terms of climate, of course, this spring is fully a month early. It is one of the early springs in Victoria's history. But this is the way it is, you see, with the seasons. Generally the same, always different."

For the poet — Doris Ferne, convener of the Island poetry group of the Canadian Authors Association, a tall, handsome woman in a light tweed coat that was warm for the day — it was a time to think of a renewal of the human spirit and the recurring promise of resurrection.

By a bed where the plastic green shoots of tulips were spearing through a carpet of pink forget-me-nots she remembered lines by Leo Kennedy: "Each pale Christ stirring underground splits the brown casket of its root, Wherefrom the rousing soil upthrusts a narrow, pointed shoot . . ."

There was something more tthan a professional's appraisal in the scrutiny of the gardener as he walked by the park's Goodacre Lake.

"We do it all to an exact schedule year after year, a carefully planned cycle of plants and flowers and trees to keep color in the park all the year. "Al Smith said, "but every spring, just the same, you get a thrill when it happens all over again."

Within his view, a giant, graceful weeping willow cascaded its first bright leaves in a green shower over the still pond. The pale, blush pink, week-old bloom of the daybreak Cherry trees had reached their moment of glory, replacing the fast-fading color of the flowering plums. Narcissus and daffodils a month in bloom — "Golden trumpets of spring," in the poetic fancy of Doris Ferne — stood in company with uninvited dandelions under an arbutus tree.

The hard, bright red petals of a flowering quince were brilliant against the delicate rose-pink of the Japanese cherry. Green-grey buds were swelling voluptuously on the gnarled branches of the Garry oak.

The weatherman was remembering an old English fable. "Spring has come," so it went, "when a maid can set her foot on seven daisies at once." He was remembering too, his years as a meteorologist in Calgary.

"You could call it instant spring there," Allan McQuarrie recollected. "What will take a month or more here on the coast may happen in a weekend on the prairies. Yesterday it was winter, tomorrow it is summer. That's the way it often is in Calgary. Here the effect of the sun's heat dispersed on the earth is more evident in moisture than in warmth. It's moisture that determines climate. Our winter and summer temperatures don't change all that much. We go from the mid-30s and mid-40s of the winter months to the 50s and the 60s of summer. But in precipitation we drop from an average of more than 12½ inches in winter to a summer average of less than 2½ inches."

At that precise cataclysmic moment of spring, in fact, the sun had broken through an overcast. The temperature was a full 55 degrees.

Everything was reacting the way it should. In Goodacre Lake the ducks, transient and park residents alike, were noisily choosing mates. Across the way in their enclosure the male birds of paradise were strutting, spreading their spectacular, painted fans before the hooded gase of dowdy hens. On a bench by the pond under the last foliage of a plum tree a long-haired couple in blue denim — boy and a girl, it turned out — were laminated in an embrace.

For the poet it was inspiration to scribble the lines of an haiku, the 17-syllable Japanese verse style:

Beneath the plum tree
two lovers see the blossoms
in each other's eyes.

It was a time, too, for Doris Ferne to remember the lyrics of a song written by her husband, Ernest, that seemed just right for the mood of a very special day.

Life is a dream my love,
If we would only see
This world of ours
As always early Spring

The flowers bloom for us,
The song-birds sing—
For in my heart I know,
For you and me my love,
Eternal Spring.

There was a bizarre kind of vernal romance going on in the view of the gardener, too.

Al Smith stood for a moment contemplating the flowering shrub called the skimmia. Here was the female plant, decorated with last year's bright globes of berries, the pale white blossoms just beginning to show. A few yards away stood the male plant. Now the bees and insects were making their busy pilgrimage of pollination. Already the bright red fruit, each bead weighted with four of five seeds, had begun to drop from the branches into the rich loam.

This springtime ritual of nature's rebirth, as immutable as the seasons, caused some longer, graver thoughts by weatherman McQuarrie as he passed that way.

"Nature remains remarkably constant," he mused, "but what man does to it is the imponderable factor. We know little of the lasting effects that pollution will have on our total environment, but there's chilling evidence that spring may not always be this welcome.

"Weather is nothing more, really, than the continual exchange of the cold air from the Arctic regions with the hot air over the equator. There is evidence that the layer of industrial smoke, cloud and pollutants creates what we know as 'the greenhouse' effect. It absorbs and holds the sun's radiation so that the earth is heated in a new balance of our making. The snow lines and timber lines are eding toward the Arctic. The mean temperature of the earth's surface rises and threatens to melt the Arctic ice caps.

"There are those who believe that one day the sea level will raise by 300 feet. There won't be any spring day in Beacon Hill Park if we let that happen."

The poet was having no such gloomy thoughts.

Earlier in the day Doris Ferne had written her own eloquent summation of what 4:57 p.m. Friday meant to her. Now, in the silent explosion of spring in the dark, she sread these lines:

March month
impels me to pilgrimage, wandering woodland
paths
to 'consider the lilies
how they grow'

Here in the forest they
bend immaculate heads,
ponder renewal, incredible
wonder of Spring,
affirming the ever-recurring glory of Resurrection.

VOTING TURNOUT LIGHT

Voter turnout was "very light" this morning in the Central Saanich aldermanic by-election.

Fred Durrand, municipal clerk, was hoping it would improve later in the day.

Polls in the election, called to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Ald. Philip Bunn, will remain open until 8 p.m. in the Municipal Hall and the Keating and Brentwood Elementary Schools.

Candidates are Ron Drayton, 6871 Woodward Drive, a painter; Patricia Grove, 2396 Barbara Place, a chemical analyst and Ken Stanlake, 2012 East Saanich Road, a cablevision operator.

'Money, Pain, Lives' Price of Politics

By DON VIPOND

The chief of staff at St. Joseph's Hospital said today political bickering over expansion plens is a scandal which is costing money, pain and perhaps lives.

Dr. Peter Banks aimed his sharpest barbs at Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis who Friday said he would recommend to the regional hospital board he heads that St. Joseph's building plans be temporarily shelved in the face of dispute over design with the provincial government.

"I think this is a frank scandal," Banks said, "that this man's petty political peccadolloes with (health minister) Mr. Loffmark should deny half the city's hospital facilities from expanding."

MEETING FAILS

St. Joseph's plans call for expansion on the nearby St. Ann's Academy site. The city is insisting it needs to extend Belleville Street through the over-all site. Loffmark has refused to approve splitting the expanded hospital by a road.

The regional hospital board has approved hospital facilities flanking the road extension but the latest in a series of meetings with the health minister Friday failed to resolve the stalemate.

Meanwhile, says Banks, there are about 40 patients taking up acute care beds at the hospital who should be in more economical accommodation and this is costing the taxpayers about $2,000 a day.

'CRIPPLED'

"Because these patients are blocking our beds we cannot utilize to the full all our expensive extra facilities . . . our operating rooms are inadequate and we are doing a large proportion of the major surgery in the city . . . our obstetrics department is crippled."

Is crowding at St. Joseph's costing lives?

"It's difficult to give exact statistics on that because question of life and death is involved, we just admit the patient, we admit them into the corridors.

"But what is happening is that if you have a gall bladder (problem) or a hernia . . . you can be a year and a half in discomfort because we can't get you into the hospital.

"This is morbidity, not mortality. But mortality is involved here because I myself have had cases that I've had to nurse out of hospital when it's frankly dangerous to do that . . ."

On the debate over whether Belleville should go through or around the hospital Banks said:

"We in the hospital have said time and time again that we'll live with the road either way but that we thought it was absurd for them to plan a hospital and at the same time plan a road going through it.

'AMPLE WAYS'

"When you look at this road question, there are ample ways around this hospital to avoid the traffic that they say in 7½ years might build up at the corner . . .

"Frankly, I think the problem at the corner can be solved with a traffic light. And that's not going to cost $2 million.

"What is happening here is that we are witnessing a fight between one group of politicians and Mr. Loffmark and I object when this happens over the bodies of our patients."

Arthur Mayse . . .

FOR A WHILE THIS week, Victoria reclaimed a third-generation native son and former Times carrier who has done his city proud in the academic world. He is Dr. David J. Lawless, dean of studies at St. John's College, Winnipeg.

Dr. Lawless has now returned to the land of ice and snow after taking part in the Conference of Western Deans, which wound up its sessions Friday at Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Behind him he left some thoughts worth pondering, as well as an impression that he is still an unreconstructed admirer of his old home town.

Victoria, very pretty in the springtime, kept intruding on our coffee-break conversation. However, we did touch on other subjects including the elderly college at which this 37-year-old psychologist holds a senior post.

St. John's, an affiliate of the University of Manitoba, has been conferring degrees since 1866. But it can reach back through Canadian history to years when it served the Red River Settlement as a school.

At this point, a two-masted yacht nicely dressed in white nylon framed itself in our seaward facing window. David Lawless watched it with intent eyes. As a boy here, he passed from Monterey Elementary to now-deceased St. Louis College. But in retrospect, he's convinced that he did most of his learning down around the Oak Bay shore.

The yacht winged on and out of sight. We agreed once more that Victoria is a matchless city.

I learned that this youngish dean is strongly in favor of such college systems as University of Victoria has introduced. The college, as opposed to the impersonal centralism of the multiversity, gives the student a sense of belonging and a point of identification.

What about the student himself? How does he differ from those who came before him?

Dr. Lawless considered those questions. He then offered as the chief difference a shifting of emphasis.

"We had to think about things," he said. "The student today wants to feel about things. It's a turning away from the hard, cool, rational thinking that produced pollution and the hydrogen bomb."

The result, as he observed it, was a veering from the "hard-nosed" sciences to the social sciences. He named sociology, anthropology, and, to my surprise, theology, as fields that have become popular.

"Not theology as we used to think of it," he explained, "but religion as a means by which man can relate better to his world. There's a keen interest in eastern religions which in some ways rely less on thinking than on feeling. This is to some extent inhibited in western religion. We tend to seek God intellectually rather than emotionally."

Dr. Lawless pointed to a similar trend in music. Youth's music isn't ordered, like Bach and Bethoven. It's disorganized . . . meant to be felt.

He does not advocate a complete reversal of attitudes. But he believes an adjustment of balance may be a good thing.

"Perhaps we've held the expression of emotion suspect for too long," he said, "and gone too far on the intellectual approach."

As for the student himself, Dr. Lawless finds him more knowledgeable than his predecessors, but less mature.

"The more complex the creature, the longer dependent on parents or some other source it is likely to be," he pointed out.

"If we accept the hypothesis that the human being is becoming more and more complex, the longer we can expect that period of dependence to become."

The teen-ager who breaks with his home depends on his peers, and must be like them in every way. This creates an ambivalence and leads to problems. The drug user is usually an extremely dependent person.

"If you were searching for a common factor among drug users," said Dr. Lawless, "it would be this dependency."

It was time for the visiting dean, whose six children were disappointed because he couldn't bring them along this time, to return to the conference. But first we talked some more about Victoria.

"You speak as if you're hooked on this city," I told him.

He admitted the charge with a loyal, "Wouldn't anyone be?
